TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE

IN the present English version of the Comedies of Aristophanes, the text adopted is that of Dindorf, as revised for the edition recently published by Didot, which it may here be observed is a great improvement on that contained in his Poetæ Scenici. The translator's aim has been to render the very words of Aristophanes into English as closely and exactly as the idioms of the two languages admit, and in illustrating his author the most approved commentators and versions have been diligently consulted. Any other mode of proceeding would have been inconsistent with the profession of a new and literal translation. Loose paraphrases of difficult Greek authors,—of which the world has more than enough already,—would be any thing but new, while an attempt to improve the author by substituting modern conceits, or fanciful interpretations, whenever the quaintness or freedom of the original appeared likely to offend the reader, would be inconsistent with his professed object. He has endeavoured to give what Aristophanes actually wrote, as far as could be accomplished in English words, excepting in passages of extreme indelicacy, which are necessarily paraphrased. The obscurity which sometimes arises in the English text from a strictly literal rendering, has been obviated by explanatory notes, and by extracts from English and German metrical versions, in which the thoughts are expanded and freely expressed. The metrical extracts are mostly taken from Frere, Walsh, Carey, and Wheelwright, and from the excellent German versions of Voss and Droysen. The latter of these has afforded most valuable assistance throughout. That of Voss has been less available, being so absolutely literal as often to be more difficult than the Greek itself. Droysen, on the contrary, being expressed in easy idiomatic language, may be understood by any one who can read German at all. In conclusion, it only remains to observe, that three of the plays now offered to the public, the Lysistrata, Thesmophoriazusæ, and Ecclesiazusæ, have never before appeared in English prose.

THE ARGUMENT

THIS Comedy takes its name from the natives of Acharnæ, who constitute the Chorus. In order of time, it is the first entire play which has come down to us. It was brought out in January, B. C. 425, Ol. lxxxviii. 4, at the Lenæan feast of Bacchus, in the sixth year of the Peloponnesian war. It obtained the first prize, the Χειμαζόμενοι of Cratinus the second, and the Νουμηνία of Eupolis the third. Musgrave and Scaliger, deceived by the corrupt reading, Εὐθυμίνους, in the argument, have ascribed it to B. C. 437, although the play itself, vs. 266, mentions the sixth year of the war, and quotes the Philoctetes of Euripides, vs. 424; and although the archonship of this Euthymenes is referred to as a distant date, vs. 67.—See Clinton's Fest. Hell. p. 69, second edition.

The plot is simply this:—Dicaëopolis, an Athenian citizen, but an Acharnian by birth, tired at the continuance and miseries of the war, determines, if he cannot persuade the Athenians to adopt his measures, to make a peace for himself and family. The Athenians, elated by success, and urged on by the factious demagogues of the day, refuse to hear of it. Dicaëopolis, therefore, despatches Amphitheüs to Sparta, on his own account. A private peace is concluded, and its happy results are enumerated with all the festivity and license conceded to the old Comedy. For the political importance of Acharnæ, see Thucydides, book ii. c. xix. xx; and for other particulars, Anacharsis' Travels, vol. iv. 314, &c., octavo edition. As tending to elucidate many passages, it may be observed, that Acharnæ abounded in charcoal works. This was the author's third play, the two preceding it, the Δαιτυλοί (B. C. 427, under the name of Philonicles), and Βαρυλόγωνοι (B. C. 426, at the Great Dionysia, under the name of Callistratus), not having come down to us entire.

THE ACHARNIANS.

DICÆOPOLIS (sotus).

How many things truly have I been vexed at in my heart; and with how few have I been pleased, how very few, some four! while the things I have suffered are countless. Come, let me see; at what was I pleased that was worthy of exultation? I know at what I was gladdened in my heart when I saw it,—at the five talents which Cleon disgorged. How I was transported at this, and for this deed I love the Knights, for it was worthy of Greece! But then again I suffered another woe, a tragic one; just when¹ I was gaping with expectation for Æschylus, the herald proclaimed, “Theognis,² introduce your Chorus.” You can’t think how this agitated my heart! But then again I was pleased, when at length Dexitheus entered, after Moschus,³ to sing a Boëotian strain. And this year I almost died, and stared my eyes askint at the sight, when Chæris strutted forward to chaunt the Orthian strain. But never at any time since I began to wash, have I been so tormented in my eyebrows by dust as now, when, the regular morning assembly being come, the Pnyx here is empty, while the members in the market-place gossip, and shift up and down to avoid the vermilion’d rope.⁴ Neither have the Prytanes arrived; and when they arrive too late, you can’t think⁵ how they will jostle each other for the first seat⁶ rushing down in a body. But how peace is to be made, they take no heed. O city, city! While I, always coming first to the assembly, take my seat; and there being alone, groan, gape, stretch and yawn,¹ break wind, puzzle, scribble, pluck my hairs, calculate, looking towards the country, anxious for peace, disgusted with the city, and longing for my own farm, which never at any time said, "Buy coals," or "vinegar," or "oil;" or knew the word "buy,"—but of itself produced all things, and the "buy" was absent. Now therefore I have come thoroughly prepared to bawl, interrupt, rail at the orators, if any one talk of any thing but peace. But see here come our Prytanes at noon! Did I not say so? Exactly as I said, every man of them is jostling for the first seat.

HERALD, AMPHITHEUS, DICÆOPOLIS, PRYTANES, AMBASSADORS.

HER. Advance to the front; advance, that ye may be within the purified² ground.

AMP. Has any one spoken yet?

HER. Who wishes to speak?

AMP. I.

HER. Who are you?

AMP. Amphitheus.

HER. Not a man?

AMP. No; but an immortal. For Amphitheus was son of Ceres and Triptolemus; and of him was born Celeus; and Celeus married my grandmother Phænarete, of whom was born Lucinus; and from him I, an immortal, am descended; and to me alone the gods intrusted to make peace with the Lacedæmonians. Yet, immortal as I am, sirs, I have no travelling allowance, for the Prytanes grant³ none.

HER. Ho, Tipstaffs!

AMP. Triptolemus and Celeus, will you allow me to be treated thus?

² See Liddell's Lex., voc. κάθαμα.

³ As was usual in Greece and Rome, as well as at the present day, vide Cic. in Pis. xiv. "Nonne sestertium centies et octogies, quod, quasi vasarium (Nostrates 'plate-money,') in venditione mei capitis adscripseras, ex ærario tibi attributum, Romæ in quæstu reliquisti."

DIC. Mr. Prytanes, you wrong the assembly in ordering the man to be led away,¹ who was wishing to make peace for us, and hang up our bucklers. [Amphitheus is ejected by force.]

HER. Sit down, and hold your tongue.

DIC. By Apollo, will I not, unless you bring forward a motion for peace.

HER. The ambassadors from the king.

DIC. What king?² I am weary of ambassadors, and their peacocks,³ and their quackeries. [Enter ambassadors gorgeously dressed out.]

HER. Silence!

DIC. Bah! Ecbatana, what a dress!

AMB. You sent us to the great king, with a salary of two drachmæ a day, in the archonship of Euthymenes.⁴

DIC. Ah me! the drachmæ!

AMB. And in truth we were worn out with wandering about in tents along the plain of the Cayster, being half killed with reclining luxuriously on our close carriages.

DIC. Why, did I get off well, who lay upon litter⁵ beside the battlements?

AMB. And being entertained with hospitality, we drank against our wills, from cups of glass and golden chalices, sweet unmixed wine.

DIC. O city of Cranaus! perceivest thou the mockery of the ambassadors?

AMB. For the Barbarians esteem those only men, who have the greatest power to eat and drink.

DIC. While we consider wenchers and debauchees as such.⁶

AMB. Howbeit, on the fourth year we arrived at the palace; but he had gone to ease himself, having taken an army; and for eight months he eased himself upon the golden mountains.

DIC. When did the effects of the medicine wear off?

AMB. At the full of the moon. and then he returned home

Then he entertained us, and served up to us whole oxen from the baking pot.

DIC. And who ever beheld baked oxen? What impostures!

AMB. And, by Jupiter, he served up to us a bird thrice the size of Cleonymus:¹ its name was Cheat.

DIC. For this reason then you 'cheated' us in taking two drachmæ.

AMB. And now we have brought with us Pseudartabas, the King's Eye.

DIC. Would that a crow would strike and knock thine out, ambassador.

HER. The King's Eye!

PSEUDARTABAS, THE KING'S EYE.

DIC. King Hercules! By the gods, man, do you look like a man of war, or, while doubling a promontory, are you looking out for a dry-dock? A rowlock-leather you have, I ween, about your eye below.

AMB. Come now, Pseudartabas, declare what the king sent you to say to the Athenians.

KING'S EYE. Iartaman exarx' anapissonai satra.²

AMB. Do you understand what he says?

DIC. By Apollo, not I.

AMB. He says the king will send you gold. Now say gold' louder, and distinctly.

KING'S EYE. Ou lepsi craso chaunoproct' iaonau.³

DIC. O wretched me! how distinctly!

³ "No gettey gold'ey, cha-latan Athénau." Walsh.

AMB. What, then, says he?

DIC. Ask what he says?—he says the Ionians are gaping fools, if they expect gold from the Barbarians.

AMB. Not so; he speaks of chaldrons¹ of gold.

DIC. What² chaldrons? Truly you are a great impostor. But go to; I will examine this man myself. Come now, tell me clearly, in the presence of this ambassador, lest I dip you in a Sardian³ dye; will the great king send us any gold? [Pseudartabas gives a nod of dissent.] Are we then heedlessly gulled by our ambassadors? [Pseudartabas gives a nod of assent.] These fellows nodded assent at least in Greek, and they are certainly from this very country: and of the two eunuchs, this here one I know, who he is—Clisthenes, the son of Sibyrtilus. O thou who hast a hot-tempered rump shaven,⁴ with such a beard as this, hast thou come to us dressed as a eunuch? But whoever is this? Surely it is not Straton?

HER. Silence: be seated. The senate invites the King's Eye to the Prytaneum. [Exeunt Pseudartabas and attendants.]

DIC. Is not this, pray, as bad as hanging? And then do I, forsooth, tarry here? while the door never⁵ restrains them from entertaining guests. I will do a dread and mighty deed. Where is Amphitheüs?

AMP. See, here he is. [Enter Amphitheüs.]

² Comp. vs. 62.

⁴ "This Clisthenes seems to have been in as bad odour as Cleonymus. The usual practice at this period was to clip the beard; Clisthenes and a few other young men were guilty of the abomination of shaving it with a razor. Hence he is continually sneered at as an effeminate, beardless youth, fit only to ply the shuttle amongst women. In the comedy of the Feastresses he makes his appearance on the stage as the close ally and confidant of the fair sex. Vss. 119, 120, are parodies, the first of Euripides, the second of Archilochus:

'Oh thou, that own'st a most hot-blooded heart!'

'With such a rump as this, thou ugly ape.'" Walsh. •

"How durst you, you baboon, with such a beard,
And your designing wicked rump close shaved,
To pass yourself upon us for a eunuch?" Frere.

⁵ It may be as well to remark, that οὐδέποτε is always used with a present or future; οὐδέπώποτε with a past tense.

DIC. For me alone, and for my children, and my wife, take these eight drachmæ, and make peace with the Lacedæmonians. But do you¹ send your embassies, and gape away. [Exit Amphitheus.]

HER. Let Theorus come forth, who has returned from Sitalces.

THEORUS.

THEOR. Here am I!

DIC. This is another impostor, who is summoned.

THEOR. We would not have been a long time in Thrace—

DIC. By Jove, you wouldn't, if you did not receive a long salary.

THEOR. Had not Zeus covered the whole of Thrace with snow and congealed the rivers, about the very time when Theognis² here was contending for the prize. During this time I was drinking with Sitalces. And, in truth, he was marvellously fond of the Athenians, and of you he was a sincere lover, so that he was even in the habit of writing on the walls³ "Pretty Athenians." And his son,⁴ whom we had made an Athenian citizen, was desirous of eating Apaturian⁵ sausages, and entreated his father to aid his country. And he swore with a libation, that he would lend his assistance, with so great a host, that the Athenians should exclaim, "What a swarm of locusts⁶ approaches!"

² The poet's own words in the Thesmoph. v. 170, are the best comment,— ὁ δ' αὖ θεογνίς ψυχρὸς ὦν ψυχρῶς ποιῇ.

"'Twas singular this change of weather happened
Just when Theognis here, our frosty poet, Brought out his tragedy." Frora.

⁴ The son's name was Sadocus. Vide Thucyd. lib. ii. 29, 67, 95, 101; iv. 101.

⁶ Vide Aves, 185, 588. Vesp. 1311. For the ravages committed by the locusts, see Kirby and Spence, vol. i. p. 212, letter vii.

DIC. May I die the worst of deaths, if I believe one jot of this, which you have said here, except the locusts.

THEOR. And now he has sent you the most warlike tribe of the Thracians.

DIC. This is now evident.

THEOR. Come hither, you Thracians, whom Theorus brought.

THRACIAN ODOMANTI.

DIC. What plague have we here?

THEOR. A band of the Odomanti.¹

DIC. What Odomanti?² Tell me, what means this? How came the Odomanti to resemble lewd Athenians?

THEOR. If one give them two drachmæ as their pay, they will overrun with light-armed troops the whole of Bœotia.

DIC. Two drachmæ to these lewd fellows! With reason might our topmost rowers groan, the safeguards of the state. [Thracians attack Dicæopolis and rob him.] Ah me, unhappy man, I am undone! being robbed of my garlic by the Odomanti. Will you not lay down my garlic?

THEOR. Wretched man! Don't approach³ these fellows when primed with garlic.

DIC. Do the Prytanes suffer me to be treated thus in my own country, and that too at the hands of Barbarians? I forbid you to hold an assembly⁴ for the Thracians on the subject of pay, and acquaint you that there is an omen from the sky,⁵ and that a drop of rain has struck me.

HER. The Thracians will retire, and present themselves the day after⁶ to-morrow; for the Prytanes⁷ dismiss the assembly. [Exeunt Theorus, Herald, &c.]

DIC. Ah me, unhappy man! what an olio have I lost! But here's Amphitheüs from Lacedæmon. Hail, Amphitheüs! [Enter Amphitheüs.]

AMP. Not yet, until I cease running; for I am obliged to escape from the Achærians by flight.

DIC. What's the matter?

AMP. I was hastening hitherward, bringing you a peace, but certain seniors of Achænae got scent of me, sturdy old fellows, tough as oak, inflexible, Marathon men, stout as maple. Then all of them lifted up their voices—"Abandoned villain! do you bring a peace, when our vines are cut?" And they set a gathering some stones into their cloaks. But I fled, while they pursued and bellowed.

DIC. Then let them bellow.¹ But bringest thou the afore-said peace?

AMP. Aye marry, here are three samples. These are for five years. Take and taste.

DIC. Bah!

AMP. What's the matter?

DIC. They please me not, because they smell of pitch and naval preparations.²

AMP. At least take and taste this, which is for ten years.

DIC. This too smells very sharply of embassies to our towns, as it were of delay amongst the allies.

AMP. Well, this is for thirty³ years, both by land and sea.

DIC. O Dionysia! These truly smell of ambrosia and nectar, and not to have in readiness provision for three⁴ lays; and they say openly, "Go where thou wilt." These I receive, I make libation with, and will drink up, bidding a long farewell to the Achærians. And I, freed from war and toils, will go within and celebrate the rural Dionysia.⁵ [Exit Dicæopolis.]

CHORUS.

CHO. Follow, each of you, this way, pursue, and inquire after the man from all the travellers; for 'tis worthy of our city to seize this fellow. But declare to me, if any one knows where in the world he that bears the peace has turned. He is fled away; he is vanished and gone. Alas my years, wretched man that I am! In the days of my youth, when, bearing a load of coals, I followed Phayllus in the race, this truce-bearer would not have so easily escaped, when pursued by me; neither would he have so nimbly slipped off. But now, since at length my shin is stiffened, and the legs of the aged Lacratides are wearied, he is gone. He must be pursued; for never let² him laugh at us, nor one who, by having escaped the Acharnians, old men as we are, made peace, O Jove and ye gods, with our foes, against whom, on account of my estates, hostile war is increased by me; and I will not give over until, like a rush, I stick right into them sharp, painful, up to the hilt, so that they may never again trample on my vines. We must seek for the fellow, and look towards Ballene,³ and pursue him from land to land,⁴ until at length he be found: for I could not be surfeited with pelting him with stones.

DICÆOPOLIS,⁵ HIS DAUGHTER, AND WIFE.

DIC. Use no ill-omened words: use no ill-omened words.

CHO. Silence, each of you. Did you hear, friends, the proclamation of silence? This is the very person whom we are seeking for. Hither, each of you; get out of his way; for the man, as it seems, is coming out to sacrifice.

DIC. Use no ill-omened words: use no ill-omened words.

⁵ The scene here represents Dicæopolis and his family in the country, celebrating the Dionysia.

Let the basket-bearer advance a little forward. Let Xanthias set up the Phallus erect.

WIFE. Do you, my daughter, put down the basket, that we may commence the rites.

DAUGH. Mother, reach here the soup-ladle, that I may pour some soup upon this pan-cake.

DIC. Well, now 'tis right, O sovereign Bacchus, that I, having led this procession agreeably to thee, and having sacrificed with my household, should celebrate the rural Dionysia happily, having been freed from military service; and that my peace for thirty years turn out well.

WIFE. Come, daughter, take care that, pretty as you are, you bear the basket prettily, with a verjuice face. How blest the man who shall wed you, and beget upon you pussies to—stink no less than you, as soon as it is dawn. Proceed, and in the crowd take especial care, that no one secretly nibbles off your golden ornaments.

DIC. O Xanthias,¹ you two must hold the Phallus erect behind the basket-bearer, and I following will sing the Phallic hymn; and do you, wife, look at me from the house-top. [Exeunt wife and daughter.] Proceed, O Phales, companion of Bacchus, fellow-reveller, roaming by night, friend of love and lechery: in the sixth year I address you, having come with delight to my township, having made for myself a peace, and being freed from troubles and battles and Lamachi.² For it is far sweeter, O Phales, Phales! having found a pretty wood-gatherer, Strymodorus' Thracian maid, purloining wood from Phelleus,³ to catch her by the waist and lift her up, and throw her down and roll her in the grass. O Phales, Phales! if with us you quaff your cups, in the morning, after your sick head-ache, you shall gulp down a bowl—of peace; and my shield shall be hung up amidst the sparks.

CUO. This is the very fellow, this: pelt, pelt, pelt, pelt; strike, strike the wretch, each of you; will you not pelt? will you not pelt? [Chorus pelts him.]

DIC. O Hercules ! what's this ? You'll smash my pitcher.

CHO. Nay, rather, we will stone you to death, rascally fellow.

DIC. For what cause, Acharnian seniors ?

CHO. Do you ask this ? You are shameless and abominable, O betrayer of your country, who, having made a peace without us,¹ canst look me in the face.

DIC. But ye do not know wherefore I made the peace—hear me.

CHO. Shall we hear you ? You shall perish ; we will overwhelm you with stones.

DIC. By no means, before you hear me ; come, have patience, good sirs.

CHO. I will not be patient ; nor do thou utter a word to me, for I hate thee still more than Cleon, whom I will² cut up into shoe-soles for the Knights. I'll not hearken to you uttering long speeches, who have made a peace with the Lacedæmonians ; but will punish you.

DIC. Good sirs, leave the Lacedæmonians out of the question ; and hear my peace, if I have rightly made it.

CHO. How can you any more talk of "rightly," if once you have made peace with those, with whom neither altar, nor pledge, nor oath³ holds good ?

DIC. I know that the Lacedæmonians, against whom we are excessively vehement, are not the causes of all our troubles.

CHO. Not of all, you villain ? Hast thou the audacity, pray, openly to say this to us ? Then shall I spare you ?

DIC. Not of all, not of all ; but I here, who address you, could prove abundantly that they have even been injured in some cases.

CHO. This expression is dreadful and heart-troubling, if you shall dare to speak to us in defence of our foes.

DIC. And if I speak not what is just, and am not approved of by the people, I shall be ready to speak with this neck of mine over a chopping-block.

CHO. Tell me, fellow-tribesmen, why spare we our stones, so as not to card⁴ this fellow into a scarlet rag ?

DIC. How again a black burning coal has blazed up within you! Will you not hear, will you not hear, pray,¹ O sons of the Acharnians?

CHO. Assuredly we will not hear you.

DIC. Then I shall suffer dreadful things.

CHO. May I utterly perish if I hear you.

DIC. By no means, O Acharnians.

CHO. Be assured now that you shall die.

DIC. Then I will sting you; for I will kill in turn the dearest of your friends, since I have hostages of you, whom I will take and butcher.² [Seizes a hamper of charcoal, and dresses it up like a baby.]

CHO. Tell me,³ fellow-tribesmen, what word is this, with which he threatens us Acharnians? Has he shut up within a child of any of those present? or at what is he emboldened?

DIC. Pelt, if ye will, for I will kill this one. I shall quickly know who of you cares at all for coals.

CHO. How we are undone! this coal-basket is my fellow tribesman. But do not do what you purpose; by no means, O by no means!

DIC. Be assured that I will kill him:⁴ cry on, for I will not hear you.

CHO. Will you then kill this my companion in age, the friend of colliers?

DIC. But you did not just now give ear to me when I spoke.

CHO. Well now, if it seems good to you, say that the Lacedæmonians themselves are dear to your mind; for never will I betray this little coal-basket.

DIC. First, then,⁵ empty your stones upon the ground.

CHO. See they're on the ground; and do you in turn lay down your sword.

DIC. But see that some stones are not lying in ambush somewhere in your cloaks.¹

CHO. They have been shook out on the ground. Don't you see it shaking? No excuses; lay down your weapon; since this is shaken with the whirl in the dance.

DIC. So then you were all of you going² to raise a war-cry, and the coals of Parnes all but met with their death, and that too on account of the unnatural conduct of their fellow-tribesmen; and under the influence of fear the coal-basket, like a cuttle-fish, squirted upon me abundant coal-dust. For it is a sad thing that the mind of men should be naturally harsh,³ so as to pelt and shout and be willing to hear nothing which offers half and half, while I am willing to say over a chopping-block all that I say in behalf of the Lacedæmonians; and yet I love my life.

CHO. Why then don't you bring out the chopping-block and state, you wretch, whatever is this weighty matter which you have in hand? for an earnest desire strongly possesses me to know what you have in your mind. But place here the chopping-block and begin to speak, as you yourself determined the punishment. [Exit Dicæopolis, and re-enter with a chopping-block.]

DIC. Lo, behold! here is the chopping-block, and the man who is to speak, see here! as small as this! Of⁴ a surety I'll not fit myself with a shield, by Jupiter, but will speak in behalf of the Lacedæmonians what seems good to me. And yet I greatly fear, for I know the humour of the rustics to be wondrous tickled, if any quack praise them and their city, right or wrong: and there unknowingly they are bought and sold.⁵ Of the elders again I know the mind, that they look to nothing else except vexing with their vote; and I know what I suffered myself at the hands of Cleon, on account of my last¹ year's comedy. For he dragged me into the senate-house, and calumniated me, and spoke lies against me, and roared like the torrent Cycloboros, and drenched me so that I almost perished altogether, getting into dirty quarrels. Now, therefore, in the first place permit me, ere I speak, to clothe myself like a most wretched man.

CHO. Why shuffle in this way, and deal subtilly, and contrive delays? Borrow, for all I care, from Hieronymus² some helmet of Pluto dark with rough thick hair, and then exhibit Sisyphus's wiles, since this trial will not admit of any excuse.³

DIC. Then 'tis time for me to take a bold heart, and I must repair to Euripides.—Slave, slave! [Knocks at the door.]

DIC. Thrice happy Euripides! when your servant interprets⁵ so wisely. Call him out.

DIC. Yet be wheeled out.

EUR. It is impossible.

DIC. Yet, however, do.

EUR. Well then, I will be wheeled out; but I have no leisure to descend. [Euripides is wheeled in.]

DIC. Euripides!

EUR. What sayest thou?

DIC. You make verses with your legs lying up, when you might with them down. No² wonder you make your characters lame. But why wear you the rags from tragedy, a piteous attire? No wonder you make your characters beggars. Come, I beseech you by your knees, Euripides, give me some little rag from your old drama,³ for I must speak a lengthy speech to the chorus; and if I speak it badly it brings me death.

EUR. What rags? those in which Æneus here, the wretched old man, contended? [Points to a suit of rags.]

DIC. They were not Æneus's, but a still more wretched man's.

EUR. The rags of the blind Phoenix?

DIC. Not Phoenix's, no; there was another more miserable than Phoenix.

EUR. What ! do you wish for the squalid garments which Bellerophon, this lame fellow, wore ?

DIC. Not Bellerophon ; yet he too, whom I mean, was lame, an importunate beggar, and the deuce at talking.

EUR. I know the man—Telephus of Mysia.

DIC. Aye, Telephus : give me, I entreat you, his swaddling-clothes.

EUR. Slave, give him the rags of Telephus : they lie above the Thyestean rags, between¹ those of Ino and his.

SERV. Well ! take them.

DIC. O Jupiter, that seest through² and beholdest all things on every side, grant me to dress myself like a most wretched man.³ [Puts on the old coat.] Euripides, since you have freely given me these, give me also those things which go with the rags—the little Mysian cap about my head. “For⁴ to-day ’tis needful that I seem to be a beggar ; to be indeed what I am, but not to appear so.” The spectators must know who I am ; but the chorus, on the other hand, must stand by like fools, that I may fillip them with quibbles.⁵

EUR. I will give it ; for you devise subtleties with a sagacious intellect.

DIC. Mayest thou be happy ! but to Telephus,⁶ what I wish him. Bravo ! How I am filled now with quibbles ! But still I want the beggar’s stick.

EUR. What need, unhappy man, possesses you for this wicker-work?

DIC. No need, but still I wish to take it.

EUR. Know that thou art troublesome, and begone from my house.

DIC. Alas! Mayest thou be happy, as once thy mother!

EUR. Now leave me.

DIC. Nay, grant me only one little cup whose rim is knocked off!

EUR. Take it, and be damned!¹ know that you are troublesome to the house.

DIC. By Jove, (aside,) you know not yet what ills you work yourself.—But, sweetest Euripides, give me only this, a little pipkin stopped up as to its chinks with sponge.

EUR. Fellow, you will rob me of my tragedy.² Take this and depart.

DIC. I am going: and yet what shall I do? for I need one thing, which, if I obtain not, I am undone. Hear, sweetest Euripides! If I obtain this, I will depart, and will not come any more. Give me some withered green-stuff for my little basket.

EUR. You will ruin me. Here they are. My dramas are vanished!

EUR. The fellow becomes insolent: shut the door.² [Exeunt Euripides and his slave.]

DIC. Heart of mine! we must proceed sans chervil. Do you know how great is the contest you will soon have to encounter, about to speak in behalf of the Lacedæmonians? Proceed then, my heart! there is the starting-place! Do you stand? Will you not go, after having imbibed Euripides?—I commend you. Come now, unhappy heart! go there, and then, there offer your head, and say what seems you good. Dare:—go: advance.³ Well done, heart! [Lays his head on the chopping-block.]

CHORUS.

CHO. What will you do? What will you say? Know now that you are a shameless and an iron-hearted man, who, having offered your neck to the state, alone are going to contradict them all. The man does not tremble at the cause. Come now, since you yourself make the choice, say on.

right: and my words will be severe, but just. For Cleon shall not now¹ calumniate me, that I slander the state in the presence of strangers; for we are by ourselves, and the contest is in the Lenæum;² and as yet strangers are not present; for neither is the tribute come in, nor the allies from the states. But now we are winnowed clean; for the sojourners I call the chaff of the citizens. I hate the Lacedæmonians exceedingly, and may Neptune, the god of Tænarus, with an earthquake,³ shake and throw down on all of them their houses; for my vines have been cut down as well as yours. But,—for those who are present at my speech are friends, why do we thus accuse the Lacedæmonians? For men of us,—I do not mean the state, bear this in mind, that I do not mean the state, but certain rascally fellows, base coin, unfranchised, and counterfeit, and alien-citizens, were in the habit of informing against the small cloaks of the Megarians:⁴ and if any where they were to see a cucumber, or a leveret, or a sucking-pig, or garlic, or salt in lumps,⁵ these were Megarian, and were confiscated the same day. And these, indeed, are trifles, and customary.⁶ But certain young men, drunk with playing at the cottabus, went to Megara and stole away the courtesan Simætha; and then the Megarians, excited by their griefs, stole away in return two harlots from Aspasia;⁷ and hence the beginning of the war broke out for all the Greeks from three strumpets. Then Pericles, the Olympian, in his ire, lightened, thundered, utterly confounded Greece, enacted laws, written like catches, “That the Megarians should neither remain in our territory, nor in our markets, nor on the sea, nor on the mainland."¹ Then the Megarians, when now they were gradually famishing, entreated the Lacedæmonians that the decree which had been made on account of the strumpets might be changed through their intervention; and we were not willing, though they often entreated us. And after this now there was a clatter of bucklers. Some one will observe, we ought not: but tell us what we ought to have done. Come, if some Lacedæmonian sailed out with his ship and informed against and sold a little Seriphian dog, would you have sat still at home? Far from it, certainly. Most assuredly you would have launched immediately three hundred vessels, and the city would have been full of the din of soldiery, of shouting about the election of a Trierarch, pay being issued, figure-heads getting gilded, piazzas groaning, provisions getting measured out, of wine-skins, of oar-leathers, of people buying jars, of garlic, olives, onions in nets, chaplets, sprats, flute-girls, and black eyes. And the dock-yard again had been filled with spars getting cut into oars, wooden pins sounding, bottom-oars getting furnished with thongs, boatswain's flutes, fifes, whistlings. I know that you would have done this, "and do we not imagine that Telephus² will do the like? Then there is no sense in us."

¹ “For Cleon shall not now asperse me, that, in strangers’ presence, I malign the state.” Wheelwright.

1 SEM. CHOR.³ What, really, you rogue and blackguard? Have you the audacity to say this of us, you beggar? And if any of us has been an informer, do you upbraid us with it?

2 SEM. CHOR. Yea, by Neptune, and he says too, what he does say, all justly; and about none of them does he tell lies.

2 SEM. CHOR. Hollo you! whither are you running? will you not stop? Since if you strike this man, you yourself shall quickly be raised aloft!¹

1 SEM. CHOR. Ho, Lamachus! thou who lookest lightning, help us, thou with the Gorgon crest, having appeared!—Ho, Lamachus! friend! fellow-tribesman! let every one assist with speed, if any there be a Taxiarch or engineer, for I am seized by the middle.

LAMACHUS.

LAM. Whence heard I the warrior cry? Whither must I render assistance? whither send in tumult? Who roused the Gorgon from my shield's cover?

DIC. (affecting to be terrified.) O hero Lamachus! what crests and cohorts!

CHOR. O Lamachus! has not this fellow for a long time been speaking evil of our whole city?

LAM. You there! do you, you beggar, dare say this?

DIC. O hero Lamachus! yet pardon me, if, a beggar, I have spoken, and babbled any thing.

LAM. What have you said of us? Will you not tell?

DIC. I don't know as yet, for I am dizzy in my head through fear of your arms. But, I entreat you, remove from me the bugbear.²

LAM. Very well! [Turns away the shield from him.]

DIC. Now place it for me upside down.³

LAM. There it lies. [Puts the shield upside down before him.]

DIC. Come now, give me the feather⁴ out of your helmet.

¹ A phrase from the Palæstra: see Walsh's note. Brunck's version (an adaptation of the language of Terence) has misled both Bothe and Blaydes:

LAM. Hollo you! what are you going to do? Are you about to cause a vomit with the feather?

DIC. Why, is it a feather? Tell me, what bird's? Is it a braggadocio's?¹

LAM. Woe for you, assuredly you shall² die. [A scuffle, in which Lamachus is foiled.]

DIC. By no means, Lamachus; for it is not a matter for such strength as yours. But if you are strong, why don't you give a proof of it? for you are well armed.

LAM. You say this of your general, you beggar?

DIC. Why, am I a beggar?

LAM. Then what are you?

DIC. Ask me who?—a good citizen, no stickler for office, but, since what time the war commenced, a son of Mars; while you, since what time the war commenced, a Mr. Place-man.

LAM. For they elected me.

DIC. Aye,³ three cuckoos. Therefore, being disgusted at this, I made peace, when I saw hoary-headed men in the ranks, but striplings, such as you,⁴ shirking the service;⁵ some in Thrace, with an allowance of three drachmæ, Tisameno-Phænippi;⁶ Panourg-Hipparchidæ; others with Chares; others among the Chaonians, Gereto-Theodori;

⁵ These gentlemen have a name to themselves in Ran. 1014.

⁶ These are fictitious comic appellations for individuals unknown

Diomei-Alazones; others at Camarina,¹ and at Gela, and at Catagela!²

LAM. For they were elected.

DIC. But what's the reason that you somehow or other always receive pay, while none of these present gets any? Prithee, Marilades, you with the grey head, have you ever been on an embassy? [touches his pocket.] See! he shakes his head; and yet he is temperate and hard-working. What, pray, says Dracyllus, or Euphorides, or Prinides? Has any among you knowledge of Ecbatana, or the Chaonians? They say no. But the son of Cæsyra³ and Lamachus know them; whom lately, on account of their shot and debts, like those who pour out their dirty wash-water of an evening, all their friends exhorted,⁴ "Get out of the way."

LAM. O democracy! Is this then to be endured?

DIC. Certainly not, unless Lamachus gets paid for it.

LAM. Well then, I will ever wage war with the Peloponnesians, and will harass them in every way, both with ships and land forces, to the best of my power.

DIC. I, on the other hand, give notice to all the Peloponnesians, and Megarians, and Boeotians, to sell, to traffic with me, but not with Lamachus.⁵ [Exeunt omnes.]

¹ The person here alluded to is Laches. Vide Thucyd. lib. iii. 86,—Τοῦ δ' αὐτοῦ θέρους τελευτῶντος, Ἀθηναῖοι εἰκοσι ναῦς ἔστειλαν ἐς Σικελίαν, καὶ Δάχητα τὸν Μελανώπου στρατηγόν, κ. τ. λ. In the Wasps we shall find him introduced as a dog.

PARABASIS.

From the time that our instructor has presided over the comic choruses, he never yet came forward to the spectators to tell how clever he is. But being calumniated¹ among the hasty-deciding Athenians by his enemies, that he ridicules our state and insults the democratic party, he wants now to make his defence before the changeful Athenians. Now your poet says he is worthy of much good treatment at your hands, in that he put an end to your being neatly cajoled by strangers' words,² and to your delighting in flattery, and to your being gaping-mouthed cockneys.³ And formerly the ambassadors from the cities, trying to cajole you, used first to call you "violet crowned;"⁴ and as often as any one said this, immediately, by reason of the "crowns," you sat on the tips of your—bums.⁵ And as often as any one soft-sawdered you and called you "sleek Athens," he used to obtain all his wish through the "sleekness," for having attached to you the glory of an anchovy.⁶ By having done this, he has been the cause to you of many advantages, and from having made known to you how the people in the cities live under a democracy.⁷

² Bergk supposes the allusion to be to the embassy of Gorgias of Leontium.

³ A reflection on their gullibility and readiness to run open-mouthed after any new foolery. Accordingly (in Eq. 1262) he calls them "a city of Gopenians,"—instead of Athenians.

Αἱ λιπαραὶ καὶ ἰοστέφανοι Ἀθῆναι."—Schol.

⁵ A facetious parody on the proverb ἐπ' ἀκρων τῶν ὀνύχων, said of persons who walk proudly. Aristophanes, accordingly, makes the Athenians sit proudly on another extremity.

He has placed its practices on record;

The tyrannical arts, the knavish tricks,

That poison all your politics." Fræse.

Accordingly now from the cities they have come, bringing in to you tribute, desiring to see the best of poets, who had the hardihood to say amongst the Athenians what is just. And so far already has the fame of his daring reached, when even the King, questioning the embassy of the Lacedæmonians, first asked them whether of the two had the superiority at sea; and then about this poet,¹ which of the two he plentifully abused. For he said that those people must have become far better, and would be far superior in war, who had him as an adviser. For this reason the Lacedæmonians make you proposals of peace, and demand back Ægina. And for that island² they do not care, but only that they may dispossess this poet. But do you therefore never give him up, inasmuch as he will represent in his comedies what is right. And he says he will teach you many good points, so that you be fortunate, not by wheedling you, nor yet by offering bribes, nor yet by cheating a little, nor yet by playing the villain, nor yet by besprinkling you with praise, but by teaching what is best. Wherefore let Cleon cunningly devise, and contrive every thing against me: for that which is good, and that which is just with me, shall be my ally; and never will I be found, like him, a cowardly and effeminate minister of the state. Come hither, ardent, eager, Acharnian Muse, having the strength of fire, like as the sparks, roused by the favouring fan, bounce from the oaken ashes, when our small fry are lying in readiness, while others mix up the sparkling³ Thasian pickle, and others knead the bread. Come thus to me, your fellow-tribesman, with a pompous, vehement, rustic melody.

We aged veterans blame the city; for we are not cherished in our old age in a manner worthy of those our naval victories, but we suffer hardships at your hands, who having cast aged heroes into suits, suffer us to be laughed at by stripling

And babbling through age, we take our stand at the bar,¹ not seeing any thing but the mist of Justice. While he, eager to have a stripling² act as junior counsel to himself, strikes quickly,³ engaging him with periods well-rounded; and then he drags into court the aged Tithonus, and interrogates him, setting word-traps, rending and troubling and confounding him. But he mumbles through old age, and then, cast in his suit, departs. Then he whines, and weeps, and says to his friends, "I depart, having incurred as a fine that wherewith I was to have bought a coffin."⁴ How is this fitting, to ruin an old man, a hoary warrior, at the clepsydra, who has laboured much with you, and wiped off the heated sweat, manly, indeed, and copious, who acted the warrior's part at Marathon, for the city's sake? Then, when we were at Marathon, we were the pursuers,⁵ but now we are pursued by very knavish men; and are taken besides. What will Marpsias reply to this?⁶

For how is it fitting that a man bent double, such as Thu-

Wherefore I pitied him, and wiped my eyes, when I saw an aged man confounded by an archer-fellow; who, by Ceres, when he was Thucydides, would not readily have put up with even Ceres herself; but first he would have floored in wrestling ten Evathli, and with bawling would have silenced three thousand Archers, and would have out-constabled² the relations of the father himself of Cephisodemus. But, since you do not suffer the aged to get any sleep, decree that the indictments be separate, so that the advocate of the old man may be old and toothless; but the young men's, lewd and prating, and the son of Clinias.³ And henceforth it is the old man's⁴ business to banish, and, if one be brought to trial, to fine the old, and the young man's business to banish and fine the young.

upon which I have inscribed the peace, that I may set it up in the market-place open to view. [Exit Dicæopolis.]

ENTER MEGARIAN AND DAUGHTERS.¹

MEG. Market of Athens, hail! beloved of the Megarians! By the god of friendship, I longed for you, as for a mother. But, O unhappy daughters of a miserable father, get² up to the barley-cake, if any where you find it. Hear, pray; let your bellies³ give attention. Whether do you wish to be sold, or miserably starve?

DAUGH. To be sold! to be sold!

MEG. I also myself say yes. But who so simple as to buy you, an evident loss? However, I have a certain Megarian device; for I will dress you up as hogs and say I am bringing them for sale. Put on these hog's hoofs, and take care that you appear to be the offspring of a noble sow; since, by Mercury, if you shall come home, you shall miserably experience⁴ excess of hunger. Put on also these little snouts, and then enter thus into the sack. But take care that you grunt and cry coï, and utter the voice of the pigs of the Mysteries.⁵ While I will call Dicæopolis, *to see where he is.*⁶ Dicæopolis! do you wish to buy some little pigs?

DICÆOPOLIS.

DIC. What! a Megarian?

MEG. We have come to traffic.

DIC. How fares it with you?⁷

MEG. We are always hungering one against the other by the fire-side.

¹ In the original, the Megarian, as well as the Boeotian who is afterwards introduced, talks in a very broad provincial dialect. This Mr. Walsh has represented by the medium of the Lowland Scotch, and Mr. Droysen by the doggerel German exhibited in the German "Punch."

⁷ Cf. Eq. 7. Lys. 1002, 1072.

DIC. By Jove, but that's jolly, if a piper be present. But what else are you Megarians about now?

MEG. Just what we are doing.¹ When I set out from thence, the committee were contriving this for the state, how we might most quickly and most miserably perish!

DIC. Then you will soon get rid of your troubles.

MEG. Certainly.

DIC. But what else is going on at Megara? What is the price² of grain?

MEG. With us, of a high price, like the gods.

DIC. Do you then bring³ salt?

MEG. Have you not the command of it?

DIC. Nor yet garlic?

MEG. What garlic?—the heads of which you always grub up with a stake, like field-mice, whenever you make your inroads.

DIC. What then do you bring?

MEG. Why, pigs for the mysteries.

DIC. You say well: show them.

MEG. But indeed they are fine ones. Take one up, if you will. How fat and sleek!

DIC. What is this?

MEG. A pig, by Jove!

DIC. What say you? What country pig is this?

MEG. Of Megara. Or is not this a pig?

DIC. It does not seem so to me.

MEG. Is it not shameful? See the incredulity of the man. He says this is not a pig. But sooth, if you will, make a wager with me now for salt flavoured with thyme, if this is not a pig after the usage of the Greeks.⁴

DIC. Yet at least it is a woman's.⁵

"DIC. Perhaps it may, but it's a human pig.

MEG. Human I'n human; and they're mine that's all.

MEG. 'Tis mine, by Diocles! Whose do you suppose they are? Do you wish to hear them speak?

DIC. By the gods I do.

MEG. Speak quickly now, piggy. Devil take you,¹ you must not be silent. By Mercury, I will carry you home again!

DAUGH. Coi, coi.

MEG. Is this a pig?

DIC. Aye, now it seems a pig, but when grown up it will be a sow.

MEG. Within five years, be well assured, it will be like to its mother.

DIC. But this one here is not fit for sacrifice.

MEG. Why not? How is it not fit for sacrifice?

DIC. It has not a tail.

MEG. For it is young: but when grown up to pig's estate, it will have a great thick red one. But if you like to bring it up, here's a fine pig for you!

DIC. How similar this one is to the other.

MEG. For it is of the same mother,² and of the same father. But when it is grown fat and hairy, it will be a very fine pig to sacrifice to Venus.

DIC. But pig is not sacrificed to Venus.

MEG. Not a pig to Venus? Yea, to her only of the gods. And the flesh too of these pigs is sweetest when it is pierced with a spit.³

DIC. Can they feed now without their mother?

MEG. Aye, by Neptune, and without their father too

DIC. But what do they like best to eat?

MEG. Whatever you give them. Ask them yourself.

DIC. Pig! Pig!

DAUGH. Coi, coi.

DIC. Can you eat chick-pease?

DAUGH. Coi, coi, coi.

DIC. What then? Early⁴ figs?

Whose should they be, do ye think? So far they're human.

But come, will you hear 'em squeak?" Frere.

DAUGH. Coī, coī.

DIC.¹ How sharply you squeak at the figs! Let some one bring in some figs from within for the little pigs.² Will they eat them? Bless me! How they do munch them, much-esteemed Hercules! Of what country are the pigs? How³ Tragasean they look. But they have not perhaps⁴ eaten up all the figs.

MEG. No—for I took up this one of them.

DIC. By Jove, the beasts are fine ones! For how much shall I buy⁵ your little grunTERS of you? Say.

MEG. The one for a bunch of garlic; the other, if you will, for a single chœnix of salt.

DIC. I'll buy them of you. Wait you here.

MEG. Aye, aye,⁶ sir. [Exit Dicæopolis.] Mercury, thou god of traffic, grant me to sell my wife in this way, and my mother too!

INFORMER.

INF. Fellow! of what country are you?

MEG. A pig-merchant of Megara.

INF. Then I will inform against these little pigs and you, as enemies.

MEG. The very⁷ thing! Again it comes, whence the beginning of our woes took its rise.

INF. You shall Megarize to your cost. Will you not let go the sack?

MEG. Dicæopolis! Dicæopolis! I am informed against by some one.

DIC. Who is he that informs against you? Clerks of the market, will you not exclude the informers? What has come into your head, pray,¹ that you lay² informations without a wick?

INF. What! shall I not inform against our foes?

DIC. Aye, to your cost, if you will not run elsewhere and play the informer. [Exit Informer.]

MEG. What an evil is this in Athens!

DIC. Be of good heart, Megarian. Come, take this garlic here, and the salt, at which price you sold your pigs, and fare thee well!

MEG. But to fare well is not in fashion with us.³

DIC. On my own head then be the impertinence.

MEG. My little grunTERS, make the attempt, even without your father, to eat the cake to your salt,⁴ if any one offer it. [Exeunt omnes.]

CHOR. The man is prosperous! Have you not heard how the measure⁵ succeeds? For the man will reap the benefit, sitting in the market-place. And if any Ctesias enter, or other informer, he shall sit down in tears. Neither shall any other man injure you by cheating you in the purchase of provisions. Neither shall Prepis wipe upon you his lewdness.⁶ Nor shall you jostle with Cleonymus; but shall pass through with a clean cloak. BEOT. Let Hercules be witness, I am wretchedly tired in my neck. Ismenias, do you lay down the penny-royal gently. But you, as many flute-players⁴ as are present from Thebes, with your bone pipes play "the dog's backside."

DIC. (coming out of his house). Go to the devil! Won't you get away from my doors, you wasps? Whence have the bumble-bees of Chæris (the devil take them!) flown to my doors?⁵ [Exeunt pipers.]

BEOT. With pleasure, stranger, by Iolaus. For playing behind me from Thebes, they have shaken off the blossoms of the penny-royal on the ground. But, if you like, purchase some of the fowls or locusts,⁶ which I bring.

BÆOT. Absolutely whatever is good amongst the Bœotians: origanum, penny-royal, rush-mats, wicks, ducks, jackdaws, woodcocks, coots, sand-pipers, divers.

DIC. Then you have come to the market, as if a tempest of birds.

BÆOT. Moreover I bring geese, hares, foxes, moles, hedge hogs, cats, beavers, ferrets, otters, Copaïc eels.

DIC. O thou that bringest a fish most delightful to men! if you are bearing the eels, permit me to address them.

BÆOT. "Eldest¹ of fifty Copaïc daughters," come forth, and be civil to this² stranger.

DIC. O dearest thou, and long desired! Thou hast come longed for indeed by the comic chorusses, and dear to Morychus.³ Attendants, bring out for me the brazier and the fan hither. [Servants crowd round the eel.] Look, my boys, at the splendid eel, which has come at length in the sixth year, longed for. Address it, my children, and I will furnish you with coals for this stranger's sake. But carry it in: for not even when dead may I ever be bereft of you stewed in beet.⁴

BÆOT. But how shall I have a recompense for this?

DIC. This one, perhaps, you will give me as my market toll. But if you are for selling any of these others, say on.

BÆOT. All these will I.

DIC. Come, for how much, say you? Or will you take home other wares from hence?

BÆOT. Aye, whatever there is at Athens, and not among the Bœotians.

DIC. Will you buy and take with you Phaleric anchovies or crockery?

NICARCHUS.

DIC. But all there is of him is bad.

NIC. Whose are these wares?

BÆOT. Mine here,² from Thebes, be Jove my witness.

BÆOT. What ails you³ then that you have commenced war and battle with the little birds?

NIC. I will inform against you too, as well as these.

BÆOT. In what way having been injured?

NIC. I will tell you, for the good of the bystanders. You are importing wicks⁴ from the enemy.

DIC. And so, forsooth, you are for informing against a wick?

NIC. Yes; for this wick might set fire to the dock-yard.

DIC. A wick a dockyard? Oh! oh!—As how?

NIC. A Bæotian might stick it in a tom-tailor,⁵ and kindle it and send it into the dockyard through a sewer, having watched for a mighty wind. And if the fire were once to catch the ships, they would be immediately in a blaze.

DIC. It will be a vessel good for all work; a mixer for mischiefs; a pestle for law-suits; a lamp to inform against⁴ those liable to give in an account; and a cup to mix up troubles in.

CNO. But how could any one confidently use such a vessel in his house, always making such a jar?

DIC. It is strong, good sir, so that it would never break, if it were suspended by the feet, head downwards. [Lifts him up by the legs.]

DIC. What is the matter! Why do you call me?

SERV. Why? Lamachus requested you to let him have for this here drachma some of your thrushes for the feast of Pitchers. But requested you to let him have a Copaic eel for three drachmæ.

DIC. Who may this Lamachus be that requests the eel?

SERV. The dreaded one, he with the shield of tough bull's-hide, who brandishes the Gorgon, waving three over-shadowing crests.

DIC. I would not, by Jove, if even he were to give me his buckler. Let him wave³ his crests at salt-fish. But should he make a great din, I will call the Market-clerks. And I will take this merchandise for myself, and enter to the accompaniment of thrushes' wings⁴ and blackbirds. [Exeunt omnes.]

CHO. You have seen, oh! you have seen, city at large, the prudent man, the very wise, what articles of merchandise he is able to deal in, by having made peace; of which some are useful in the house, others again are suitable to eat up warm. All good things are spontaneously provided for him. Never will I welcome War⁵ to my house, nor yet shall he ever at my house chaunt "The Harmodius," seated as a guest; because he is a fellow quarrelsome over his cups, who, having made a furious assault upon us, possessed of every blessing, perpetrated all evils, and overturned, and squandered, and fought; and, moreover, when I frequently invited him: "Drink, sit down, take this cup of friendship,"—so much the more burnt our vine-props in the fire, and in our despite poured out the wine from our vines. * * * to a feast; at the¹ same time also he is highly elated, and, as a proof of his good fare, threw out these feathers² before his doors.

O Reconciliation,³ companion of the beautiful Venus and the dear Graces, I never knew you had so fair a face! Would⁴ that some Cupid, with a chaplet of flowers, like the⁵ one in the picture, would take and join together me and thee! or, do you consider me peradventure a very old man? Yet, if I gained you, I fancy I could add three things beside: first, I would plant a long row of vines; then, near to this, some young suckers of young fig-trees; and thirdly, I, this old man here, would plant a branch of the cultivated vine; and about your whole estate olives round about, so that you and I may anoint ourselves from them at the New-moons.

DIC. Slaves, women, did you not hear? What are you about? Do you not hear the Herald? Boil, roast, turn, draw off the hare's flesh quickly, wreath the chaplets. Bring the spits, that I may spit the thrushes.

CHO. I deem you happy for your good counsel, but more, sir, for your present good cheer.

DIC. What then will ye say, when ye see the thrushes roasting?

CHO. I believe you say this also rightly.²

DIC. Stir up the fire.

CHO. Did you hear how cook-like and daintily and dinner-like he serves up to himself?

HUSBANDMAN.

HUSB. Ah me, unhappy man!

DIC. O Hercules! who is this?

HUSB. A miserable man.

DIC. Then go your own way.³

HUSB. My dearest sir, measure me out a particle of peace, if it be but for five years, for you only are possessed of peace.

DIC. What have you suffered?

HUSB. I am undone, having lost my two oxen.⁴

DIC. Where from?

HUSB. The Bœotians took them off from Phyle.

DIC. Then what want you now?

HUSB. I am ruined in my eyes² with weeping for my oxen. But, if you have any regard for Dercetes of Phyle, anoint my eyes quickly with peace.

DIC. Nay, you rascal, I am not the public physician.

HUSB. Come, I entreat you, if by any means I may recover my oxen.

DIC. It cannot be: weep to Pittalus' apprentices.

HUSB. At least³ drop for me one drop of peace into this little reed.

DIC. Not a fraction: go and lament some where.

HUSB. Woe's me, wretched man! for the oxen which tilled my ground! [Exit Husbandman.]

CHO. The man has found out something sweet in the peace, and does not seem about to give a share to any one.

DIC. Pour the honey on the sausage. Fry the cuttle-fish.

CHO. Did you hear his loud shoutings?

DIC. Fry the eels.

CHO. You will kill me with hunger, and your neighbours with savoury smells and bawling, if you shout in this way.

DIC. Roast these and brown them well.

PARANYMPH.

PAR. Dicæopolis! Dicæopolis!

DIC. Who is this?

PAR. A bridegroom sent you these meats from the marriage-feast.

DIC. Well done he,⁴ whoever he was.

PAR. And he requested you to pour, on account of the meats, into his ointment-box one cyathus of peace, that he might not go on service, but might kiss his wife at home.

PAR. The bridesmaid wants to say something to you in private from the bride.

DIC. Come now, what are you for saying? [Bridesmaid whispers in his ear.] How ridiculous, ye gods, is the request of the bride, which she earnestly asks of me, that the bridegroom may stay at home!¹ Bring hither the peace, that I may give some to her alone, because she is a woman and not fit for war.—Woman, hold under here your ointment-box in this way. Do you know what ye are to make of this? Tell the bride, whenever they levy soldiers, let her by night anoint the bridegroom's breeches with this. [Exeunt Paranymp and Bridesmaid.] Take away the peace. Bring the funnel, that I may take and pour some wine into the Pitchers.

CHO. And see! here's some one hastening hither with his brows drawn up, as if about to announce something dreadful!

HERALD, LAMACHUS.

HER. O! toils, and fights, and Lamachuses!

LAM. Who sounds around the mansion adorned with brass?

HER. The generals² ordered you to march to-day in haste with your companies and crests; and then, though snowed upon, to guard the passes. For some one has brought them word that Bœotian robbers would make³ an incursion on the approach of the feast of Pitchers and Pots. [Exit Herald.]

LAM. O generals more numerous than brave! Is it not hard that I should not be permitted even to celebrate the feast?

DIC. O warlike Lamachean Achaian host !

LAM. Ah me, miserable ! you are mocking me now.¹

DIC. Will² you fight with a four-winged Geryon ?

LAM. Alas ! alas ! what tidings has the crier announced to me !

DIC. Alas ! alas ! what tidings, in turn, is some one running up to announce to me ?

MESSENGER.

MESS. Dicæopolis !

DIC. What is the matter ?

MESS. Come to dinner quick, with your box and pitcher ; for the priest of Bacchus sends for you. But make haste ; you have delayed the dinner this long time. All the rest of the things are in readiness ; couches, tables, cushions for the head, bedding, chaplets, ointment, sweetmeats, the courtesans are there, cakes of fine flour, cheese-cakes, sesame-cakes, honey-cakes, lovely dancing girls, Harmodius's delight.³ But hasten as quick as possible. [Exit Messenger.]

LAM. Ill-fated me !

DIC. For you have⁴ chosen the Gorgon as your great patron. Shut the door, and let some one get ready the dinner.

LAM. Slave ! slave ! bring out my knapsack hither.

DIC. Slave ! slave ! bring out my box hither.

LAM. Bring salt flavoured with thyme, slave, and onions.

DIC. But slices of salt-fish for me, for I abominate onions.

LAM. Bring hither, slave, an⁵ olio of rancid salt-fish.

DIC. Bring me too an olio of fat ; and I will roast it there.

LAM. Bring hither the two plumes from my helmet

DIC. But for me bring the ring-doves, and the thrushes.

LAM. Beautiful, and white is the ostrich's plume.

DIC. Beautiful, and yellow is the ring-dove's flesh.

LAM. Fellow, cease scoffing at my equipment.

LAM. Bring out the crest-case for the three plumes.

DIC. And give me a little dish of hare's flesh.

LAM. Verily the moths have eaten up my crests.

DIC. Verily I shall eat up the hare-soup before dinner.

LAM. Fellow, will you not address me? ²

DIC. I am not addressing you; but I and the slave have been disputing this long time. Will you lay a wager, and give the decision to Lamachus, whether locusts or thrushes are the sweeter?

LAM. Ah me, how you insult me!

DIC. (turning to the slave). He decides the locusts to be far sweeter.

LAM. Slave! slave! take down my spear and bring it out hither. [Slave brings him his spear.]

DIC. Slave! slave! do you draw off and bring the sausage hither. [Slave brings him the spit.]

LAM. Come, let me draw off the cover of my spear. Take hold, pull at it, slave.

DIC. And do you, slave, pull at this. ³ [Offers the spit to pull at.]

LAM. Slave, bring the trestles for my shield.

DIC. And bring forth the baked bread for mine. ⁴

LAM. Bring hither the orb of my shield with the Gorgon on its back.

DIC. And to me give the orb of my cheese-cake, with cheese on its back.

LAM. Is not this flat mockery for a man?

DIC. Is not this, pray, sweet cheese-cake for a man?

LAM. Slave, pour the oil over it. I see in the shield an old man about to be brought to trial on a charge of cowardice.

DIC. Bring bread, for belly timber; that's your sort!

DIC. Is not this pancake exquisite and rare? Frere.

DIC. Pour over the honey. There too an old man is clearly seen bidding Lamachus, the son of Gorgasus,¹ go weep.

LAM. Slave, bring hither my warrior breastplate.

DIC. For me too, slave, bring out my pitcher as a breastplate.

LAM. In this I will arm myself against my foes.

DIC. In this I will arm myself against my boon-companions.

LAM. Slave, fasten my bedding to my shield.

DIC. Slave, fasten my dinner to my box.

LAM. But I'll take and carry my knapsack for myself.

DIC. But I'll take my coat and go out.

LAM. Take up the buckler, slave, and go with it. It snows. Bless me! 'Tis a stormy affair.

DIC. Take up the dinner. 'Tis a jolly affair. [Exeunt omnes.]

CHO. Go ye now to the warfare and joy be with ye! How different a journey you two are going! For the one, to drink crowned with chaplets; but for you, to shiver and keep watch and for² the other, to sleep with a most lovely girl, and enjoy himself.

May Jove, to speak plainly, miserably destroy Antimachus, the son of Sputter, the miserable composer of miserable songs, who, when Choregus at the Lenæa, dismissed me dinnerless, unhappy man! whom may I yet see longing for a cuttle-fish; and may it, when broiled, frizzling, ready salted, lying upon the table, run aground. And then, when he is about to seize it, may a bitch snatch it and run away. May this be one misfortune for him. And then may he have another by night. For as he is returning home, feverish after his horse-exercise, then let some drunken mad Orestes break his head; and may he, when wishing to seize a stone, in the dark seize with his hand a newly-born Sir-reverence; and may he rush

MESSENGER.

MESS. Servants,¹ who are in the house of Lamachus, heat water, water in a little pot, get ready linen, cerate, greasy wool, a bandage to go round his ancle. The hero has been wounded with a vine-prop in leaping over a trench, and has dislocated his ancle, so as to be twisted; and has broken his head by having fallen upon a stone, and roused the Gorgon from his shield. And as the mighty plume of the big-boaster fell² upon the rocks, he uttered a doleful strain: "O thou bright luminary, now having seen you for the last time I leave the light: I am no more." When he had said thus much,³ having fallen into a sewer, he gets up again, and meets with some runaways, driving and urging on the plunderers with his spear. But see! here's the man himself! Come, open the door. [Exit Messenger.]

LAMACHUS.

LAM. Attatai! attatai! These hateful and chilling sufferings! Wretched man, I am undone, struck by the spear of the enemy! But that would be lamentable for me—Dicæopolis⁴ may see me wounded; and then he will laugh at my misfortunes.

DIC. And moreover, too, I poured in pure wine, and quaffed it at one draught.

CHO. Huzza! then, noble fellow; go with your wine-skin.

DIC. Follow then, and sing "Huzza! victorious!"

CHO. Well, for your sake, we will follow, and sing of you and of your wine-skin, "Huzza! victorious!" [*Exeunt

THE ARGUMENT.

THIS Comedy was performed at the Lenæan Festival, in the Archonship of Stratocles, Ol. lxxxix. 1, in January, B. C. 424. "In the eighth year of the war: Aristoph. Equit. 793, ἔτος ὀγδοῦν, computed from the battle of Potidæa, B. C. 432. The sixth year, mentioned Aristoph. Acharn., (vide a. 425,) was computed from the invasion of Attica, eight months afterwards."—Clinton's Fast. Hell. p. 69.

In the Acharnians, vs. 300, we have,

ὥς μεμίσσηκά σε Κλέωνος μάλλον, δὺν κατατεμῶ τοῖσιν ἵππεύσι καττύματα.

In this Drama, which was the first represented in his own name, the Poet fulfilled his promise, and with the assistance of the Knights, who here constitute the Chorus, carried off the first prize, and showed the Demagogue to be ἐς τὰ ἄλλα βιαιότατος τῶν πολιτῶν τῷ τε δήμῳ παραπολύ ἐν τῷ τότε πιθανώτατος, (Thucyd. lib. iii. 36,) for he still remained as great a favourite as ever. The second prize was adjudged to Cratinus, for the Satyrs: the third to Aristomenes, for the Lamentations. As no artist would make a mask for the character of Cleon, Aristophanes was obliged to perform the part himself. In some measure to give an idea of the flushed and bloated countenance of that Demagogue, he smeared his face with lees of wine, and thus stood forth in the double capacity of Poet and Actor. A. W. Schlegel (Dramatic Literature, p. 159) remarks, "He had the prudence never to name Cleon, though he portrayed him in such a way that it was impossible to mistake him. No one of his plays, perhaps, is more historical and political; and its rhetorical power in exciting our indignation is almost irresistible: it is a true dramatic Philippic. However, in point of amusement and invention, it does not appear to me the most fortunate." To understand fully the historical allusions, it will be necessary to have a recollection of the affair of Pylos, as recorded by Thucydides, lib. iv. See also Thirlwall, Hist. Greece, iii. 235—244.

As there is no plot, the Dramatis Personæ will be a sufficient explanation.

THE KNIGHTS.

(SCENE—the front of a large house.)

DEMOSTHENES, NICIAS.

DEM. ALAS! alas! for our misfortunes, alas! alas! May the gods miserably destroy the Paphlagonian,¹ the newly-purchased pest, together with his schemings! For since the time that he entered into our family, he is always inflicting blows upon the domestics.

NIC. (approaching cautiously). Aye, verily, may this primate of Paphlagonians perish most miserably, together with his calumnies.²

DEM. O wretched man! how are you?

NIC. Miserable, like you.

DEM. Come hither then, that we may weep in concert a stave of Olympus.³

DEM. and NIC. Mumu, mumu, mumu, mumu, mumu, mumu.⁴

DEM. Why do we lament to no purpose? Ought we not to have sought some means of safety, and not⁵ weep any more?

² For the omission of ὄν, and the construction, vide Monk ad Hippol. vs. 1184, Elmsl. ad Med. vs. 165. "Dieser Erzpaphlagonier." Droysen.

³ Olympus, the father of Grecian music, whose compositions, which Plato calls divine, retained the highest reputation in Plutarch's time, was a Phrygian. "A certain class of mournful songs was called after his name." Droysen.

⁴ These are expressed by the aid of the nasal organ, so as to give a longer intonation to the second v in each syllable. Cf. Plut. 395.

⁵ Comp. vs 160. Aves, 1385.

NIC. What safety then can there be? do you say.

DEM. Nay, rather, do you say, that I may not quarrel with you.

NIC. By Apollo, not I. But speak boldly, and then I also will give my opinion.

DEM. "Would that thou wouldst say what I should say."¹

NIC. But the spirit's² not in me. How then, pray, can I ever speak it with Euripidean prettiness?

DEM. Nay, do not; do not; do not dose me with Euripides.³ But find some way of dancing off from our master.

NIC. Say now in a breath "Sert," pronouncing it in this way.

DEM. Well now, I say it; "Sert."

NIC. Now after the "Sert," say "De."

DEM. "De."

NIC. Very well! Now first say "Sert" slowly, and then "De," bringing it rapidly after it.

DEM. "Sert—de, sert, DESERT."

NIC. See! is it not pleasant?

DEM. Yes, by Jove: but I fear this omen for my hide.

NIC. Why, pray?

DEM. Because the hide in such cases is apt to depart.

NIC. It is best for us, therefore, in the present state of things, to go and fall before the statue⁴ of some god.

² "Nein, nein! mir fehlt das rechte 'Vorwärts.'" Droysen. Who adds, "The Greek word which I have translated Vorwärts,—by no means a barbarism, but, perhaps, an interjection arbitrarily formed in imitation of the sound of a trumpet,—points out the character of Demosthenes very happily." DEM. Before what statue? Pray, do you believe in gods?

NIC. I do.

DEM. Where's your proof?

NIC. Because I am hateful to the gods. Is it not¹ with good reason I do so?

DEM. You persuade me rightly.

NIC. But we must look elsewhere.²

DEM. Will you that I state the matter to the spectators?

NIC. It would not be amiss:³ but one thing let us require of them, to show us by their countenances if they are pleased with our discourse and matter.

DEM. I will now tell them. We have a master surly in his temper, bean-fed,⁴ passionate, Demus of the Pnyx, a crabbed old man, somewhat deaf. He at the previous new⁵ moon bought a slave, a tanner of Paphlagonia, most villanous and most calumniating. This Leather-Paphlagonian, when he had fully learnt the old man's disposition, by fawning on our master, used to wheedle,⁶ cajole, flatter, and deceive him with tips of leather parings, using such words—"O Demus, when you have first tried one⁷ cause, bathe, eat, gobble up, devour, take the three obols. Would you that I serve up supper to you?" Then, having snatched up what any of us may have prepared, the Paphlagonian makes a present of this to our master. And lately too, when I had kneaded a Spartan cake at Pylos, he somehow circumvented me most knavishly and filched it away, and served up himself what had been kneaded by me. Us he drives away, and does not suffer any one else to wait on our master, but with a leather fan, when at supper, stands and drives away the orators.⁸ And he recites oracles, while the old man gets old-womanish. And when he sees him grown spoony, he has devised his trick; for he falsely accuses the household to their face, and then we are scourged; while the Paphlagonian runs around the servants, and asks, confounds, takes bribes, using these words, "Do you see that Hylas¹ has been scourged through my influence? Unless you make a friend of me, you shall die to-day" So we make him presents; otherwise, we are trampled upon and kicked by the old fellow eight times more than before.² Now therefore, my good friend, let us quickly consider to what road we must turn, and to whom.³

NIC. We had⁴ best turn to that "Sert-Road," my good sir.

DEM. But it is not possible for any thing to escape the Paphlagonian's notice, for he overlooks all things himself: he keeps one leg at Pylos, the other in the assembly; and when he has straddled thus far, his hinder parts are really and truly among the Chaonians,⁵ his hands among the Ætolians, and his mind with the Clopidæ.⁶

NIC. Then it is best for us to die. But consider how we may die most manfully.

DEM. How, pray, how can it be done, most manfully?

NIC. It is best for us to drink bull's blood, for the death⁷ of Themistocles is more preferable.

DEM. No, by Jove, but pure wine to¹ the good Genius; for perhaps we may devise some good plan.

NIC. "Pure wine," quoth'a! Are your thoughts then on drinking?² How could a man devise any good plan when drunk?

DEM. Is it so, fellow? You are a pourer forth³ of weak, washy twaddle. Have you the audacity to abuse wine for witlessness? Can you find any thing more business-like than wine? Do you see? when men drink, then they are rich, they transact business, gain causes, are happy, assist their friends. Come, bring me out quickly a stoup of wine, that I may moisten my intellect, and say something clever.

NIC. Woe's me! What in the world will you do to us with your drinking?

DEM. What's good. Come, bring it forth, and I will lay myself down. [Exit Nicias.] For if I get drunk, I shall sprinkle all these with little schemes, and little notions, and little thoughts. [Re-enter Nicias with a pitcher of wine and a cup.]

NIC. How fortunate that I was not caught stealing the wine from within!

DEM. Tell me, what is the Paphlagonian doing?

NIC. The slanderer having licked up some confiscated⁴ cakes, snores like a drunkard, lying on his back on his hides.

DEM. Come now, pour in abundant pure wine as a libation.

NIC. Take it now, and make a libation to the good Genius. Drain, drain the draught of the Pramnian god.⁵

DEM. Come now, I'll apply the stoup to my lips, that I may moisten my intellect, and say something clever.² [Re-enter Nicias with a bundle of papers.]

NIC. How mightily the Paphlagonian blows and snores, so that I escaped his notice in stealing the sacred oracle, which he used to guard with the greatest caution!

DEM. O thou most clever, bring it, that I may read it! and do you quickly pour in for me to³ drink. Come, let me see what there is then in here. O oracles! Give me, give me the cup quickly. [Drinks.]

NIC. Well! what says the oracle?

NIC. Is "Pour in another" among the oracles?

DEM. O Bacis!⁴

NIC. What is it?

NIC. This is one seller. What next? Say on.

DEM. After him, again, is to arise a second, a sheep-seller.

NIC. These are two sellers. What must this one do?

DEM. Rule, until another¹ man more abandoned than he arise; and after this he is destroyed. For the Paphlagonian leather-seller succeeds, the robber, the bawler, with the voice of Cycloborus.

NIC. It is fated, then, that the sheep-seller perish at the hands of the leather-seller.

DEM. Yes, by Jove.

NIC. Ah me, unhappy! Whence therefore can there be only one² seller more?

DEM. There is still one, with a wondrous trade.

NIC. Tell me, I entreat you, who is he?

DEM. Shall I say?

NIC. Aye, by Jove.

DEM. A sausage-seller is the person who is to³ destroy him.

NIC. A sausage-seller? Neptune, what⁴ a trade! Come, where shall we find out this man?

DEM. O foolish man, what⁴ puddings? Look here! Do you see the rows of people there?

S. S. I see them.

DEM. Of all these you shall be alone the chief, and of the market-place, and of the harbours, and of the Pnyx. You shall trample on the senate, and humble the generals; you shall imprison, put under ward, and in the Prytaneum you shall—wench.⁵

S. S. What I?

DEM. Aye, you; and you do not yet see all. But mount up even upon this dresser here,⁶ and survey all the islands round about. [Sausage-seller mounts up upon his dresser.]

DEM. No but through you all these are on¹ sale; for you shall become, as this oracle here asserts, a very great man.

S. S. Tell me; why, how shall I who am a sausage-seller become a great man?

DEM. For this very reason,² truly, shall you even become great; because you are a knave, and from the market-place, and impudent.

S. S. I do not consider myself worthy to have great power.

DEM. Alas! whatever's the reason that you say you are not worthy? You seem to me to be conscious of something gentlemanly. Are you of gentle birth?³

S. S. No, by the gods, unless⁴ to come of blackguards be so.

DEM. O happy in your fortune! What an advantage⁵ you have for statesmanship!

S. S. But, my good sir, I don't even possess any education, beyond my letters, and them, to be sure, as bad⁶ as bad can be.

DEM. This alone is an obstacle to you, that you do know them, even as bad as bad can be. For the character of popular leader no longer belongs to a man of education, nor yet to one good in his morals, but⁷ to the ignorant and abominable. Then don't neglect what the gods in their oracles offer you.

S. S. How, pray, does the oracle speak?

DEM. Well, by the gods, and ambiguously, in a way, and learnedly wrapped in riddles. "But when the leather-eagle with crooked claws shall seize in his beak a serpent, a stupid fellow, a drinker of blood, just then⁸ the garlic-pickle of the Paphlagonians is at an end, while to the sellers of puddings the god grants great glory, unless they choose rather to sell sausages."

S. S. How then does this relate to me? Instruct me.

DEM. This Paphlagonian here is the "leather-eagle."

S. S. Why is he "with crooked claws?"

DEM. It means, I ween, that he snatches and takes away with his hands curved.¹

S. S. But what's the import of the "serpent?"

DEM. This is very clear; for the "serpent" is long, and the "sausage" again is long: then both the sausage² and the serpent are "drinkers of blood." It says, therefore, that the serpent shall immediately conquer the leather-eagle,³ unless it be cajoled with words.

S. S. The oracles please me: but I wonder how I am able to manage the people.

DEM. A very easy affair! Act as you act now; jumble and mince together all state-affairs, and always win over the people to your side, coaxing it with little cookish words. But the other requisites for a demagogue you possess—a foul tongue, you are of vulgar birth, a low fellow; you possess all things which are requisite for statesmanship. The oracles and the Delphic shrine conspire in your favour. Crown yourself then, and offer a libation to Dulness, and see that you punish the fellow.⁴

S. S. And who will be my ally? for the rich fear him, and the poor people are afraid of him.

DEM. But there are a thousand brave knights⁵ who hate him, who will aid you, and the well-born citizens, and of the spectators whoever is a clever man, and I along with them, and the god will⁶ assist you. And do not fear, for he is not represented by a likeness; for, through fear, none of the mask-makers⁷ was willing to make a likeness of him. Never-

You are certainly causing a revolt of the Chalcidians.² You shall perish, you shall die, you brace of rogues. [Sausage-seller runs out.]

DEM. Ho you! why do you fly? will you not stop? O noble sausage-seller, do not betray the cause! O ye Knights,³ support us! Now's the time! Simon,⁴ Panætius, will you not ride to the right wing? S. S. No, by Jove.

¹ As Nicias was of Pergasæ, not Demosthenes, it is clear the names have been confused. See Classical Journal, No. xi. p. 222, 223. The passage in Athenæus is, lib. xii. p. 537, C., τὸν δὲ Νικίου φησὶ τοῦ Περγασῆθεν πλοῦτον ἢ τὸν Ἰσχομάχου τινες ἀπώλεσαν;

⁵ The phrase οἵπερ εἰσὶ is used when we do not wish to speak openly. Vide Eur. Med. vs. 859, ἀλλ' ἐσμὲν οἶον ἐσμὲν, οὐκ ἐρῶ κακόν.

Cf. Hermann, Vig. n. 30. It is curious that it should have been so used by Shakspeare. Vide Othello, act iv. sc. 2,

"He is that he is: I may not breathe my censure."

CLE. Yes, by Jove, you shall.

S. S. No, by Neptune, but I will fight it out first, with respect to who shall speak first.

CLE. Alas, I shall burst.

S. S. But I will not permit you.

CHO. Permit him, by the gods, permit him to burst.

CLE. Relying¹ on what do you dare to speak against me?

S. S. Because I too am able to speak, and to make a rich sauce.

CLE. "To speak," quoth'a! Finely,² upon my word, would you take up and properly handle a case which fell to you, so as to be torn in pieces raw.³ But do you know how you seem to me to be circumstanced? Like the mass.⁴ If you have any where pleaded some little suit well against a resident-alien, babbling the live-long night, and talking to yourself in the streets, and drinking water, and showing yourself off, and boring your friends, you fancied you were a dab at oratory—Fool for your folly!

S. S. By drinking what, pray, have you worked upon the city, so as now to be silent, having been talked down by you alone?

³ ὡμοσπάκρον is an example of the Accusativus Prolepticus, i. e. where an adjective is applied to a substantive, though the property expressed by it does not exist in the substantive till after the completion of the action expressed by the verb. See Schäfer ad Soph. Aj. 402. Greg. Cor. pp. 539, 1047. Hermann, Append. Vig. p. 718. Opusc. iii. p. 221. Another example in Acharn. 1179.

"You're like the rest of 'em—the swarm of paltry weak pretenders.

You've made your pretty speech, perhaps, and gain'd a little law-suit

Against a merchant-foreigner, by dint of water-drinking,
And lying long awake o'-nights, composing and repeating,
And studying as you walk'd the streets, and wearing out the patience

Of all your friends and intimates with practising beforehand:
And now you wonder at yourself, elated and delighted
At your own talent for debate—you silly, saucy coxcomb."

Frasa.

CLE. Why, do you match any man against me? who, immediately after I have devoured hot slices of the tunny-fish, and then drank besides a gallon of neat wine, will abuse like a strumpet the generals at Pylos.

S. S. And I, after I have swallowed down a cow's paunch and a pig's belly, and then drank the broth besides, without washing, will throttle¹ the orators, and terrify Nicias.

CHO. You please me in the rest of your words; but one part of your conduct does not please me, in that you will gulp down your broth alone.

CLE. But you will not distract the Milesians, after having devoured a sea-wolf.²

S. S. Nay, but when I have devoured ribs³ of beef, I will farm the mines.

CLE. And I will spring into the senate and confound it with violence.

S. S. And I will kick your rump instead of a foot-ball.⁴

CLE. And I will drag you out of doors, head foremost, by the crupper.

CHO. By Neptune, you shall drag me too, if you drag him.

CLE. How I will fasten you in the stocks!

S. S. I will prosecute you for cowardice.

CLE. Your hide⁵ shall be tanned.

S. S. I will flay you for a thief's pouch.⁶

CLE. You shall be stretched out on the ground with pegs.

S. S. I will make mince-meat of you.

CLE. I will pluck out your eye-lashes.

S. S. I will cut out your crop.⁷

DEM. And, by Jove, we will put a skewer into his mouth, in cook's fashion, and then draw out his tongue from within, and examine his inside well and manfully, while he gapes, if it be pimply.

CHO It appears, then, there are other things hotter than fire; and in our state words more shameless than the shameless;¹ and the affair, then, not so trifling a one. But attack him, and twist him about; do nothing in a small way: for now he is held by the middle. Since if now you hide² him in the onset, you will find him a craven; for I know his disposition.

S. S. Yet, nevertheless, this fellow, though he has been such a one during the whole of his life, then³ appeared to be a hero, when he reaped the harvest of another. And now he has bound in the wooden collar, and is drying, and wishing to sell those ears of corn which he brought from thence.

CLE. I fear you not as long as the senate subsists, and the face of Demus⁴ remains stolid.

CHO. What impudence he has for every thing! and changes nothing of his present⁵ colour! If I do not hate you, may I become a sheep-skin of Cratinus,⁶ and may I be taught to sing the songs in a tragedy of Morsimus.⁷

CLE. By Neptune, ye certainly shall not surpass me in impudence; or never may I be present at the sacrificial feast of Jupiter, who presides over the market-place.

S. S. By the thumps, which I have many times,⁴ indeed, and on many occasions, endured from my childhood, and by the strokes of the knives, I fancy I shall surpass you in these, or to no purpose should I be grown to this size by feeding on finger-muffins.⁵

CLE. On finger-muffins, like a dog? O thou most villanous, how then, fed on dog's meat, shall you battle with a dog-faced baboon?

S. S. And, by Jove, there are other knavish tricks of mine, too, when I was a child; for I used to deceive the butchers by saying such words, "Look, boys! do you not see? early spring is come. There's a swallow!" They looked, and I in the mean time used to steal some meat.⁶

⁶ "Then there were other petty tricks, I practised as a child; Haunting about the butchers' shops, the weather being mild."

CHO. O most clever meat! shrewdly did you plan beforehand! You stole before the swallows, as if eating nettles.¹

S. S. And I used to escape notice too, when doing this. At any rate, if any of them were to see me, I used to hide it in my drawers, and deny it upon oath of the gods, so that an orator,² having seen me doing this, exclaimed, "This boy will certainly rule the people."

CHO. Aye, he conjectured it well: but it is clear from what he drew his inference; because you perjured yourself after stealing, and your drawers had the meat.

CLE. I will make you cease from your impudence,—or rather, I fancy, both of you: for I will issue forth against you, coming down³ now fresh and mighty, confounding at the same time both land and sea at random.

S. S. And I will furl my sausages and then commit myself to the favouring waves,⁴ having bid you a long farewell.

DEM. And I, if it leak at all, will watch the bilge-water.

CLE. By Ceres, you certainly shall not go off unpunished, after having stolen many talents of the Athenians.

CHO. Look sharp, and slack away the sheet!⁵ since now this north-easter is even blowing informations.

S. S. I well know that you have ten talents from Potidæa.

S. S. I assert that your grandfather was one of the body-guards.

CLE. What body-guards? Explain.

S. S. Of Byrsina, the mother of Hippias.³

CLE. You are an impudent rogue.

S. S. You are a villain.

CHO. Strike manfully. [They all fall on him and beat him.]

CLE. Alas! alas! The conspirators are beating me.

CHO. Strike him most manfully, and punch him in the belly, both with your guts and with your tripe, and see that you punish the fellow. O thou most noble bit of flesh, and bravest of all in soul, and who hast appeared⁴ a saviour of the state, and of us the citizens, how well and cunningly with your words you supplanted the fellow! Would I could praise thee as much as we are delighted.⁵

CHO. Bravo! bravo! Forge in return for his gluings.³

S. S. And in return⁴ men from thence join in welding it; and neither by giving silver or gold, or by sending friends, shall you persuade me, so that I shall not denounce these things to the Athenians.

CLE. I therefore will go forthwith to the senate, and tell them of the conspiracies of you all, and your nightly meetings in the city, and all that ye are plotting with the Medes⁵ and the king of Persia, and these transactions which are being concocted amongst the Bœotians.⁶

S. S. What, then, is the price of cheese among the Bœotians?⁷

S. S. Well, I will go: but first I will lay down my puddings and my knives here, just as I am.

CHO. Stop now, anoint your neck with this, that you may be able to slip out of his calumnies. [Hands him a flask of oil.]

S. S. Well, you say this well, and like a gymnastic master.

CHO. Stop now, take and eat up this. [Hands him a head of garlic.]

S. S. Why, pray?

CHO. In order that you may fight the better, my friend, having been primed with garlic. And now² hasten quickly.

S. S. I do so.

CHO. Remember now to bite, to libel, to eat up his crests; and see that you come back again, having devoured his wattles. But go, and joy³ be with you, and may you succeed according to my wish, and may Jove, who presides over the market-place, protect you; and when you have conquered, may you come back again to us from thence besprinkled with chaplets. PARABASIS.

If any of the old comic writers had been for compelling us to come forward to the audience to recite his verses, he would not easily have obtained this. But now our poet is worthy of it, inasmuch as he hates the same with us, and dares to say what is just, and nobly advances against the Typhon, and the hurricane.¹ But with respect to what² he says many of you coming to him wonder at, and inquire about, that he did not long since ask for a chorus³ for himself, about this matter he bade us explain to you. For the man says that he did not make the delay because he was affected in this way by want of understanding, but because he thought the comic poet's art to be the most difficult task of all; for that, after many, indeed, had courted her, she had granted favours to few; and because he long since perceived that you were in nature changing with the year,⁴ and betrayed⁵ the former poets as soon as they grew old. On the one hand⁶ knowing what Magnes suffered, as soon as grey hairs came upon him, who set up very many trophies of victory over the choruses of his rivals; and though he uttered every kind of sound,⁷ both "Harping," and "Fluttering," and representing the "Lydians," and playing the "Fig-fly," and dyeing himself a "Frog colour," did not suffice; but at last, in his old age, for it had not been so in his youth,⁸ he was driven off the stage, when he

And it was not permitted to sing any thing at a banquet except "Oh fig-sандаled² Doro," and "builders³ of ingenious songs;" so much did he flourish. But now, when you see him in his dotage, you do not pity him, since the pegs fall out,⁴ and the tone is no longer there, and the harmony is dissonant.⁵ But old as he is, he wanders about like Connas,⁶ having, it is true, a withered chaplet, but dying with thirst; who ought to drink in the Prytaneum on account of his former victories, and not to be doting, but in splendid apparel to be a spectator⁷ beside the statue of Bacchus. And remembering⁸ what bursts of displeasure and abuse of yours Crates endured, who gave you a breakfast at a slight expense, and sent you home, kneading the wittiest thoughts with a most clear-sounding voice. And yet he only just held out, at one time falling, at another not. Dreading this, he⁹ always hesitated, and in addition to this used to say, a man should first be a rower ere he set his hand

Therefore, on account of all these things, because he acted modestly, and did not¹ foolishly rush in and talk nonsense, raise for him shouts of applause in abundance, and waft him a good Lenæan cheer with eleven oars,² that your poet may depart in joy, having succeeded according to his wish, joyous with smiling countenance.

O Neptune, equestrian king, whom the clatter of brazen-hoofed horses, and their neighing delights, and dark-beaked swift triremes manned with mercenaries,³ and the contest of youths who distinguish themselves in the chariot race, and of youths who are grievously unlucky, come hither to our chorus, O thou of the golden trident, O thou ruler of dolphins, thou who art worshipped at Sunium,⁴ O god of Geræstus,⁵ child of Cronos, and most dear to Phormio,⁶ and to the Athenians at present above the other gods.

We wish to eulogize our fathers, because they were men worthy of this land and of the peplos,⁷ who ever every where victorious in land-fights and in naval actions, adorned this city. For none of them ever at any time, when he saw his foes, counted them; but his spirit was immediately on its guard. And if, by chance, they fell upon their shoulders in any fight, they used to wipe this off, and then deny they had fallen, and go on wrestling again. The Corinthian expedition, to which reference is made, took place in the previous summer, and was attended by 200 cavalry in horse-transports." Walsh. Cf. Thirlwall, Hist. Greece, iii. p. 252; Böckh's P. E. A. vol. i. p. 384.

cups,¹ others garlic and onions. Then they took their oars² like us men, and laid to them, and shouted aloud for joy,—“Gee wo ho!”³ Who will lay to? We must take better hold. What are we about? Won’t you row, you Samphoras?”⁴ and leapt ashore at Corinth. Then the youngest set a digging beds with their hoofs, and went to fetch bed-clothes. And they ate crabs⁵ instead of Median grass, if any crept out of doors, even searching for them in the deep; so that Theorus⁶ declared a Corinthian crab said—“It is dreadful, O Neptune, if neither in the deep,⁷ nor on land, nor in the sea I shall be able to escape the Knights.”

SAUSAGE-SELLER, CLEON, DEMUS.

CHO. O dearest and stoutest of men, how much anxiety in your absence have you given us! And now, since you have come back safe, tell us how you contested the matter.

S. S. What else,⁸ but that I became conqueror of the senate?

CHO. Now, then, it is meet for all to shout for joy. O thou who speakest noble words, but hast done deeds still far superior to your words! would that you would go over all the details clearly to me! since methinks I would⁹ even travel a long journey, so as to hear.—Wherefore, my good sir, speak with confidence, since we all are delighted with you.

S. S. Well now, ’tis worth while to hear the circumstances: for I rushed directly after him from hence. He then within making words break forth, hurled like thunder, was hurling them at the Knights, playing the marvellous, blurring out precipices, and calling¹ them conspirators most plausibly; while the whole Senate, listening to him, got crammed by him with false-orach, and looked mustard,² and contracted their brows. And I, just when I perceived that they were approving³ of his words, and deceived by his impositions—"Come now, ye Lechers, and Impostors," said I, "and Boobies, and mischievous Goblins, and God of Impudence, and thou Market-place, in which I was educated when a child, now give me impudence, and a ready tongue, and a shameless voice." As I was musing thus, a lewd fellow broke wind on my right; and I did reverence.⁴ Then with my buttocks I struck and broke the barriers, and gaping wide, shouted aloud, "O Senate, I bring you good news, and wish to announce the glad tidings first to you. For since what time the war broke out, I never at any time saw anchovies cheaper." Immediately they made their faces quite calm, and then were for crowning me for the good news. And I having hastily invented a secret plan, in order that they might purchase the anchovies in great numbers for an obol, told them to seize the dishes of the artificers.⁵ And they applauded vehemently, and gaped at me. So he, the Paphlagonian, having perceived it, and knowing in what speeches the Senate most delights, made a proposal: "Sirs, I now move, that on the occasion of the happy events which have been announced to us, we sacrifice a hundred oxen⁶ to the goddess for the good news." ⁶ It was the custom to burn only the thighs and fat. The rest was eaten by the people. It thus became the interest of the poorer Athenians to be very religious, inasmuch as the cost of these entertainments fell upon the wealthy citizens. To such an extent, indeed, were these legalized robberies carried, that the sale of the skins of the victims formed a considerable item of the public revenue, under the head of skin-money (τὸ δερματικόν).

the Senate inclined towards him. And I, just when I perceived I was overcome by the ox-dung, overshot him with two hundred oxen;¹ and advised to make a vow to sacrifice a thousand goats to Diana on the morrow, if sprats went at a hundred for the obol. Again the Senate looked eagerly at me. And when he heard this, being struck with astonishment, babbled nonsense; and then the Prytanes and the Police began to drag him out, while they stood and wrangled about the anchovies. But he besought them "to wait a short time, in order that you may hear² what the herald from Lacedæmon says, for he has come treating of peace." But they all cried out with one mouth,—“Now do they talk of peace? Aye, poor fool, since they have heard that anchovies are cheap with us. We don't want peace; let the war go on.” And they shouted that the Prytanes should dismiss the assembly. Then they leaped over the barriers in every direction. While I slipped out and bought up all the coriander-seed, and the leeks, as much as there was in the market: and then gave it gratis to them who were in want, as seasoning to the anchovies, and made presents of it. So they all praised me above measure, and caressed me to such a degree, that I have come, having gained over the whole senate for an obol-worth³ of coriander-seed.

CHO. Of a truth you have acted in every respect⁴ as becomes a man favoured of fortune. The villain has found another adorned with much greater rascalities and artful deceptions and wily words. But take care that you contest what remains in the best manner possible; and you know long ago that you have us as your friendly allies.

CHO. Now it behoves you to let out every rope,² and to carry an impetuous spirit and arguments, admitting no escape, wherewith you shall overcome him: for the man is crafty, and devises efficient contrivances out of impracticable ones.³ Wherefore take care that you go forth vehement and fresh⁴ against the man. But be on your guard, and ere he comes up to you, do you first raise aloft⁵ your dolphins, and put forward your pinnacle.

CLE. I pray to our mistress Minerva, who rules over our city, that, if I am the best man towards the Athenian people, next to Lysicles,⁶ and Cynna, and Salabaccho, I may, as now, dine in the Prytaneum, without having done any thing for it. CLE. Why, how¹ can there be a citizen, Demus, who loves you more than I do? who in the first place, when I was a senator, collected very much money in the treasury, by torturing some, strangling others, and begging of others; not caring for any private man, provided I gratified you.

S. S. This, Demus, is no way grand; for I will do this to you. For I will snatch away and serve up to you other people's loaves.² But I will first teach you this very thing, that he neither loves you, nor is well-disposed towards you, except on account of this very thing, that he enjoys your fire-side. For he does not care about your sitting so uncomfortably upon the rocks, who fought to the death with the Persians at Marathon for our country, and when victorious, permitted us to bepraise it mightily.³ Not like me, who have sewed and brought you this cushion. Come, raise yourself, and then sit down at your ease, that you may not gall that which fought at Salamis.⁴ [Slips a soft cushion under Demus.] where there hath appeared a man who fights more for the people, or loves you more than I.

S. S. Why, how love you him? who, though you see him dwelling for the eighth year¹ in the casks and crannies and little turrets, do not pity him, but shut him in and plunder his hive. And when Archeptolemus² was offering peace, you scattered it abroad; and you drive away the embassies from the city, slapping them on the buttocks, who make proposals of peace.

CLÉ. Aye, that he may rule over all the Greeks; for it is in the oracles, "that this man must some time or other act the Heliast in Arcadia at³ five obols a day, if he bide his time." At all events, I will nourish and tend him, finding out by fair means or foul, whence he shall receive the three obols.

S. S. Not taking thought, by Jove, that he may rule over Arcadia, but that you may plunder the more, and receive bribes from the cities; and that Demus by reason of the war and the mist, may not observe your knavish tricks,⁴ but through necessity, at the same time, and need, and pay, may gape at you. But if ever he return to the country and spend his time in peace,⁵ and eat his toasted groats and regain his courage, and come to a conversation with oil-cake, he will perceive what blessings you swindled him out of by your system of pay; and then he will come against you fierce and rough, searching for a pebble against you. Of which being aware, you impose upon him, and cheat⁶ him by dreams about yourself.

¹ This reckoning is made from the battle of Potidæa, B. C. 432, at which period the Athenians were first engaged in actual service. CLE. Is it not then, pray, a shameful thing that you should say this of me, and calumniate me before the Athenians and Demus, who have already, by Ceres, done far more good services to the state than Themistocles?

S. S. "O city of Argos, hear what he says."¹ Do you match yourself with Themistocles? who made our city full, when he found it up to the brim, and in addition to this kneaded up the Piræus beside for it while it was at breakfast,² and having taken away nothing of the old, set before it new fishes.—But you sought to make the Athenians citizens of a petty town,³ by dividing the town⁴ with a wall, and uttering oracles, you who match yourself with Themistocles! And he is an exile from his country, while you wipe your hands on cakes of fine barley.⁵

CLE. Is it not then a shameful thing, O Demus, that I should be called these names by this fellow, because I love you?

DEM. Stop, stop,⁶ you fellow, and don't talk Billingsgate. For much too long a time and even now have you been acting underhand without my knowing it.⁷

S. S. He is a most abominable fellow, my little Demus, and one who commits very many knavish tricks, whenever you yawn;¹ and he crops the stalks of those under account and swallows them down, and with both hands ladles out the public money.

CLE. You shall not escape with impunity, but I will convict you of stealing thirty thousand drachmæ.

S. S. Why do you make much ado about nothing, and make a splash, you who are most abominable towards the Athenian people?² And, by Ceres, I will prove,³ or may I not live, that you have received as a bribe more than forty minæ from Mitylene.

CHO. O thou who hast appeared the greatest advantage to all men!⁴ I envy you for your fluency of speech; for if you shall attack him in this way, you will be the greatest of the Greeks, and alone will bear sway in the city, and rule over the allies, having a trident, shaking and disturbing,⁵ with which you will make much money. And do not let the man go, since he has given you a hold, for you will easily make an end of him, with such sides as yours.

CLE. These matters, good sirs, are not yet come to this, by Neptune; for I have wrought such a work, so as to curb my enemies every one,⁶ so long as any thing is left of the bucklers captured at Pylos.

³ There is no necessity to alter the reading to ἀποδείξω, with Walsh, (notes, p. 264,) for ἐπιδείξω occurs again in the same sense, Av. 483. S. S. Stop at your bucklers, for you have given me a handle. For you ought not, if indeed you love the people, purposely to have let them be dedicated together with the handles. But this, Demus, is a device, that, if you wish to punish this fellow here, it may not be in your power; for you see what a troop of young tanners are with him; and around these dwell sellers of honey and sellers of cheese. Now this body is leagued together; so that if you were to snort with anger, and look ostracism,¹ they would pull down the bucklers by night, and run and seize the entrances for importing your barley.

DEM. Ah me, miserable man! Why, have² they handles? You rascal, how long a time you have been cheating me, deluding me in such a manner!

CLE. My good sir, be not led³ away by every speaker, nor think that you will ever find a better friend than I, who with my single hand put down the conspirators. And no conspiracy arises in the city without my perceiving it, but I bawl out that instant.

S. S. For you are circumstanced like those who fish for eels.⁴ When the lake is still, they catch nothing; but if they stir the mud up and down, they take. And you catch, if you disturb the city. But just answer me this single question: though you sell so many hides, have you ever⁵ given to this man here a sole from your private stock for his slippers, you who profess to love him?

DEM. Certainly not, by Apollo.

S. S. Then have you perceived, pray, what sort of a fellow he is? But I have bought this pair of shoes for you, and give them you to wear. [Gives him a pair of shoes.]

¹ This is by no means the literal meaning of the phrase. See Liddell, voc. δοτράκινδα.

² "Have handles," means ready for use. Government shields had their handles taken off, that they might not be made use of for tumults, attacks on the democracy, &c. Droysen understands shields taken in battle and hung up as trophies.

DEM. I judge you to be the best man towards the people of all I know, and very well disposed towards the city, and towards my toes.

CLE. Is it not then, pray, a shameful thing that slippers should have so much power, and that you should have no recollection of all the kind offices I have done you? who put a stop to the lewd people, having utterly destroyed Gryttus.

S. S. Is it not then, pray, a shameful thing that you should watch them so,¹ and put a stop to the lewd people? It must be that through envy you stopped them, lest they might become orators. And though you saw this man without a tunic at his time of life, you never at any time deemed Demus worthy of a sleeved-coat, though it were winter. But I present you with this one here. [Gives him a coat.]

DEM. Themistocles never once thought of such a device. And yet that device of his, too, was a clever one, his Piræus. Yet, however, it does not appear to me to be a greater contrivance than the coat.

CLE. Ah me, miserable man! with what jackanape's tricks you harass me!

S. S. Not so; but as is the case with a man in liquor when nature calls, I am using your manners² as I would your slippers.

CLE. You shall not surpass me in flattery, for I will put this on him besides. [Turning to the Sausage-seller.] A plague take you, you rascal!

DEM. Bah! will you not be gone, with a plague to you? smelling most abominably of the tan-yard.³

S. S. And on purpose, too, was he for putting this around

DEM. To be sure I know.

S. S. On purpose this fellow was anxious for it to be cheap, that you might buy and eat, and then the dicasts might kill each other² in the Helizæa with fizzling.

DEM. By Neptune, a stinkard also told this to me.³

S. S. Is it not the case that ye then became red with blushes with fizzling?

DEM. Aye, by Jove, this device was one of Pyrrandrus's.

CLE. With what ribaldry you worry me, you villain!

S. S. For the goddess bade me conquer you with quackery.

CLE. But you shall not conquer me. For I promise, O Demus, to supply you with a bowl of pay to gulp down,⁴ for doing nothing.

S. S. But I give you a gallipot and ointment, to smear over the slight sores on your shins. [Presents them.]

CLE. I will pluck out your grey hairs and make you a young man.

S. S. (offering a hare's scut). There, take a hare's scut⁵ to wipe your two little eyes.

CLE. After you have blown your nose, Demus, wipe your fingers upon my head.

S. S. Nay rather, upon mine.

CLE. You shall give me proper satisfaction,² being pressed down by my taxes, for I will exert myself that you may be enrolled among the rich.³

S. S. I will utter no threats; but I wish you the following: that your frying-pan of cuttle-fish may stand over the fire frizzling, and that you, about to move a decree concerning the Milesians,⁴ and to gain a talent if you effect your object, may hasten to fill yourself with the⁵ cuttle-fish before you go to the assembly; and then, before you've eaten them, may a man come to fetch you, and may you, wishing to get the talent, be choked with eating.

CLE. Take it: but know thus much, that if you will not permit me to be overseer, some other again more villanous than I will appear.

DEM. It is not possible that this ring is mine. At all events, the device appears different, unless² I do not see distinctly.

S. S. Come, let me see. What was your device?

DEM. A roasted olio of bull's fat.³

S. S. There is not this in it.

DEM. Not the olio? What then?⁴

S. S. A gaping cormorant haranguing upon a rock.⁵

DEM. Alas, miserable man!

S. S. What is the matter?

DEM. Take it out of the way: he had not mine, but that of Cleonymus.⁶ But do you receive this from me, and be my steward.

CLE. Not yet, pray, O master, I entreat you, until you hear my oracles.

S. S. And mine then.

CLE. But if you accede to this fellow, you must become a mere hide.⁷

S. S. Certainly.

DEM. And do you then bring yours.

CLE. Very well.³

S. S. Very well, by Jove: there's nothing to hinder you.⁴
[Cleon and the S. S. hurry out.]

CHO. Most sweet will be the light of day to all those present, and to those who are⁵ coming, if Cleon perish. And yet I heard some very crabbed⁶ old fellows disputing in the Law Exchange,⁷ that if this fellow had not become great in the state, there would not have been two useful utensils, a pestle⁸ or a ladle. But this also I wonder at in his swinish musical taste; for the boys who went to school with him say that he constantly adapted his lyre to the Dorian⁹ mode alone, and was not willing to learn any other. And then, that the harp-master,¹⁰ being enraged, gave orders to take him away, "since this youth is not able to learn any mode, except the Bribery-mode." [Re-enter Cleon and S. S., both heavily laden with papers.]

CLEON, SAUSAGE-SELLER, DEMUS, CHORUS.

CLE. There, see! and yet I bring not all out!

S. S. Ah me, how I want to ease myself, and yet I bring not all out.

DEM. What are these?

CLE. Oracles.

DEM. All?

CLE. Do you wonder? By Jove, I have still a chest full.

S. S. And I have an upper-room and two out-houses full.

DEM. Come, let me see: why, whose in the world are the oracles?

CLE. Mine are Bacis's.¹

DEM. And whose are yours?

S. S. Glanis's, elder brother of Bacis.

DEM. What are they about?

CLE. About Athens, about Pylos, about you, about me, about every thing.

DEM. And what are yours about?

S. S. About Athens, about lentil-broth, about the Lacedæmonians, about fresh mackerel, about those who measure their barley unfairly in the market-place, about you, about me.—May this here fellow tumble and tread on his nose!

DEM. Come now, see that you read them to me, and that notable² one about me, with which I am delighted, "That I shall become an eagle³ in the clouds."

CLE. Hear now, and give me your attention. [Unrolls his papers.] "Son of Erectheus, take heed of the way of the oracles,⁴ which Apollo uttered for you from the sanctuary by means of highly-prized tripods. He ordered you to preserve the sacred dog⁵ with jagged teeth, who by snarling in your defence and barking dreadfully in your behalf, will provide you pay; and if he do not this, he will perish. For many daws, through hatred, croak at him."

DEM. By Ceres, I do not know what these things mean. For what has Erectheus¹ to do with jackdaws and a dog?

CLE. I am the dog, for I howl in your defence, and Phœbus ordered you to preserve me, your dog.

S. S. The oracle does not say this, but this here dog gnaws at the oracles, as he does your door. For I have it correctly about this dog.²

DEM. Read it, then: but first I'll take a stone, lest the oracle about the dog bite me.³

S. S. "Beware, son of Erectheus, of the kidnapping dog Cerberus, who, fawning upon you with his tail, watching when you are dining, will consume your victuals, whenever you gape any other way: and he will often go secretly into your kitchen⁴ by night, like a dog, and lick clean your plates and islands."

DEM. Far better, O Glanis, by Neptune!⁵

CLE. Good sir, hear, and then decide:—"There is a woman, and she shall bring forth a lion in sacred Athens, who in behalf of the people shall fight with many gnats, as if defending⁶ his whelps. Him do thou guard, having made a wooden wall and iron towers."⁷ Do you know what these mean?

DEM. How then did the god declare this?

S. S. He bade you bind this fellow here in the five-holed pillory.³

DEM. These⁴ oracles seem to me soon about to be accomplished.

CLE. Do not believe him; for envious crows croak at me. But love the hawk, remembering him in your mind, who bound and brought you the young ravens of the Lacedæmonians.⁵

S. S. Assuredly the Paphlagonian hazarded this when he was drunk.⁶ O foolish son of Cecrops, why do you consider this deed a great one? "Even a woman can bear a burden, when a man may put it upon her;" but she cannot fight, for she would⁷ be in a fright if she were to fight.

CLE. But take heed of this—a Pylos in front of a Pylos, which he declared to you. "There is a Pylos in front of a Pylos."

S. S. "Son of Ægeus, beware of the dog-fox, lest it deceive you, biting² in secret, swift of foot, the crafty thief, cunning." Do you know what this is?

DEM. Philostratus the dog-fox.³

S. S. He does not say this; but this fellow here is always asking for swift ships to levy tribute: these Loxias forbids you to⁴ grant him.

DEM. How, pray, is a trireme a dog-fox?

S. S. How? Because your trireme and your dog are swift.

DEM. How, then, was "fox" added to "dog?"

S. S. He compared the soldiers to little foxes,⁵ because they eat the clusters of grapes in the farms.

DEM. Well, where is the pay for these little foxes?

S. S. I will supply it, and that too within three days.⁶ But further, hearken to this oracle, in which the son of Latona ordered you to beware of Cyllene,⁷ lest she deceive you?

DEM. What Cyllene?

S. S. He rightly represented this fellow's hand as a "Cyllene," because he says "put into my bent hand."⁸

S. S. For I also⁴ have one, which says you shall rule both over the land and the Red Sea too, and that you shall give judgment at Ecbatana, licking up seed-cakes.

CLE. But I have seen a vision, and the goddess herself appeared to me to pour health and wealth over the people with a ladle.

S. S. Yes, by Jove, for I also have seen one; and the goddess herself appeared to me to come from the citadel, and an owl to be sitting upon her, and then to pour upon each head with a bucket—ambrosia over thee—over this fellow garlick-pickle.

DEM. Huzza! huzza! No one then, it appears, is wiser than Glanis.⁵ Accordingly, now I here commit myself to you, to guide me in my dotage and educate me afresh.

CLE. Nay, not yet, I beseech you, but stop, since I will provide you with barley and sustenance every day.

DEM. I cannot bear to hear of barley: often have I been deceived by you and Thuphanes.⁶

CHO. O Demus, you possess a fine sovereignty, when all men dread you as a tyrant. Yet you are easily led by the nose, and you delight in being flattered¹ and cajoled, and gape open-mouthed at whoever happens to be² speaking, and your mind, though present, is abroad.³

DEM. There is no sense in your looks,⁴ when you think me not to be in my sound senses. But I drivel thus on purpose. For I myself delight to cry for drink every day, and wish to bring up a⁵ thievish minister, and him, when he is glutted, I take up and strike.

S. S. Ah me! whence shall I have hare's flesh? Soul of mine, now devise some low trick!

CLE. (holding up the basket). Do you see this, you poor wretch?

S. S. I care little. For, see! yonder² people are coming to me!

CLE. What people?

S. S. Ambassadors with purses of money.

CLE. (looking round). Where? where?

S. S. What's that to you? Won't you let the foreigners alone? [Steals the hare's flesh.] My little Demus, do you see the hare's flesh which I am bringing to you?

CLE. Ah me, miserable! Unjustly have you filched away what was mine.

S. S. Aye, by Neptune,³ for you also did so to the prisoners at Pylos.

DEM. (laughing). Tell me, I entreat you; how did you contrive to steal it?

S. S. The device was the goddess's—the theft mine.⁴

CLE. But I ran the hazard.

S. S. And I roasted it.

DEM. (to Cleon). Be off! For⁵ the thanks belong to him who served it up.

CLE. Ah me,⁶ unhappy! I shall be surpassed in impudence.

S. S. Why do you not decide, Demus, which of us two is the better man towards you and towards your belly?

DEM. By the use of what proof, pray, shall I appear to the audience to decide between you wisely?

DEM. Come, let me see; what, then, is there in it?

S. S. (opening the chest). Do you not see that it is empty, dear little papa? for I have set all before you.

DEM. This chest is a friend of the people.

S. S. At any rate, walk this way also to that of the Paphlagonian. [Opens Cleon's chest.] Do you see these?

DEM. Ah me, the number¹ of good things with which it is filled! What a prodigious cheese-cake he has stowed away! while he cut off and gave me only this tiny bit.

S. S. Such things, however, he used to do aforetime also; he used to offer you a little of what he received, but used to set before himself the greater part.

DEM. O abominable fellow! did you deceive me then, in stealing these? "while I crowned you and² made you presents."

CLE. I stole for the good of the state.³

DEM. Quickly lay down the chaplet, that I may put it upon this man.

S. S. Lay it down quickly, you knave!⁴

CLE. Certainly not, since I have a Pythian oracle, which mentions by whom alone I must be conquered.

S. S. Aye, which mentions my name, and very distinctly.

CLE. Well now, I wish to examine you by a test, if in any wise you shall agree⁵ with the oracles of the god. And first I will inquire of you thus much: To what teacher's school did you go when a child?

S. S. I was taught with cuffs in the singeing-pits.⁶

CLE. Ah me, unhappy! "No longer am I aught. Very slender is the hope upon which we ride."⁴ And tell me thus much: did you sell sausages, pray, in the market-place, or at the gates?⁵

S. S. At the gates, where the dried fish is sold.

CLE. Ah me! the oracle of the god is accomplished! "Roll within this wretched man."⁶ My chaplet, fare thee well! albeit⁷ I leave thee unwillingly. Some other one will take and possess thee: a greater thief he cannot be; more fortunate, perhaps, he may.⁸ [Exit Cleon.]

Now he is not only vile—for I should not even have heard of him, if he had been only this, nor yet most villanous, but he has also invented something besides.² For he employs himself in committing unheard-of obscenities, composing Polymnestean poems and associating with Oionichus.³ Whoever, therefore, does not detest such a fellow exceedingly, shall never drink out of the same cup with us.

Of a truth⁴ I have oftentimes been engaged in nightly meditations, and have sought whence in the world Cleonymus feeds poorly. For they say that he,⁵ feeding on the property of the rich, would not come forth from the cupboard; while the others nevertheless used⁶ to entreat him: "Come, lord, by thy knees, come forth and pardon the table."

They say that the triremes came together for a conference with each other, and that one of them said, who was more advanced in years, "Have ye not heard, ye virgins, these doings in the city? They say that a certain person requires a hundred of us for Chalcedon, a rascally citizen, sour-tempered⁷ Hyperbolus." THE ARGUMENT.

STREPSIADES, a wealthy cultivator of the soil in the district of Cicynna, has been reduced to poverty by the extravagance of his son. He has heard of the new and wonderful art of reasoning, by which the Sophists professed to make the worse appear the better cause; and hopes that, under the tuition of Socrates, he may attain to such skill and dexterity of arguing as will enable him to elude the actions for debt, with which he is threatened by his creditors. All attempts to make him acquainted with the subtleties of the new philosophy are found to be vain; and his son Phidippides is substituted in his stead, as a more hopeful pupil. The youth gives rapid proof of his proficiency, by beating his father, on their next interview, and then attempting to demonstrate to him that this proceeding is right and lawful. The eyes of the foolish old man are opened to the wickedness of the new doctrines, and the imposture of their professors. He sets fire to the school of Socrates; and the play ends, like most of our modern melodramas, with a grand conflagration. This comedy was first represented at the Great Festival of Bacchus, (March, B. C. 423,) when Aristophanes was beaten by Cratinus and Amipsias, through the intrigues of Alcibiades, who perceived himself aimed at in the character of Phidippides. Aristophanes was now in his twenty-first year. In consequence of this defeat, he prepared a second edition, which, we are told, was exhibited with an equal want of success the following year. But it is now well ascertained that the play we now have was the original first edition, with a new Address, and a few other unimportant alterations perhaps, and that it was never completed for the stage. At all events, it mentions Cleon (vs. 591—594) as still living, who died in the summer of B. C. 422, while the Address quotes (vs. 553) he "Maricas" of Eupolis, which was not exhibited till B. C. 421.

Schlegel (Dramatic Lit. p. 156) remarks, "The most honourable testimony in favour of Aristophanes is that of the sage Plato, who transmitted the Clouds (this very play, in which, with the meshes of the sophists, philosophy itself, and even his master Socrates, was attacked) to Dionysius the elder, with the remark, that from it he would be best able to understand the state of things at Athens."

ΑΗ me! ah me! O king Jupiter, of what a terrible length the nights are!¹ Will it never be day? And yet² long since I heard the cock. Who adds in a note, “The Athenians had granted them certain exemptions for their services on board the fleet.” Voss observes, “they were in the habit of going over to the enemy, when too harshly treated.” Cf. Pax, 451.

But I am not able, miserable man, to sleep, being tormented by my expenses, and my stud of horses, and my debts, through this son of mine. He with his long hair,¹ is riding horses and driving curricles, and dreaming of horses; while I am driven to distraction, as I see the moon² bringing on the twentieths; for the interest is running on.—Boy! light a lamp, and bring forth my tablets, that I may take them and read to how many I am indebted, and calculate the interest. [Enter boy with a light and tablets.] Come, let me see; what do I owe? Twelve minæ to Pasiæ. Why³ twelve minæ to Pasiæ? Why did I borrow them? When I bought the blood-horse.⁴ Ah me, unhappy! Would that it had had its eye knocked⁵ out with a stone first!

PHID. (talking in his sleep). You are acting unfairly, Philo!⁶ Drive on your own course.

STREP. This⁷ is the bane which has destroyed me; for even in his sleep he dreams about horsemanship.

PHID. How⁸ many courses will the war-chariots run?

STREP. Many courses do you drive me, your father.—But what debt⁹ came upon me after Pasiæ? Three minæ to Amynias for a little chariot and pair of wheels.

PHID. Lead the horse home, after having given him a good rolling.

See note on Lys. 940. Cf. Eccles. 938

PHID. (awaking). Pray, father, why are you peevish, and toss about the whole night?

STREP. A bailiff¹ out of the bed-clothes is biting me.

PHID. Suffer me, good sir, to sleep a little.

STREP. Then, do you sleep on; but know that all these debts will turn on your head. [Phidippides falls asleep again.] Alas! would that the match-maker² had perished miserably, who induced me to marry your mother. For a country life used to be most agreeable to me, dirty, untrimmed, reclining at random, abounding in bees, and sheep, and oil-cake. Then I, a rustic, married a niece of Megacles, the son of Megacles, from the city, haughty, luxurious, and Cœsyraffied.³ When I married her, I lay with her redolent of new wine, of the cheese-crate, and abundance of wool; but she, on the contrary, of ointment, saffron, wanton-kisses, extravagance, gluttony, and of Colias and Genetyllis.⁴ I will not indeed say that she was idle; but she wove. And I used to show her this cloak by way of pretext, and say, "Wife, you weave at a great rate." [Servant re-enters.]

For a time therefore we disputed; and then at length we agreed, and called him Phidippides.² She used to take this son and fondle him, saying, “When you, being grown up, shall drive your chariot to the city, like Megacles, with a xystis.”³ But I used to say, “Nay, rather, when dressed in a leathern jerkin, you shall drive your goats from Phelleus, like your father.”⁴ He paid no attention to my words, but⁴ poured a horse-fever over my property. Now therefore, by meditating the whole night, I have discovered one path for my course extraordinarily excellent; to which if I persuade this youth, I shall be saved. But first I wish to awake him. How then can I awake him in the most agreeable manner?—How? Phidippides, my little Phidippides?

PHID. What, father?

STREP. Kiss me, and give me your right hand!

PHID. There. What's the matter?

STREP. Tell me, do you love me?

PHID. Yes, by this Equestrian Neptune.⁵

STREP. Nay, do not by any means mention this Equestrian to me, for this god is the author of my misfortunes. But, if you really love me from your heart, my son, obey me.

PHID. In what then, pray, shall I obey you?

² Phidippides stands for Alcibiades, and Strepsiades for his uncle Pericles, who had himself been a pupil of Socrates, and involved in similar pecuniary embarrassments, in which he was assisted by the shrewd advice of his nephew, Alcibiades. Alcibiades' mother, Dinomache, was a daughter of Megacles, of the family of the Alcmaeonidae, from whom he inherited his passion for horses. See Suvern, Clouds, p. 46, foll. and 53, foll.

STREP. And will you obey me at all?

PHID. By Bacchus, I will obey you.

STREP. Look this way then! Do you see this little door and little house?

PHID. I see it. What then, pray, is this, father?

STREP. This is a thinking-shop¹ of wise spirits. There dwell men who in speaking of the heavens persuade people that it is an oven, and that it encompasses us, and that we are the embers. These men teach, if one give them money,² to conquer in speaking, right or wrong.

PHID. Who are they?

STREP. I do not know the name accurately. They are minute-philosophers,³ noble and excellent.

PHID. Bah! they are rogues; I know them. You mean the quacks, the pale-faced wretches, the bare-footed fellows, of whose number are the miserable Socrates and Chærephon.⁴

STREP. Hold! hold! be silent! Do not say any thing foolish. But, if you have any concern for your father's patrimony, become one of them, having given up your horsemanship.⁵

PHID. I would not, by Bacchus, if even you were to give me the pheasants⁶ which Leogoras rears!

¹ Or, as it is given by the translator of Süvern's Essay on The Clouds, the subtlety-shop.

STREP. Go, I entreat you, dearest of men, go and be taught.

PHID. Why, what shall I learn?

STREP. They say, that among them are both the two causes,—the better cause, whichever that is, and the worse: they say, that the one of these two causes, the worse, prevails, though it speaks on the unjust side. If therefore you learn for me this unjust cause, I would not pay to any one, not even an obolus of these debts, which I owe at present on your account.

PHID. I cannot comply; for I should not dare to look upon the Knights, having lost all my colour.

STREP. Then, by Ceres, you shall not eat any of my goods! neither you, nor your draught-horse, nor your blood-horse;¹ but I will drive you out of my house to the crows.

PHID. My uncle Megacles will not permit me to be without a horse. But I'll go in, and pay no heed to you.² [Exit Phidippides.]

STREP. Though fallen, still I will not lie prostrate: but having prayed to the gods, I will go myself to the thinking-shop and get taught. How then, being an old man, and having a bad memory, and dull of comprehension, shall I learn the subtleties of refined disquisitions?—I must go. Why thus do I loiter and not knock at the door? [Knocks at the door.] Boy! little boy!

² Cumberland has justly remarked, “If there is any thing in this scene open to critical reprehension, I conceive it to be, that the speakings of Strepsiades are of a higher cast here than in his succeeding dialogues with Socrates; where the poet (for the sake, no doubt, of contrasting his rusticity with the finesse of the philosopher) has lowered him to the style and sentiment of an arrant clown.”—The French critics compare Strepsiades with the “Bourgeois Gentilhomme” of Molière; but the inconsistency of character spoils the parallel. Strepsiades appears in the opening of this play with a strong dash of the bluntness, humour, and shrewdness of John Bull; but he soon degenerates into the stupidity and absurdity of the Pachter Feldkummel of German farce.

STREP. Strepsiades,¹ the son of Phidon, of Cicynna.

DIS. You are a stupid fellow, by Jove! who have kicked against the door so very carelessly, and have caused the miscarriage² of an idea which I had conceived.

STREP. Pardon me; for I dwell afar in the country.³ But tell me the thing which has been made to miscarry.

DIS. It is not lawful to mention it, except to disciples.

STREP. Tell it, then, to me without fear; for I here am come⁴ as a disciple to the thinking-shop.

DIS. I will tell you; but you must regard these as mysteries. Socrates lately asked Chærephon about⁵ a flea, how many of its own feet it jumped; for after having bit the eyebrow of Chærephon, it leapt away on to the head of Socrates.

STREP. How, then, did he measure this?

DIS. Most cleverly. He melted some wax, and then took the flea and dipped its feet in the wax; and then a pair of Persian slippers stuck to it when cooled. Having gently loosened these, he measured back the distance.

STREP. O king Jupiter! what⁶ subtlety of thought!

DIS. What then would you say, if you heard another contrivance of Socrates?

STREP. Of what kind? Tell me, I beseech you!

DIS. Chærephon the Sphettian asked him whether he thought gnats buzzed through the mouth or the breech.

³ As Strepsiades himself pleads his rusticity in excuse for the unmannerly vehemence with which he had assaulted the door of the Phrontisterium, Mr. Mitchell might have spared us the fanciful note, in which he reminds Schütz, "that Strepsiades is not a clown, but rather a country-gentleman, and that he approaches the door of Socrates with too deep a feeling of reverence to allow of any act of discourtesy on his part."

⁶ See note on Lys. 967.

STREP. What, then, did he say about the gnat?

DIS. He said the intestine of the gnat was narrow, and that the wind went forcibly through it, being slender, straight to the breech; and then that the rump, being hollow where it is adjacent to the narrow part, resounded through the violence of the wind.

STREP. The rump of gnats then is a trumpet! O thrice happy he for his sharp-sightedness!¹ Surely a defendant might easily get acquitted, who understands the intestine of the gnat.

DIS. But he was lately deprived of a great idea by a lizard.

STREP. In what way? Tell me.

DIS. As he was investigating the courses of the moon, and her revolutions, then as he was gaping upwards, a lizard in the darkness dinged upon him from the roof.

STREP. I am amused at a lizard's having dinged on Socrates.

DIS. Yesterday evening there was no supper for us.

STREP. Well. What then did he contrive for provisions?

DIS. He sprinkled fine ashes on the table, and bent a little spit, and then took it as a pair of compasses and filched a cloak from the Palæstra.²

STREP. Why then do we admire that Thales?³ Open, open quickly the thinking-shop, and show to me Socrates as quickly as possible. For I desire to be a disciple. Come, open the door.—[The door of the Thinking-shop opens, and the pupils of Socrates are seen all with their heads fixed on the ground, while Socrates himself is seen suspended in the air in a basket.] O Hercules, from what country are these wild beasts?

DIS. What do you wonder at? To what do they seem to you to be like?

STREP. To the Spartans, who were taken at Pylos.¹ But why in the world do these look upon the ground?

DIS. They are in search of the things below the earth.

STREP. Then they are searching for roots. Do not, then, trouble yourselves about this; for I know where there are large and fine ones. Why, what are these doing,² who are bent down so much?

DIS. These are groping about in darkness³ under Tartarus.

STREP. Why then does their rump look towards heaven?

DIS. It is getting taught astronomy alone by itself. [Turning to the pupils.] But go in, lest he meet with us.

STREP. Not yet, not yet: but let them remain, that I may communicate to them a little matter of my own.

DIS. It is not permitted to them to remain without in the open air for a very long time. [The pupils retire.]

STREP. (discovering a variety of mathematical instruments). Why, what is this, in the name of heaven?⁴ Tell me.

DIS. This is Astronomy.

STREP. But what is this?

DIS. Geometry.

STREP. You tell me a clever notion; for the contrivance¹ is democratic and useful.

DIS. (pointing to a map). See, here's a map of the whole earth. Do you see? this is Athens.

STREP. What say you? I don't believe you; for I do not see the Dicasts² sitting.

DIS. Be assured that this is truly the Attic territory.³

STREP. Why, where are my fellow-tribesmen of Cicynna?

DIS. Here they are. And Eubœa here, as you see, is stretched out a long way by the side of it to a great distance.

STREP. I know that; for it was stretched by us and Pericles.⁴ But where is Lacedæmon?

DIS. Where is it? Here it is.

STREP. How near it is to us! Pay great attention to this,⁵ to remove it very far from us.

DIS. By Jupiter, it is not possible.

STREP. Then you will weep for it. [Looking up and discovering Socrates.] Come, who is this man who is in the basket?

DIS. Himself.

STREP. Who's "Himself?"

DIS. Socrates.

[Exit disciple.]

STREP. Socrates! my little Socrates!

SOC. Why callest thou me, thou creature of a day?

STREP. First tell me, I beseech you, what you are doing.

SOC. I am walking in the air,² and speculating about the sun.

STREP. And so you look down upon³ the gods from your basket, and not from the earth? if, indeed, it is so.

SOC. For I should never have rightly discovered things celestial, if I had not suspended the intellect, and mixed the thought in a subtle form with its kindred air. But if, being on the ground, I speculated from below on things above, I should never have discovered them. For⁴ the earth forcibly attracts to itself the meditative moisture. Water-cresses also suffer⁵ the very same thing.

STREP. What do you say?—Does meditation attract the moisture to the water-cresses? Come then, my little Socrates, descend to me, that you may teach me those things, for the sake of which I have come. [Socrates lowers himself and gets out of the basket.]

SOC. And for what did you come?

STREP. Wishing to learn to speak; for, by reason of usury, and most ill-natured creditors, I am pillaged and plundered, and have my goods seized for debt.

SOC. How did you get in debt without observing it?

STREP. A horse-disease consumed me,—terrible at eating. But teach me the other one of your two causes,⁶ that which pays nothing; and I will swear by the gods, I will pay down to you whatever reward you exact of me.

STREP. By what do you swear? By iron money,¹ as in Byzantium?

SOC. Do you wish to know clearly celestial matters, what they rightly are?

STREP. Yes, by Jupiter, if it be possible!

SOC. And to hold converse with the Clouds, our divinities?

STREP. By all means.

SOC. (with great solemnity). Seat yourself, then, upon the sacred couch.

STREP. Well, I am seated!

SOC. Take, then, this chaplet.

STREP. For what purpose a chaplet?—Ah me! Socrates, see that you do not sacrifice me like Athamas!²

SOC. No; we do all these to those who get initiated.

STREP. Then, what shall I gain, pray?

SOC. You shall become in oratory a tricky knave, a thorough⁴ rattle, a subtle speaker.—But keep quiet.

STREP. By Jupiter, you will not deceive me; for if I am besprinkled, I shall become fine flour.

SOC. It becomes the old man to speak words of good omen, and to hearken to my prayer.—O sovereign King, immeasurable Air, who keepest the earth suspended, and thou bright Æther, and ye august goddesses, the Clouds sending thunder and lightning, arise, appear in the air, O mistresses, to your deep thinker.

Come, let us shake off the watery cloud from our immortal forms and survey the earth with far-seeing eye.

Soc. O ye greatly venerable Clouds, ye have clearly heard me when I called. [Turning to Strepsiades.] Did you hear the voice, and the thunder which bellowed at the same time, feared as a god ?

SOC. Don't scoff,¹ nor do what these poor-devil-poets do, but use words of good omen, for a great swarm of goddesses is in motion with their songs.

CHO. Ye rain-bringing virgins, let us come to the fruitful land of Pallas, to view the much-loved country of Cecrops abounding in brave men; where is reverence for sacred rites not to be divulged; where the house that receives the initiated is thrown open in holy mystic rites; and gifts to the celestial gods; and high-roofed temples, and statues; and most sacred processions in honour of the blessed gods; and well-crowned sacrifices to the gods, and feasts, at all seasons; and with the approach of spring the Bacchic festivity, and the rousings of melodious Choruses, and the loud-sounding music of flutes.

STREP. Tell me, O Socrates, I beseech you by Jupiter, who are these that have uttered this grand song? Are they some heroines?

SOC. By no means; but heavenly Clouds, great divinities to idle men;² who supply us with thought, and argument, and intelligence, and humbug, and circumlocution, and ability to hoax, and comprehension.

STREP. On this account therefore my soul, having heard their voice, flutters, and already seeks to discourse subtilely, and to quibble about smoke, and having pricked a maxim³ with a little notion, to refute the opposite argument. So that now I eagerly desire, if by any means it be possible, to see them palpably.

SOC. Look, then, hither, towards Mount Parnes;⁴ for now I behold them descending gently.

² "i. e. the sophists, among whom Socrates is made to reckon himself: they being idle persons, and taking no part in state affairs." Schütz.

⁴ "Now called Casha; lying to the south of Attica." Dindorf.

STREP. Pray, where? Show me.

SOC. See! there they come in very great numbers¹ through the hollows and thickets; there, obliquely.

STREP. What's the matter? for I can't see them.

SOC. By the entrance. [Enter Chorus.]

STREP. Now at length with difficulty I just see them.

SOC. Now at length you assuredly see them, unless you have your eyes running pumpkins.²

STREP. Yes, by Jupiter! O highly honoured Clouds, for now they cover all things.

SOC. Did you not, however, know, nor yet consider, these to be goddesses?

STREP. No, by Jupiter! but I thought them to be mist, and dew, and smoke.

SOC. For you do not know, by Jupiter, that these feed very many sophists, Thurian soothsayers, practisers of medicine, lazy-longhaired-onyx-ring-wearers,³ and song-twisters for the cyclic dances, and meteorological quacks. They feed idle people who do nothing, because such men celebrate them in verse.

STREP. For this reason, then, they introduced⁴ into their verses "the dreadful impetuosity of the moist whirling-bright clouds;"⁵ and "the curls of hundred-headed Typho;" and "the hard-blowing tempests;" and then, "aërial, moist;" "crooked-clawed birds, floating in air;" and "the showers of rain from dewy Clouds." And then, in return for these, they swallow "slices of great, fine mullets,⁶ and bird's-flesh of thrushes."

¹ "For the second αῦται, see Soph. Gr. Gr. § 163, n. 2." Felton. Cf. also Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 50, 11, 22, and § 51, 7, obs. 9.

² "λημῆς κολοκύνταις, to have rheum-drops in the eyes, as thick as gourds." Mitch. Cf. Liddell's Lex. voc. λημᾶω.

³ Voss has coined a similar German equivalent, Ringfingerigschlen-dergelockvolk.

⁶ The pike, or the conger, according to Liddell's Lex.

SOC. Is it not just,¹ however, that they should have their reward, on account of these?

STREP. Tell me, pray, if they are really Clouds, what ails them, that they resemble mortal women? For they are not such.

SOC. Pray, of what nature are they?

STREP. I do not clearly know: at any rate they resemble spread-out fleeces, and not women, by Jupiter! not a bit;² for these have noses.

SOC. Answer, then, whatever I ask you.

STREP. Then say quickly what you wish.

SOC. Have you ever, when you looked up, seen a cloud³ like to a centaur, or a panther, or a wolf, or a bull?

STREP. By Jupiter, have I! But what of that?⁴

SOC. They become all things, whatever they please. And then, if they see a person with long hair, a wild one of these⁵ hairy fellows, like the son of Xenophantes, in derision of his folly, they liken themselves to centaurs.

STREP. Why, what, if they should see Simon, a plunderer of the public property, what do they do?

"And proper fare;

² See Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 51, 13, obs. 3.

³ Porson has referred to parallel passages in Shakspeare, Swift, and Cicero. To Dobree we are indebted for the following extract, from the Worthy Communicant of Jeremy Taylor:—"We sometimes espie a bright cloud form'd into an irregular figure; when it is observed by unskilful and phantastic travellers, looks like a centaure to some, and as a castle to others: some tell that they saw an army with banners, and it signifies war; but another, wiser than his fellow, says it looks for all the world like a flock of sheep, and foretells plenty; and all the while it is nothing but a shining cloud, by its own mobility and the activity of the wind cast into a contingent and inartificial shape."

Soc. They suddenly become wolves, showing up his disposition.

STREP. For this reason, then, for this reason, when they yesterday saw Cleonymus the recreant, on this account they became stags, because they saw this most cowardly fellow.

Soc. And now too, because they saw Clisthenes, you observe, on this account they became women.

STREP. Hail therefore, O mistresses! And now, if ever ye did to any other, to me also utter a voice reaching to heaven, O all-powerful queens.

CHO. Hail, O ancient veteran, hunter after learned speeches! And thou, O priest of most subtle trifles! tell us what you require? For we would not hearken to any other of the present meteorological sophists, except to Prodicus;¹ to him, on account of his wisdom and intelligence; and to you, because you walk proudly in the streets, and cast your eyes askance, and endure many hardships with bare feet, and in reliance upon us lookest supercilious.²

STREP. O earth, what a voice! how holy, and dignified, and wondrous!

Soc. For, in fact, these alone are goddesses; and all the rest is nonsense.

STREP. But come, by the Earth, is not Jupiter,³ the Olympian, a god?

Soc. What⁴ Jupiter? Do not trifle. There is no Jupiter.

STREP. What do you say? Who rains, then? For first of all explain this to me.

Soc. These, to be sure. I will teach you it by powerful evidence. Come, where have you ever seen him raining at any time without Clouds? And yet he ought to rain in fine weather, and these to be absent.

STREP. By Apollo, of a truth you have rightly confirmed this by your present argument. And yet, before this, I really thought that Jupiter pissed through a sieve. Tell me who it is that thunders. This makes me tremble.

SOC. These, as they roll, thunder.

STREP. In what way? you all-daring man!¹

SOC. When² they are full of much water, and are compelled to be borne along, being necessarily precipitated when full of rain, then they fall heavily upon each other and burst and clap.

STREP. Who is it that compels them to be borne along? is it not Jupiter?

SOC. By no means, but æthereal Vortex.

STREP. Vortex? It had escaped my notice³ that Jupiter did not exist, and that Vortex now reigned in his stead. But you have taught me nothing as yet concerning the clap and the thunder.

SOC. Have you not heard me, that I said that the Clouds, when full of moisture, dash against each other, and clap by reason of their density?

STREP. Come, how am I to believe this?

SOC. I'll teach you from your own case. Were you ever, after being stuffed with broth at the Panathenæic festival, then disturbed in your belly, and did a tumult suddenly rumble through it?

STREP. Yes, by Apollo, and immediately the little broth plays the mischief with me, and is disturbed, and rumbles like thunder, and grumbles dreadfully: at first gently pappax, pappax; and then it adds papapappax; and when I go to stool, it thunders downright papapappax, as they do.

SOC. Consider, therefore, how you have trumpeted from a little belly so small: and how is it not probable that this air, being boundless, should thunder loudly?

STREP. For this reason, therefore, the two names also, Trump and Thunder, are similar to each other. But teach me this, whence comes the thunderbolt blazing with fire, and burns us to ashes when it smites us, and singes those who survive. For indeed Jupiter evidently hurls this at the perjured.

SOC. Why, how then, you foolish person, and savouring of the dark ages and antediluvian, if his manner is to smite the perjured, does he not blast Simon, and Cleonymus, and Theorus? And yet they are very perjured. But he smites his own temple, and Sunium, the promontory of Athens,¹ and the tall oaks. Wherefore? for indeed an oak does not commit perjury.

STREP. I do not know; but you seem to speak well. For what, pray, is the thunderbolt?

SOC. When a dry wind, having been raised aloft, is enclosed in these Clouds, it inflates them within, like a bladder; and then, of necessity, having burst them, it rushes out with vehemence by reason of its density, setting fire to itself through its rushing and impetuosity.

STREP. By Jupiter, of a truth I once experienced this exactly at the Diasian festival! I was roasting a haggis for my kinsfolk, and then through neglect I did not cut it open; but it became inflated, and then suddenly bursting, befouled my very eyes with dung, and burnt my face.²

CHO. O mortal, who hast desired great wisdom from us! How happy will you become amongst the Athenians and amongst the Greeks, if you be possessed of a good memory, and be a deep thinker, and endurance of labour be implanted in your soul, and you be not wearied either by standing or walking, nor be exceedingly vexed at shivering with cold, nor long to break your fast, and you refrain from wine, and gymnastics, and the other follies, and consider this the highest excellence, as is proper a clever man should, to conquer by action and counsel, and by battling with your tongue.

STREP. As far as regards a sturdy spirit,³ and care that makes one's bed uneasy, and a frugal and hard-living and savory-eating belly, be of good courage and don't trouble yourself. I would offer myself to hammer on,¹ for that matter.

SOC. Will you not,² pray, now believe in no god, except what we believe in—this Chaos, and the Clouds, and the Tongue—these three?

STREP. Absolutely I would not even converse with the others, not even if I met them; nor would I sacrifice to them, nor make libations, nor offer frankincense.

CHO. Tell us then boldly, what we must do for you? for you shall not fail in getting it, if you honour³ and admire us, and seek to become clever.

STREP. O mistresses, I request of you then this very small favour, that I be the best of the Greeks in speaking by⁴ a hundred stadia.

CHO. Well, you shall have this from us, so that henceforward from this time no one shall get more opinions passed in the public assemblies than you.

STREP. Grant me not to deliver important opinions; for I do not desire these, but only⁵ to pervert the right for my own advantage, and to evade my creditors.

CHO. Then you shall obtain what you desire; for you do not covet great things. But commit yourself without fear to our ministers.

STREP. I will do so in reliance upon you, for necessity oppresses me, on account of the blood-horses, and the marriage which ruined me. Now, therefore, let them use me as they please. I give up this my body to them to be beaten, to be hungered, to be troubled with thirst, to be squalid, to shiver with cold, to flay into a leathern bottle,⁶ if I shall escape clear STREP. What shall I experience?

CHO. You shall pass with me the most enviable of mortal lives the whole time.

STREP. Shall I then ever see this?

CHO. Yea, so that many be always seated at your gates, wishing to communicate with you and come to a conference with you, to consult with you as to actions and affidavits of many talents, as is worthy of your abilities.³ [To Socrates.] But attempt to teach the old man by degrees whatever you purpose, and scrutinize his intellect, and make trial of his mind.

STREP. Excellently, of course.

SOC. Come, then, take care that,¹ whenever I propound any clever dogma about abstruse matters, you catch it up immediately.

STREP. What then ? Am I to feed upon wisdom like a dog ?

SOC. This man is ignorant and brutish. I fear, old man, lest you will need blows.² Come, let me see ; what do you do if any one beat you ?

STREP. I take the beating ;³ and then, when I have waited a little while, I call witnesses to prove it ; then, again, after a short interval, I go to law.

SOC. Come then, lay down your cloak.

STREP. Have I done any wrong ?

SOC. No ; but it is the rule to enter naked.

STREP. But I do not enter to search for stolen goods.

SOC. Lay it down. Why do you talk nonsense ?

STREP. Now tell me this, pray. If I be diligent and learn zealously, to which of your disciples shall I become like ?

SOC. You will no way differ from Chærephon in intellect.⁴

STREP. Ah me, unhappy ! I shall become half-dead.

Spectators,¹ I will freely declare to you the truth, by Bacchus, who nurtured me! So may I conquer,² and be accounted skilful, as that, deeming you to be clever spectators, and this to be the cleverest of my comedies,³ I thought proper to let you first taste that comedy, which gave me the greatest labour. And then I retired from the contest⁴ defeated by vulgar fellows, though I did not deserve it. These things, therefore, I object to you, a learned audience, for whose sake I was expending this labour. But not even thus will I ever willingly desert the discerning⁵ portion of you. For since what time my Modest Man and my Rake⁶ were very highly praised here by an audience, with whom it is a pleasure even to hold converse, and I (for I was still a virgin, and it was not lawful for me as yet to have children) exposed my offspring, and another girl took it up and owned it, and you generously reared and educated it, from this time⁷ I have had sure pledges of your good-will towards me. Now, therefore, like that well-known Electra,¹ has this comedy come seeking, if haply it meet with an audience so clever, for it will recognise, if it should see, the lock of its brother. But see how modest she is by nature, who, in the first place, has come, having stitched to her no leathern phallus hanging down, red at the top, and thick, to set the boys a laughing; nor yet jeered the bald-headed,² nor danced the cordax; nor³ does the old man who speaks the verses beat the person near him with his staff, keeping out of sight wretched ribaldry; nor has she rushed in with torches, nor does she shout lov, lov;⁴ but has come relying on herself and her verses.⁵ And I, although so excellent a poet, do not give myself airs, nor do I seek to deceive you by twice and thrice bringing forward the same pieces; but I am always⁶ clever at introducing new fashions, not at all resembling each other, and all of them clever: who struck Cleon in the belly when at the height of his power, and could not bear to attack him afterwards when he was down. But these scribblers, when once Hyperbolus has given them a handle, keep ever trampling on this wretched man and his mother. Eupolis, indeed, first of all craftily in-

Æschylus had represented her as assured of her brother's arrival by having found a lock of hair at Agamemnon's tomb resembling her own. Euripides in his Electra sneers at this contrivance as improbable, and requiring a supernatural amount of cleverness and discernment. Aristophanes promises that his Muse shall be equally clever, and shall recognise their good-will if they only give this play the applause awarded to his Dartaleis. Then again Hermippus made verses on Hyperbolus; and now all others press hard upon Hyperbolus, imitating my simile of the eels.¹ Whoever, therefore, laughs at these, let him not take pleasure in my attempts; but if you are delighted with me and my inventions, in times to come you will seem to be wise.²

I first invoke,³ to join our choral band, the mighty Jupiter, ruling on high, the monarch of gods; and the potent master of the trident, the fierce upheaver of earth and briny sea; and our father of great renown, most august Æther, life-supporter of all; and the horse-guider, who fills the plain of the earth with exceeding bright beams, a mighty deity among gods and mortals.

Most clever spectators, come, give us your attention; for having been injured, we blame you to your faces. For though we benefit the state most of all the gods, to us alone of deities you do not offer sacrifice nor yet pour libations, who watch over you. For if there should be any expedition with no prudence, then we either thunder or drizzle small rain. And then, when you were for choosing as your general the Paphlagonian tanner, hateful to the gods, we contracted our brows and were enraged; and thunder⁴ burst through the lightning, and the moon forsook her usual paths; and the sun immediately drew in his wick to himself, and declared he would not give you light, if Cleon should be your ge-

And how this also shall be advantageous, we will easily teach you. If you should convict the cormorant Cleon of bribery and embezzlement, and then make fast his neck in the stocks, the affair will turn out for the state to the ancient form again, if you have mismanaged in any way, and to a prosperous issue.²

Hear me³ again, king Phœbus, Delian Apollo, who inhabitest the high-peaked Cynthian rock! and thou, blest goddess, who inhabitest the all-golden house of Ephesus, in which Lydian damsels greatly reverence thee; and thou, our national goddess, swayer of the ægis, Minerva, guardian of the city! and thou, reveller Bacchus, who, inhabiting the Parnassian rock, sparklest with torches, conspicuous among the Delphic Bacchanals!

SOC. Make haste and lay it down; and give me your attention. [Enter Strepsiades.]

STREP. Very well.

SOC. Come now; what do you now wish to learn first of those things in none of which you have ever been instructed? Tell me. About measures, or rhythms, or verses?

STREP. I should prefer to learn about measures; for it is but lately I was cheated out of two chœnices by a meal-huckster.

SOC. I do not ask you this, but which you account the most beautiful measure; the trimeter or the tetrameter?

STREP. I think nothing superior to the semisextarius.³

SOC. You talk nonsense, man.

STREP. Make a wager then with me,⁴ if the semisextarius be not a tetrameter.

SOC. Go to the devil! how boorish you are and dull of learning! Perhaps you may be able to learn about rhythms.

¹ For this anacoluthon, cf. Aves, 535, 1456. Lys. 560. Equit. 392 Hom. Il. A. 478.

² "Said satirically of the school of Socrates, as if it were a den of wild beasts." Ernesti. "i. e. because the φροντιστήριον was dark and gloomy. Hence Strepsiades compares it to the cave of Trophonius." Schütz.

⁴ Cf. Ach. 772, 1115, 791. Hom. Il. ψ. 485.

STREP. But what good will rhythms do me for a living?

SOC. In the first place, to be clever at an entertainment, understanding what rhythm is for the war-dance, and what, again, according to the dactyle.

STREP. According to the dactyle? By Jove, but I know it.

SOC. Tell me, pray.

STREP. What else but this finger? Formerly, indeed, when I was yet a boy, this here!

SOC. You are boorish and stupid.

STREP. For I do not desire, you wretch, to learn any of these things.

SOC. What then?

STREP. That, that, the most unjust cause.

SOC. But you must learn other things before these: namely, what quadrupeds are properly masculine.

STREP. I know the males, if I am not mad:—κρίδος, τράγος, ταῦρος, κύων, ἀλεκτροῦν.¹

SOC. Do you see what you are doing? You are calling both the female and the male ἀλεκτροῦν in the same way.

STREP. How, pray? come, tell me.

SOC. How?² The one with you is ἀλεκτροῦν, and the other is ἀλεκτροῦν also.

STREP. Yea, by Neptune! how now ought I to call them?

SOC. The one ἀλεκτρούαινα, and the other ἀλέκτωρ.

STREP. Ἀλεκτρούαινα? Capital, by the Air! So that, in return for this lesson alone, I will fill your κάρδοπος full of barley-meal on all sides.

SOC. See! see!³ there again's another blunder! You make κάρδοπος, which is feminine, to be masculine.

STREP. In what way do I make κάρδοπος masculine?

SOC. Most assuredly; just as if you were to say Κλεώνυμος.

STREP. How, pray? Tell me.

SOC. Κάρδοπος with you is tantamount to Κλεώνυμος.

STREP. Good sir, Cleonymus had no kneading-trough, but kneaded his bread in a round mortar.¹ How ought I to call it henceforth?

¹ "It is very stupid of the rustic to reckon a cock among quadrupeds; Socrates, however, does not notice this, but censures what is more trifling." Bergler.

² This is certainly wrong. Repeated questions are always in the relative (ᾤπως) form, as in 677. See Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 51, 17, obs.

SOC. How? Call it καρδόπη, as you call Σωστράτη.

STREP. Καρδόπη, in the feminine?

SOC. For so you speak it rightly.

STREP. But that would make it καρδόπη, Κλεωνύμη.

SOC. You must learn one thing more about names, what are masculine, and what of them are feminine.

STREP. I know what are female.

SOC. Tell me, pray.

STREP. Lysilla, Philinna, Clitagora, Demetria.

SOC. What names are masculine?

STREP. Thousands: Philoxenus, Melesias, Amynias.

SOC. But, you wretch! these are not masculine.

STREP. Are they not males with you?

SOC. By no means: for how would you call to Amynias,² if you met him?

STREP. How would I call? Thus: "Come hither, come hither, Amynia!"

SOC. Do you see? you call Amynias a woman.

STREP. Is it not then with justice, who does not serve in the army?³ But why should I learn these things, which we all know?

² This line will serve to illustrate a principle in the Greek language little known and less noticed: when a finite verb and a participle are accompanied by an objective case of a noun, that objective case depends on the participle in preference to the finite verb. Mr. Walsh (note ad Acharn. p. 120, fin.) has grievously erred in this matter. Eur. Hippol. 659, τῆς σῆς τόλμης εἶσομαι γεγευμένος. "The Greeks always refer the participle to the same noun as the verb, even though the case of the noun will not suit the construction of the participle." Hermann. Comp. Ran. 1176.

³ "Instead of the usual ὅστις, I have given ἥτις from the Ravenna MS., as suiting what has preceded, and very contemptuous." Hermann. "ὅστις fits Strepsiades better, as he just before said τὸν Ἀμ." Dindorf.

"Soc. There, there! you make a wench of him at once.

STREP. And fit it is for one who shuns the field;

A coward ought not to be called man." Cumteland.

SOC. It is no use, by Jupiter! Having reclined yourself down here—

STREP. What must I do?

SOC. Think out some of your own affairs.

STREP. Not here, pray, I beseech you; but, if I must, suffer me to excogitate these very things on the ground.

SOC. There is no other way.¹ [Exit Socrates.]

STREP. Unfortunate man that I am! what a penalty shall I this day pay to the bugs!²

CHO. Now meditate³ and examine closely; and roll yourself about in every way, having wrapped yourself up; and quickly, when you fall into a difficulty, spring to another mental contrivance. But let delightful sleep be absent from your eyes.

STREP. Attatai! attatai!

CHO. What ails you? why are you distressed?

STREP. Wretched man, I am perishing! The Corinthians,⁴ coming out from the bed, are biting me, and devouring my sides, and drinking up my life-blood, and tearing away my testicles, and digging through my breech, and will⁵ annihilate me.

CHO. Do not now be very grievously distressed.

STREP. Why, how, when my money is gone, my complexion gone, my life gone, and my slipper gone? And furthermore in addition to these evils, with singing the night-watches,⁶ I am almost gone myself. [Re-enter Socrates.]

⁵ "Instead of the future ὀλέω, the Attics occasionally use ὀλέσω; the later writers pretty often." Krüger. Brunck has mistaken it for a present tense.

⁶ The Athenian sentinels used to sing at their posts, in order to prevent their falling asleep unawares during their night-watches. "It would seem that a short choral ode has dropped out here."

SOC. Ho you ! what are you about ? Are you not meditating ?

STREP. I ? Yea, by Neptune !

SOC. And what, pray, have you thought ?

STREP. Whether any bit of me will be left by the bugs.

SOC. You will perish most wretchedly.

STREP. But, my good friend, I have already perished.

SOC. You must not give in, but must wrap yourself up ; for you have to discover a device for abstracting, and a means of cheating. [Walks up and down while Strepsiades wraps himself up in the blankets.]

STREP. Ah me ! would, pray, some one would throw over me a swindling contrivance from the sheep-skins.¹

SOC. Come now ; I will first see this fellow, what he is about. Ho you ! are you asleep ?

STREP. No ; by Apollo, I am not !

SOC. Have you got any thing ?

STREP. No ; by Jupiter, certainly not !

SOC. Nothing at all ?

STREP. Nothing, except what I have in my right hand.

SOC. Will you not quickly cover yourself up, and think of something ?

STREP. About what ? for do you tell me this, O Socrates !

SOC. Do you, yourself, first find out and state what you wish.

STREP. You have heard a thousand times what I wish. About the interest ; so that I may pay no one.

SOC. Come then, wrap yourself up, and having given your mind play² with subtilty, revolve your affairs by little and little, rightly distinguishing and examining.

STREP. Ah me, unhappy man :

Droysen. "The genitive φρουρᾶς denotes time. See Soph. Gr. Gr. § 196, and Kühner, Gr. Gr. § 273, 4." Felton.

SOC. Keep quiet; and if you be puzzled in any one of your conceptions, leave it and go; and then set your mind in motion again, and lock it up.¹

STREP. (in great glee). O dearest little Socrates!

SOC. What, old man?

STREP. I have got a device for cheating them of the interest.

SOC. Exhibit it.

STREP. Now tell me this, pray; if I were to purchase a Thessalian witch, and draw down the moon by night, and then shut it up, as if it were a mirror, in a round crest-case, and then carefully keep it—

SOC. What good, pray, would this do you?

STREP. What? If the moon were to rise no longer any where, I should not pay the interest.

SOC. Why so, pray?

STREP. Because the money is lent out by the month.

SOC. Capital! But I will again propose to you another clever question. If a suit of five talents should be entered against you, tell me how you would obliterate it.

STREP. How? how? I do not know; but I must seek.

SOC. Do not then always revolve your thoughts about yourself; but slack away your mind into the air, like a cockchafer tied with a thread by the foot.

STREP. I have found a very clever method of getting rid of my suit, so that you yourself² would acknowledge it.

SOC. Of what description?³

STREP. Have you ever seen this stone in the chemists' shops, the beautiful and transparent one, from which they kindle fire?

SOC. Do you mean the burning-glass?⁴

SOC. Cleverly done, by the Graces!

STREP. Oh! how I am delighted, that a suit of five talents has been cancelled!

SOC. Come now, quickly seize upon this.

STREP. What?

SOC. How, when engaged in a lawsuit,¹ you could overturn the suit, when you were about to be cast, because you had no witnesses.

STREP. Most readily and easily.

SOC. Tell me, pray.

STREP. Well now, I tell you. If, while one suit was still pending, before mine was called on, I were to run away and hang myself.

SOC. You talk nonsense.

STREP. By the gods would I! for no one will bring an action against me when I am dead.²

SOC. You talk nonsense. Begone; I can't teach you any longer.

STREP. Why so?³ Yea, by the gods, O Socrates!

SOC. You straightway forget whatever you learn. For, what now was the first thing you were taught? Tell me.

STREP. Come, let me see: nay, what was the first?⁴ What certainly known among the ancients, perhaps as early as the time of Aristophanes. SOC. Will you not pack off to the devil, you most forgetful and most stupid old man?

STREP. Ah me, what then, pray, will become of me, wretched man? For I shall be utterly undone, if I do not learn to ply the tongue. Come, oh, ye Clouds, give me some good advice.

CNO. We, old man, advise you, if you have a son grown up, to send him to learn in your stead.

STREP. Well, I have a fine handsome son, but he is not willing to learn. What must I do?¹

CNO. But do you permit him?²

STREP. Yes, for he is robust in body, and in good health and is come of the high-plumed dames of Cœsyra. I will go for him, and if he be not willing, I will certainly drive him from my house. [To Socrates.] Go in and wait for me a short time. [Exit.]

CNO. Do you perceive that you are soon about to obtain the greatest benefits through us alone of the gods? For this man is ready to do every thing that you bid him. But you, while the man is astounded and evidently elated, having perceived it, will quickly fleece him to the best of your power.³ [Exit Socrates.] For matters of this sort are somehow accustomed to turn the other way. [Enter Strepsiades and Phidippides.]

STREP. By Mist,⁴ you certainly shall not stay here any longer! but go and gnaw the columns of Megacles.

PHID. My good sir, what is the matter with you, O father? You are not in your senses, by Olympian Jupiter!

PHID. Well, what is it?

STREP. You swore now by Jupiter.

PHID. I did.

STREP. Seest thou, then, how good a thing is learning? There is no Jupiter, O Phidippides!

PHID. Who then?

STREP. Vortex reigns,³ having expelled Jupiter.

PHID. Bah! Why do you talk foolishly?

STREP. Be assured that it is so.

PHID. Who says this?

STREP. Socrates the Melian,⁴ and Chærephon, who knows the footmarks of fleas.

PHID. Have you arrived at such a pitch of phrensy,⁵ that you believe madmen?

STREP. Speak words of good omen, and say nothing bad of clever men and wise; of whom, through frugality, none ever shaved or anointed himself, or went to a bath to wash⁶ himself; while you squander my property in bathing, as if I

PHID. Ἀλεκτρυάινα! Did you learn these clever things by going in just now to the Titans?⁴

STREP. And many others too; but whatever I learnt on each occasion I used to forget immediately, through length of years.

PHID. Is it for this reason, pray, you have also lost your cloak?

STREP. I have not lost it; but have studied it⁵ away.

Indeed, from his earliest years, when he was a little fellow only so big, he was wont to form houses and carve ships within-doors, and make little waggons of leather, and make frogs out of pomegranate-rinds, you can't think how cleverly.¹ But see that he learns those two causes; the better, whatever it may be; and the worse, which, by maintaining what is unjust, overturns the better. If not both, at any rate the unjust one by all means.²

The object of the poet is, to bring before his audience the question between past and present education, into full and fair discussion; comparing the principles of the schools then existing with the pure and moral discipline of former times." Cumb. These allegorical characters appeared in the dresses of Æschylus and Euripides respectively. According to Wieland and Droysen, they are represented by two game cocks in wicker cages. Suvern ("Clouds," p. 16) rejects this idea, and thinks the Unjust Cause may have worn the mask of some of the notorious wranglers of the day. From the epithets bestowed on him (890, 915) he thinks he may have been Thrasy-machus, and the Just Cause in the mask of Aristophanes himself.

go to school; and you will be found out some time or other by the Athenians, what sort of doctrines you teach the simple-minded.

UNJ. You are shamefully squalid.

JUST. And you are prosperous. And yet¹ formerly you were a beggar, saying that you were the Mysian Telephus,² and gnawing the maxims of Pandeletus out of your little wallet.

UNJ. Oh, the wisdom—

JUST. Oh, the madness—

UNJ. Which you have mentioned.

JUST. And of your city, which supports you who ruin her youths.

UNJ. You shan't teach this youth, you old dotard.³

JUST. Yes, if he is to be saved, and not merely to practise loquacity.

UNJ. (to Phidippides). Come hither, and leave him to rave.

JUST. You shall howl, if you lay your hand on him.

CHO. Cease from contention and railing. But show to us, you, what you used to teach the men of former times, and you, the new system of education; in order that, having heard you disputing, he may decide and go to the school of one or the other.

JUST. I am willing to do so.

UNJ. I also am willing.

CHO. Come now, which of the two shall speak first?

UNJ. I will give him the precedence; and then, from these things which he adduces, I will shoot him dead with new words and thoughts. And at last, if he mutter, he shall be destroyed, being stung in his whole face and his two eyes by my maxims, as if by bees.

CHO. Now the two, relying on very dexterous arguments and thoughts, and sententious maxims, will show which of them shall appear superior in argument. For now the whole crisis of wisdom¹ is here laid before them; about which my friends have a very great contest. But do you, who adorned our elders with many virtuous manners, utter the voice in which you rejoice, and declare your nature.

JUR. I will, therefore, describe the ancient system of education, how it was ordered, when I flourished in the advocacy of justice, and temperance was the fashion. In the first place it was incumbent that no one should hear the voice of a boy uttering a syllable; and next, that those from the same quarter of the town should march in good order through the streets to the school of the Harp-master, naked, and in a body, even if it were to snow as thick as meal. Then again, *their master*² would teach them, not sitting cross-legged, to learn by rote a song, either “Παλλάδα³ περσέπολιν δεινὰν,” or “τηλέπορόν τι βόαμα,” raising to a higher pitch⁴ the harmony which our fathers transmitted to us. But if any of them were to play the buffoon, or turn any quavers, like these difficult turns the present artists make after the manner of Phrynis,⁵ he used to be thrashed, being beaten with many blows,⁶ as banishing the Muses. And it behoved the boys, while sitting in the school of the Gymnastic-master, to cover⁷ the thigh, so that they might exhibit no-

UNJ. Aye, antiquated and Dipolia-like, and full of grasshoppers, and of Cecydes,² and of the Buphonian festival!

JUST. Yet certainly these are those principles by which my system of education nurtured the men who fought at Marathon. But you teach the men of the present day, from their earliest years, to be wrapped up in himatia; so that I am choked, when at the Panathenaia a fellow, holding his shield before his person, neglects Tritogenia, when they ought to dance. Wherefore, O youth, choose, with confidence, me, the better cause, and you will learn to hate the Agora, and to refrain from baths, and to be ashamed at what is disgraceful, and to be enraged if any one jeer you, and to rise up from seats before your seniors when they approach, and not to behave ill towards your parents, and to do nothing else that is base, because you are to form in your mind an image of Modesty:³ and not to dart into the house of a dancing woman, lest, while gaping after these things, being struck with an apple by a wanton, you should be damaged in your reputation : and not to contradict your father in any thing ; nor by calling him Iapetus, to reproach him with the ills of age, by which you were reared in your infancy.

² An ancient dithyrambic poet. He is mentioned by Cratinus in his Panoptæ. "The Dipolia was one of the oldest festivals in Attica in honour of Jupiter the protector of cities. Oxen were driven up to the sacrificial table, and that one which first came forward to eat the sacrificial bread was slaughtered by the priest, who then fled away as though he were a murderer (βουφόνος). The priest's axe was then brought to trial, condemned, and cast into the pit as a malefactor. More enlightened ages made light of ridiculing such ceremonies." Droysen.

UNJ. If you shall believe him in this, O youth, by Bacchus, you will be like the sons of Hippocrates,¹ and they will call you a booby.

JUST. Yet certainly shall you spend your time in the gymnastic schools, sleek and blooming ; not chattering in the market-place rude jests, like the youths of the present day ; nor dragged into court for a petty suit, greedy, petty-fogging, knavish ; but you shall descend to the Academy and run races beneath the sacred olives along with some modest compeer, crowned with white reeds, redolent of yew, and careless ease, and of leaf-shedding white poplar, rejoicing in the season of spring, when the plane-tree whispers to the elm. If you do these things which I say, and apply your mind to these, you will ever have a stout chest, a clear complexion, broad shoulders, a little tongue, large hips, little lewdness. But if you practise what the youths of the present day do, you will have, in the first place, a pallid complexion, small shoulders, a narrow chest, a large tongue, little hips, great lewdness, a long psephism ; and this deceiver will persuade you to consider every thing that is base to be honourable, and what is honourable to be base ; and, in addition to this, he will fill² you with the lewdness of Antimachus.

CHO. O thou that practisest³ most renowned high-tower-

² "Dubitari potest an activum sit, (ut Ach. 798,) an passivum." Hermann. There is, in reality, no doubt about it at all. No such future as πλήσσομαι ever existed. On the contrary, the active future πλήσω is of common occurrence. See Plat. Legg. ix. 13, 35 ; Eur. Hipp. 587 ; Arist. Eccl. 1042. For Antimachus, see Acharn. 1150.

³ "Oh sage instructor, how sublime,
These maxims of the former time !
How sweet this unpolluted stream
Of eloquence, how pure the theme !

Among the generations past." Cumberland.

ing wisdom! how sweetly does a modest grace attend your words! Happy, therefore, were they who lived in those days, in the times of former men! In reply, then, to these, O thou that hast a dainty-seeming muse, it behoveth thee to say something new; since the man has gained renown. And it appears you have need of powerful arguments against him, if you are to conquer the man, and not incur laughter.

UNJ. And yet I was choking in my heart, and was longing to confound all these with contrary maxims. For I have been called among the deep thinkers the "worse cause," on this very account, that I first contrived how to speak against both law and justice: and this art is worth more than ten thousand staters,¹ that one should choose the worse cause, and nevertheless be victorious. But mark how I will confute the system of education on which he relies, who says, in the first place, that he will not permit you to be washed with warm water. And yet, on what principle do you blame the warm baths?

JUST. Because it is most vile, and makes a man cowardly.

UNJ. Stop! For immediately I seize and hold you by the waist without escape. Come, tell me, which of the sons of Jupiter do you deem to have been the bravest in soul, and to have undergone² most labours?

JUST. I consider no man superior to Hercules.

UNJ. Where, pray, did you ever see cold Heracleian baths? And yet, who was more valiant than he?

JUST. These are the very things which make the bath full of youths always chattering all day long, but the palæstras empty.

UNJ. You next find fault with their living in the marketplace; but I commend it. For if it had been bad, Homer would never have been for representing Nestor as an orator; nor all the other wise men. I will return, then, from thence to the tongue, which this fellow says our youths ought not to exercise, while I maintain they should. And, again, he says they ought to be modest: two very great evils. For tell me to whom you have ever seen any good accrue through modesty; and confute me by your words.

JUST. To many. Peleus,¹ at any rate, received his sword on account of it.

UNJ. A sword? Marry, he got a pretty piece of luck, the poor wretch! while Hyperbolus,² he of the lamps, got more than many talents by his villany, but, by Jupiter, no sword!

JUST. And Peleus married Thetis, too, through his modesty.

UNJ. And then she went off, and left him; for he was not lustful, nor an agreeable bed-fellow to spend the night with. Now a woman delights in being wantonly treated. But you are an old dotard. For (to Phidippides) consider, O youth, all that attaches to modesty, and of how many pleasures you are about to be deprived—of women, of games at cottabus, of dainties, of drinking-bouts, of giggling. And yet, what is life worth to you, if you be deprived of these enjoyments? Well, I will pass from thence to the necessities of our nature. You have gone astray, you have fallen in love, you have been guilty of some adultery, and then have been caught. You are undone, for you are unable to speak. But if you associate with me, indulge your inclination, dance, laugh, and think nothing disgraceful. For if you should happen to be detected as an adulterer, you will make this reply to him, “that you have done him no injury:” and then refer him to Jupiter,³ how

² He was a lamp-seller, and was accused of adulterating the bronze of his lamps with lead, and thus obtaining a greater price for them than they were worth. He became a noted demagogue after the death of Cleon. Comp. Aves, 13.

Erworben durch Unredlichkeit, doch allerdings ein Schwert nicht.”

Being himself a cuckold-making god,
And you a poor, frail mortal. How should you
Be wiser, stronger, purer than a god?” Cumberland.

even he is overcome by love and women. And yet, how could you, who are a mortal, have greater power than a god?

JUST. But what, if he should suffer the radish through obeying you, and be depillated with hot ashes? What argument will he be able to state, to prove that he is not a blackguard?

UNJ. And if he be a blackguard, what harm will he suffer?

JUST. Nay, what could he ever suffer still greater than this?

UNJ. What then will you say, if you be conquered by me in this.

JUST. I will be silent: what else can I do?

UNJ. Come now, tell me; from what class do the advocates come?

JUST. From the blackguards.

UNJ. I believe you. What then? from what class do the tragedians come?

JUST. From the blackguards.

UNJ. You say well. But from what class do the public orators come?

JUST. From the blackguards.

UNJ. Then have you perceived that you say nothing to the purpose? And look which class among the audience is the more numerous.

JUST. Well now, I'm looking.

UNJ. What, then, do you see?

JUST. By the gods, the blackguards to be far more numerous. This fellow, at any rate, I know; and him yonder; and this fellow with the long hair.

UNJ. What, then, will you say?

JUST. We are conquered. Ye blackguards, by the gods, receive my cloak,¹ for I desert to you. [Exeunt the two Causes, and re-enter Socrates and Strepsiades.]

Soc. What then? Whether do you wish to take and leave away this your son, or shall I teach him to speak?

STREP. Teach him, and chastise him; and remember that you train him properly; on the one side able for petty suits; but train his other jaw able for the more important causes.

SOC. Make yourself easy; you shall receive him back a clever sophist.

STREP. Nay, rather, pale and wretched.¹ [Exeunt Socrates, Strepsiades, and Phidippides.]

CHO. Go ye then:² but I think that you will repent of these proceedings. We wish to speak about the judges, what they will gain, if at all they justly³ assist this Chorus. For in the first place, if you wish to plough up your fields in spring, we will rain for you first; but for the others afterwards. And then we will protect the fruits,⁴ and the vines, so that neither drought afflict them, nor excessive wet weather. But if any mortal dishonour us who are goddesses, let him consider what evils he will suffer at our hands, obtaining neither wine, nor any thing else from his farm. For when his olives and vines sprout, they shall be cut down; with such slings will we smite them. And if we see him making brick, we will rain; and we will smash the tiles of his roof with round hailstones. And if he himself, or any one of his kindred or friends, at any time marry, we will rain the whole night; so that he will probably wish rather to have been even in Egypt,⁵ than to have judged badly. [Enter Strepsiades with a meal-sack on his shoulder.]

¹ Mitchell, who follows Dindorf in assigning this speech (with the reading of ἔγωγε, instead of οἶμαι γε) to Strepsiades, thus paraphrases the passage: "Nay rather, instead of δεξιὸν, let me find him ὠχρὸν and κακοδαίμονα; in other words, the exact counterpart of Chærephon and yourself."

² "Χωρεῖτέ νυν, addressed to father and son conjointly, who now retire from the stage. The σοι is to be applied to Strepsiades, as he turns his back on the Chorus." Mitch.

³ See Liddell's Lex. voc. ἔκ, iii. 6.

⁵ Where rain seldom falls. Perhaps Bergler is nearer the truth, in supposing the allusion to glance at the evil repute of the Egyptians. The aorist infinitive retains its proper force as a past tense in the construction of the accusative with the infinitive and an article, as vs. 268, and after verba declarandi et putandi, as Vesp. 1422, 1447, and sometimes, as here, after βούλομαι. Cf. Ran. 673. Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 53, 6, obs. 2.

STREP. The fifth, the fourth, the third, after this the second; and then, of all days what I most fear, and dread, and abominate, immediately after this there is the Old and New.¹ For every one, to whom I happen to be indebted,² swears, and says he will ruin and utterly destroy me, having made his deposits against me; though I only ask what is moderate and just,—“My good sir,³ one part don’t take just now; the other part put off, I pray; and the other part remit;” they say that thus they will never get back their money, but abuse me, as that I am unjust, and say that they will go to law with me. Now therefore let them go to law, for it little concerns me, if Phidippides has learned to speak well. I shall soon know by knocking at the thinking-shop. [Knocks at the door.] Boy, I say! Boy, boy! [Enter Socrates.]

SOC. Good morning,⁴ Strepsiades.

STREP. The same to you. But first accept this present;⁵ for one ought to compliment the teacher with a fee. And tell me about my son,⁶ if he has learned that cause, which⁷ you just now brought forward.

SOC. He has learned it.

STREP. Well done, O Fraud, all-powerful queen!

SOC. So that you can get clear off from whatever suit you please.

¹ The last day of the month, to which Solon gave the name of the ἐνῇ καὶ νέα, as partaking of the light both of the old moon and the new. To Strepsiades it is a day of horror, as placing him in danger of legal proceedings by his creditors.

This ἀδίκος λόγος had just before been brought on the stage as a person: to which circumstance those words, ὅν ὑπὸ τῷ εἰσήγαγῃ, refer.” Seager. So also Walsh, Droysen, and Felton.

STREP. Even if witnesses were present when I borrowed the money?

SOC. Yea, much more! even if a thousand be present.

STREP. Then I will shout with a very loud shout!¹ Ho! weep, you petty-usurers, both you and your principals, and your compound interests! for you can no longer do me any harm, because² such a son is being reared for me in this house, shining with a double-edged tongue, my guardian, the preserver of my house, a mischief to my enemies, ending the sadness of the great woes of his father. Him do thou run and summon from within to me. [Socrates goes into the house.] O child! O son! come forth from the house! hear your father!³ [Re-enter Socrates leading in Phidippides.]

SOC. Lo, here is the man!

STREP. O my dear, my dear!

SOC. Take your son and depart. [Exit Socrates.]

STREP.⁴ Oh, oh, my child! Huzza!⁵ Huzza! how I am delighted at the first sight of your complexion! Now, indeed, you are, in the first place, negative and disputatious to look at, and this fashion native to the place plainly appears, the "What do you say?" and the seeming to be injured when, I well know, you are injuring and inflicting a wrong; and in your countenance there is the Attic look. Now, therefore, see that you save me, since you have also ruined me.

PHID. What, pray, do you fear?

STREP. The Old and New.

PHID. Why, is any day old and new?

STREP. Yes; on which they say that they will make their deposits against me.

PHID. Then those that have made them will lose them; for it is not possible that two days can be one day.⁶

This would be contrary to his argument. Nor can we urge in this place a Schema Pindaricum. Although that is found in Tragedy, (Hermann, Soph. Trach. 517,) it

STREP. Cannot it?

PHID. Certainly not; unless¹ the same woman can be both old and young at the same time.

STREP. And yet it is the law.

PHID. For they do not, I think, rightly understand what the law means.

STREP. And what does it mean?

PHID. The ancient Solon was by nature the commons' friend.

STREP. This surely is nothing whatever to the Old and New.

PHID. He therefore made the summons for two days, for the Old and New, that the deposits might be made on the first of the month.

STREP. Why, pray, did he add the old day?

PHID. In order, my good sir, that the defendants, being present a day before, might compromise the matter of their own accord; but if not, that they might be worried on the morning of the new moon.

STREP. Why, then, do the magistrates not receive the deposits on the new moon, but on the Old and New?

PHID. They seem to me to do what the forestallers do: in order that they may appropriate the deposits as soon as possible, on this account they have the first pick by one day.

STREP. (turning to the audience). Bravo! ye wretches, why do you sit senseless, the gain of us wise² men, being blocks, ciphers, mere sheep, jars heaped³ together? Wherefore I must sing an encomium upon myself and this my son,

PASIAS. (entering with his summons-witness). Then, ought a man to throw away any part of his own property? Never! but it were better then at once to put away blushes, rather than now to have trouble; since I am now dragging you to be a witness, for the sake of my own money; and further, in addition to this, I shall become an enemy to my fellow-tribesman. But never, while I live, will I disgrace my country, but will summon Strepsiades—

STREP. (from within). Who's there? [Enter Strepsiades.]

PAS. For the Old and New.

STREP. I call you to witness, that he has named it for two days. For what matter do you summon me?

PAS. For the twelve minæ, which you received when you were buying the dapple-grey horse.

STREP. A horse?—Do³ you not hear? I, whom you all know to hate horsemanship!

PAS. And, by Jupiter, you swore by the gods too, that you would repay it.

STREP. Aye, by Jove! for then my Phidippides did not yet know the irrefragable argument.⁴

PAS. And do you now intend, on this account, to deny the debt?

Of the new logic unconfutable.” Cumberland.

STREP. Why, what good should I get else from his instruction?

PAS. And will you be willing to deny these upon oath of the gods?

STREP. What gods?

PAS. Jupiter, Mercury, and Neptune.

STREP. Yes, by Jupiter! and would pay down, too, a three-obol piece besides to swear.

PAS. Then, may you perish some day,¹ for your impudence!

STREP. This man² would be the better for it, if he were cleansed by rubbing with salt.

PAS. Ah me, how you deride me!

STREP. He will contain six choæ.

PAS. By great Jupiter and the gods, you certainly shall not do this to me with impunity.

STREP. I like your gods amazingly; and Jupiter, sworn by, is ridiculous to the knowing ones.

PAS. You will assuredly suffer punishment some time or other, for this. But answer and dismiss me, whether you are going to repay me my money, or not.

STREP. Keep quiet now, for I will presently answer you distinctly. [Runs into the house.]

PAS. (to his summons-witness). What do you think he will do?

WITNESS. I think he will pay you. [Re-enter Socrates with a kneading-trough.]

STREP. Where is this man who asks me for his money? Tell me, what is this?

PAS. What this is? α κάρδοπος.

STREP. And do you then ask me for your money, being such an ignorant person? I would not pay, not even an obolus, to any one who called the καρδόπη κάρδοπος.

PAS. Then won't you pay me?

"Gut ausgelaug't gab'er einen wackern Schlauch." Droysen.

STREP. Not, as far as I know.¹ Will you not then pack off as fast as possible from my door?

PAS. I will depart; and be assured of this, that I will make deposit against you, or may I live no longer!

STREP. Then you will lose it besides, in addition to your twelve minæ. And yet I do not wish you to suffer this, because you named the κάρδοπος foolishly. [Exeunt Pasias and witness, and enter Amyntias.]

AMYN. Ah me! ah me!²

STREP. Ha! whoever is this, who is lamenting? Surely it was not one of Carcinus' deities that spoke.³

AMYN. But why do you wish to know this, who⁴ I am?—a miserable man.

STREP. Then follow your own path.⁵

AMYN. O harsh Fortune! O Fates, breaking the wheels of my horses! O Pallas, how you have destroyed me!

STREP. What evil, pray, has Tlepolemus ever done you?

AMYN. Do not jeer me, my friend; but order⁶ your son to pay me the money which he received; especially as I have been unfortunate.

STREP. What money is this?

AMYN. That which he borrowed.

STREP. Then you were really unlucky,⁷ as I think.

AMYN. By the gods, I fell while driving my horses.

STREP. Why, pray, do you talk nonsense, as if you had fallen from an ass?⁸

STREP. You appear to me to have had your brains shaken as it were.¹

AMYN. And you appear to me, by Hermes, to be going to be summoned, if you will not pay me the money.²

STREP. Tell me now, whether do you think that Jupiter always rains fresh rain on each occasion, or that the sun draws from below the same water back again?

AMYN. I know not which; nor do I care.

STREP. How then is it just that you should recover your money, if you know nothing of meteorological matters?

AMYN. Well, if you are in want, pay me the interest of my money.

STREP. What sort of animal is this interest?³

AMYN. Most assuredly the money is always becoming more⁴ and more every month and every day as the time slips away.

STREP. You say well. What then? Is it possible⁵ that you consider the sea to be greater now than formerly?

PAS. No, by Jupiter, but equal: for it is not fitting that it should be greater.

STREP. And how then, you wretch,⁶ does this become no way greater, though the rivers flow into it, while you seek to increase your money?—Will you not take yourself off from my house? Bring me the goad. [Enter servant with a goad.]

CHO. What a thing it is to love evil courses! For this old man, having loved them, wishes to withhold the money which he borrowed. And he will certainly meet with something to-day,⁴ which will perhaps cause this sophist to suddenly receive some misfortune, in return for the knaveries he has begun. For I think that he will presently find what has been long boiling up, that his⁵ son is skilful to speak opinions opposed to justice, so as to overcome all with whomsoever he holds converse, even if he advance most villainous doctrines; and perhaps, perhaps his father will wish that he were even speechless.

STREP. (running out of the house pursued by his son). Hollo! Hollo! O neighbours and kinsfolk and fellow-tribesmen, defend me, by all means, who am being beaten! Ah me, unhappy man, for my head and jaw! Wretch! do you beat your father?

PHID. Yes, father.

STREP. You see him owning that he beats me.

PHID. Certainly.

PHID. Say the same things of me again, and more. Do you now that I take pleasure in being much¹ abused?

STREP. You blackguard!

PHID. Sprinkle me with roses in abundance.

STREP. Do you beat your father?

PHID. And will prove, too, by Jupiter, that I beat you with justice.

STREP. O thou most rascally! Why, how can it be just to beat a father?

PHID. I will demonstrate it, and will overcome you in argument.

STREP. Will you overcome me in this?

PHID. Yea, by much and easily. But choose which of the two Causes you wish to speak.²

STREP. Of what two Causes?

PHID. The better, or the worse?

STREP. Marry, I did get you taught to speak against justice, by Jupiter, my friend, if you are going to persuade me of this, that it is just and honourable for a father to be beat by his sons!³

PHID. I think I shall certainly persuade⁴ you; so that, when you have heard, not even you yourself will say any thing against it.

STREP. Well now, I am willing to hear what you have to say.

CHO. It is your business, old man, to consider in what way you shall conquer the man; for, if he were not relying upon something, he would not be so licentious. But he is emboldened by something; the boldness of the man is evident. Now you ought to tell to the Chorus from what the contention first arose. And this you must do by all means.

² "So choose which of the Causes you'll defend." Walsh.
So also Droysen.

"Elige utrum ex duobus sermonibus me velis perorare." Brunck.
If so, Aristophanes would have written βοῦλει λέγειν με.

³ "You have learned the art with a vengeance, if this is the way you are going to apply it." Felton. "Certe te docendum curavi, justitiam repugnare, si demonstraturus es, justum esse patrem verberari." The commentators are mistaken." Fritzsche. See Hermann Vig. n. 339.

⁴ "That I'll do

That you shall fairly own yourself a convert

"a most wholesome cudgelling." Cumberland

STREP. Well now, I will tell you from what we first began to rail at one another. After we had feasted, as you know, I first bade him take a lyre, and sing a song of Simonides,¹ "The Shearing of the Ram." But he immediately said it was old-fashioned to play on the lyre, and sing while drinking, like a woman grinding² parched barley.

PHID. For ought you not then immediately to be beaten and trampled on, bidding me sing, just as if you were entertaining cicadæ?

STREP. He expressed,³ however, such opinions then too within, as he does now; and he asserted that Simonides was a bad poet. I bore it at first, with difficulty, indeed, yet nevertheless I bore it. And then I bade him at least take a myrtle-wreath⁴ and recite to me some portion of Æschylus; and then he immediately said, "Shall I consider Æschylus the first among the poets, full of empty sound, unpolished, bombastic, using rugged words?" And hereupon you can't think how my heart panted. But, nevertheless, I restrained my passion, and said, "At least recite some passage of the more modern poets,⁵ of whatever kind these clever things be." And he immediately sang a passage of Euripides,⁶ how a brother, O averter of ill! debauched his uterine sister. And

The wreck of Herculean lore!
What rapture, could you seize
Some Theban fragment, or unroll
One precious, tender-hearted scroll
Of pure Simonides!" Wordsworth.

² "Women while grinding used to beguile their labours with a song; and they had a peculiar class of songs, called ἐπιμύλιοι ᾠδαί." Brunch. Plutarch has preserved one of these,—

Ἄλει, μύλα, ἄλει
καὶ γὰρ Πιττακὸς ἄλει, μεγάλῃς Μιτυλήνης βασιλεύων.
*Grind, mill, grind,

Of great Mitylene the king.*

⁶ Alluding to the Æolus of Euripides, which turned upon the loves of Macareus and Canace. Ovid. Trist. ii. 384.

"Nobilis est Canace fratris amore sui."

I bore it no longer, but immediately assailed him with many abusive reproaches. And then, after that, as was natural, we hurled word upon word. Then he springs upon me; and then he was wounding me, and beating me, and throttling me, and killing me.

PHID. Were you not therefore justly beaten, who do not praise Euripides, the wisest of poets?

STREP. He the wisest! O, what shall I call you? But I shall get beaten again.

PHID. Yes, by Jupiter, with justice.

STREP. Why, how with justice? Who, O shameless fellow, reared you, understanding all your wishes, when you lisped what you meant? If you ¹said bryn, I, understanding it, used to give you to drink. And when you asked for mamman, I used to come to you with bread. And you used no sooner to say² caccan, than I used to take and carry you out of doors, and hold you before me. But you now, throttling me who was bawling and crying out because I wanted to ease myself, had not the heart to carry me forth out of doors, you wretch; but I did it there, while I was being throttled.

CHO. I fancy the hearts of the youths are panting to hear what he will say.³ For if, after having done such things, he shall persuade him by speaking, I would not take the hide of the old folks, even at the price of a chick-pea.⁴ It is thy business, thou author and upheaver of new words, to seek some means of persuasion, so that you shall seem to speak justly.

PHID. How pleasant it is to be acquainted with new and clever things, and to be able to despise the established laws! For I, when I applied my mind to horsemanship alone, used not to be able to utter three words before I made a mistake; but now, since he himself has made me cease from these pursuits, and I am acquainted with subtle thoughts, and arguments, and speculations, I think I shall demonstrate that it is just to chastise one's father.

⁴ "So geben wir für solches alten Kauzen Fell Keinen Pfüfferling weiter." Droysen.

STREP. Ride then, by Jupiter; since it is better for me to keep a team of four horses,¹ than to be killed with beating.

PHID. I will pass over to that part of my discourse where you interrupted me; and first I will ask you this: Did you beat me when I was a boy?

STREP. I did, through good will and concern for you.

PHID. Pray tell me, is it not just that I also should be well inclined towards you in the same way, and beat you, since this² is to be well inclined—to give a beating? For why ought your body to be exempt from blows, and mine not? And yet I too was born free. The boys³ weep, and do you not think it right that a father should weep? You will say that it is ordained by law that this should be the lot of boys. But I would reply, that old men are boys twice over, and that it is the more reasonable that the old should weep than the young, inasmuch as it is less just that they should err.

STREP. It is no where ordained by law that a father should suffer this.

PHID. Was it not then⁴ a man like you and me, who first proposed this law, and by speaking persuaded the ancients? Why then is it less lawful for me also in turn to propose henceforth a new law for the sons, that they should beat their fathers in turn? But as many blows⁵ as we received before the law was made, we remit; and we concede to them our having been well thrashed without return. Observe the cocks and these other animals, how they punish their fathers; and yet, in what do they differ from us, except that they do not write decrees?

The son should beat the father?" Walsh.

STREP. Why then, since you imitate¹ the cocks in all things, do you not both eat dung and sleep on a perch?

PHID. It is not the same thing, my friend; nor would it appear so to Socrates.

STREP. Therefore do not beat me; otherwise you will one day blame yourself.

PHID. Why, how?

STREP. Since I am justly entitled to chastise you; and you to chastise your son, if you should have one.

PHID. But if I should not have one, I shall have wept for nothing, and you will die laughing at me.

STREP. To me indeed, O comrades, he seems to speak justly; and I think we ought to concede to them what is fitting. For it is proper that we should weep, if we do not act justly.

PHID. Consider still another maxim.

STREP. No; for I shall perish if I do.

PHID. And yet² perhaps you will not be vexed at suffering what you now suffer.

STREP. How, pray? for inform me what good you will do me by this.

PHID. I will beat my mother, just as I have you.

STREP. What do you say? what do you say? This other again, is a greater wickedness.

PHID. But what if, having the worst Cause, I shall conquer you in arguing, proving that it is right to beat one's mother?

¹ "If you are thus for pecking at your father
Like a young fighting-cock, why don't you peck
Your dinner from the dung-hill, and at night Roost on a perch?" Cumberland.

² "The young ruffian seems to speak ironically and covertly:—
'And yet the γνώμη, which I am now about to propose for your consideration, is of such a nature, that, upon hearing it, all your late and present feelings and sufferings will go for nothing;—implying, that they will be succeeded by feelings so much more painful, that the former will, comparatively, vanish from his mind. Strepsiades, catching only at the open, and not at the covert sense, naturally expresses himself as impatient for any information which is to be of benefit to him in his present condition." Mitch.

"STREP. Nun geht's mir an den Kragen.

PHID. Vieleleicht zum Troste wird's ihm sein, für das, was er erfahren."
Droysen.

STREP. Most assuredly, if you do this, nothing will hinder you from casting¹ yourself and your Worse Cause into the pit along with Socrates.—These evils have I suffered through you, O Clouds, having intrusted all my affairs to you.

CHO. Nay, rather, you are yourself the cause of these things, having turned yourself to wicked courses.

STREP. Why, pray, did you not tell me this then, but excited with hopes a rustic and aged man?

CHO. We always do this to him whom we perceive to be a lover of wicked courses, until we precipitate him into misfortune, so that he may learn to fear the gods.

STREP. Ah me! it is severe,² O Clouds! but it is just; for I ought not to have withheld the money which I borrowed.—Now, therefore, come with me, my dearest son, that you may destroy the blackguard Chærephon and Socrates, who deceived you and me.

PHID. I will not injure my teachers.

STREP. Yes, yes, reverence Paternal Jove.³

PHID. "Paternal Jove," quoth'a! How antiquated you are! Why, is there any Jove?

STREP. There is.

PHID. There is not, no; for Vortex reigns, having expelled Jupiter.

STREP. He has not expelled him; but I fancied this, on account of this Vortex here. Ah me, unhappy man! when I even took you who are of earthenware for a god.⁴

PHID. Here rave and babble to yourself.¹ [Exit Phidippides.]

STREP. Ah me, what madness !² How mad, then, I was, when I ejected the gods on account of Socrates ! But, O dear Hermes, by no means be wroth with me, nor destroy me ; but pardon me, since I have gone crazy through prating. And become my adviser, whether I shall bring an action and prosecute them, or whatever you think.³—You advise me rightly, not permitting me to get up a law-suit, but as soon as possible to set fire to the house of the prating fellows. Come hither, come hither, Xanthias ! Come forth with a ladder and with a mattock, and then mount upon the thinking-shop, and dig down the roof, if you love your master, until you tumble the house upon them. [Xanthias mounts upon the roof.] But let some one bring me a lighted torch, and I'll make some of them this day suffer punishment, even if they be ever so much impostors.

1ST DIS. (from within). Hollo ! hollo !⁴

STREP. It is your business, O torch, to send forth abundant flame. [Mounts upon the roof.]

1ST DIS. What are you doing, fellow ?

STREP. What I am doing ? why, what else, than chopping⁵ logic with the beams of your house. [Sets the house on fire.]

STREP. That man, whose cloak you have taken.

THE ARGUMENT.

For the date and other particulars relative to the performance of this Comedy I give the words of Clinton, in the Fast. Hell. p. 69, 2nd edit.

"Aristophanis Σφήκες. Arg. Vesp. ἐδιδάχθη ἐπὶ ἄρχοντος Ἀμυνίου (sic) διὰ Φιλωνίδου—εἰς Λήναια. (Anthesterion, or Feb. v. c. 422, Ol. iii. 89,) καὶ ἐνίκα πρῶτος Φιλωνίδης [δεύτερος]. Προάγωνι· Λεύκων Πρέσβεισι τρίτος (sic legendum e cod. Rav.). Ed. Ald. et Kuster. Φιλωνίδης προάγων. Γλαύκων πρέσβεισι, τρίτος. Cod. Brunckii, Φιλωνίδης προάγων. Γλευκῆς Πρέσβεισι τρεῖς Cod. Ravenn. Φιλωνίδης προάγωνι Λευκῶν πρέσβεισι Γ. The name of Leucon was corrupted, because the first letter of Προάγωνι adhered to the following word, ΠΡΟΑΓΩΝΙΑΕΥΚΩΝ; hence the corruption of the word into ΓΑΕΥΚΩΝ and ΓΑΥΚΩΝ. Leucon, the comic poet, is acknowledged by various testimonies: Athen. viii. p. 343, c. Phot. Lex. v. Τίβριοι. Hesych. v. Παάπις—and flourished in these times.—Vide Suid. Λεύκων. Philonides, therefore, obtained the prize with the Σφήκες of Aristophanes; as he obtained the first with the Βάτραχοι (Φιλωνίδης ἐπεγράφη καὶ ἐνίκα) in v. c. 405, Ol. iv. 93."

In The Wasps, as in the two preceding Comedies, a knowledge of the jurisprudence of Athens is absolutely necessary and indispensable. This Drama is a satire on that litigious spirit so prevalent in every rank at the time of its representation. The plot is soon told. Philocleon (i. e. a partisan of Cleon) is represented as a bigoted devotee to that malady most incident to his countrymen. Bdelycleon, his son, (i. e. an opposer of Cleon,) endeavours to persuade him, by every means in his power, to change his present mode of life for one of a more noble cast. Every thing fails. At last, he proposes to convert his own house into a court of justice, and to remunerate Philocleon for his absence from the public suits. This succeeds, and the theft of a Sicilian cheese, by a house dog, soon gives the old gentleman a means of exercising his old craft as dicast. By an inadvertency he acquits the defendant—ἀπαρτῆεις ἄκων τὴν ἐπὶ-δικάζουσιν φέρει ψῆφον. The Parabasis follows. Afterwards Philocleon is brought forward in a different point of view, to use Mr. Mitchell's words, as, "The dicast turned gentleman;" or, as the Greek has it, ὁ δὲ γέρον πρὸς αὐλὸν καὶ ὄρχησον τρέπεται, καὶ γελωτοποιεῖ τὸ δράμα. "The Wasps is, in my opinion, the feeblest of Aristophanes' plays. The subject is too limited, the folly it ridicules appears a disease of too singular a description, without a sufficient universality of application, and the action is too much drawn out. The poet himself speaks this time in very modest language of his means of entertainment, and does not even promise us immoderate laughter." Schlegel.

THE WASPS.

[SCENE—the front of Bdelycleon's house.]

SOSIAS, XANTHIAS.

SOS. You there, what ails you, O wretched Xanthias?

XAN. I am learning to get rid of the nocturnal watch.¹

SOS. Then you owe your ribs a great mischief. Do you know² what a monster we are guarding?

XAN. I know; but I am desirous of sleeping without cares³ for a short while.

SOS. Do you run the risk, at any rate;⁴ since some sweet drowsiness is poured over my own pupils too.

XAN. What, are you mad,⁵ pray? or are you frenzied?

SOS. No; but a species of Sabazian sleep possesses me.

XAN. You then worship the same Sabazius⁶ with me; for just now a nodding slumber upon my eyelids, like some Persian, has invaded me. And in truth I saw just now a wondrous vision.⁷

Sos. And I too, verily, such a one as I never beheld before. But do you tell yours first.

XAN. Methought an eagle, very large, flew down into the forum, and snatched up in its talons a shield covered with brass, and bore it aloft towards heaven. And then methought Cleonymus¹ had thrown it away.

Sos. Cleonymus, then, differs in no wise from a riddle.² "How, pray," some one will say to his drinking companions, "happens it that the same beast on the earth, and in heaven, and in the sea, threw away his shield?"

XAN. Ah me! What evil then will happen to me, who have³ seen such a vision?

Sos. Do not be concerned, for nothing strange will happen; no, by the gods.⁴

XAN. Yet, in truth, a man who has cast away his arms, is a strange thing. Come, tell yours, in return.

Sos. Why, it is important; for it relates to the whole of the hull⁵ of the state.

XAN. Then tell me quickly the keel of the matter.

Sos. About my first sleep, some sheep⁶ sitting together with staffs and cloaks, appeared to me to be holding an assembly in the Pnyx. And then, methought a whale, a receiveress-general,⁷ having the voice of a bloated sow, made a speech to these sheep.

XAN. Faugh!

Sos. What's the matter?

XAN. Stop, stop, don't tell any more : your vision stinks¹ most abominably of rotten hide.

Sos. Then the accursed whale with a pair of scales was weighing bull's fat.²

XAN. Ah me, wretched man ! He wishes to create divisions amongst our people.

Sos. And methought Theorus sat near it, on the ground, with the head of a raven. And then Alcibiades nsped and said to me, "Do you see ? Theorus has the head of a flatterer."³

XAN. Rightly did Alcibiades lisp this.

Sos. Is not that strange,⁴ then — Theorus becoming a raven ?

XAN. By no means, but most proper.

Sos. How ?

XAN. How ? Being a man, he then suddenly became a raven. Is not this, therefore, clear to conjecture, that he will be raised aloft from us, and go to the ravens ?

Sos. Shall I not then give two obols and hire a person, who interprets dreams so cleverly ?

XAN. Come now, let me declare⁵ the argument to the audience ; first having premised to them some few matters as follows,⁶—to expect nothing very great from us, nor yet, on the other hand, jokes stolen from Megara.⁷ For we have neither two slaves throwing about nuts from a basket amongst the spectators, nor a Hercules defrauded of his dinner, nor yet is Euripides again treated with insult ; nor if Cleon even has become conspicuous on account of his good fortune, will we again make mincemeat of the same person. We have a little tale with a moral in it, than you yourselves not more clever,¹ but wiser than vulgar comedy. For we have a master there asleep above, the mighty one, he in the highest floor. He commanded us two to keep guard over his father, having confined him within, in order that he may not go forth out of doors. For his father is indisposed with a strange disease, which no one could ever hit upon or conjecture, unless he were to hear it from us. For guess! Amynias here, the son of Pronapus, says he is a lover of dice; but he says nothing to the purpose.

Sos. By Jove, he judges of the disease from his own case.

XAN. No; yet "love" is the beginning of the evil. This Sosias here says to Dercylus that he is a lover of wine.

Sos. By no means; for this is a gentleman's disease.²

XAN. Nicostratus, of Scambonis, on the other hand, says that he is fond of sacrificing or fond of hospitality.

Sos. By the Dog,³ Nicostratus, not fond of hospitality, since Philoxenus is a blackguard.

XAN. You talk nonsense to no purpose, for you will not find it out. If you are truly desirous to know, be silent now; for I will now declare the disease of our master. He is fond of the Heliæa, as never man was; and he loves this acting the dicast, and groans unless he sit upon the first seat.⁴ And during the night he sees not even a morsel of sleep. But in fact,⁵ if he close his eyes, if it were but a little bit, nevertheless his thoughts flit thither during the night around the clepsydra. And through being accustomed¹ to hold the pebble, he gets up holding together his three fingers, as if offering frankincense at the New Moon. And, by Jove, if he should behold written any where on a door, "Pretty Demus,² son of Pyrilampes," he'd go and write close by the side of it, "Pretty Cemus."³ And he said that the cock which used to crow at even, waked him late, having been prevailed upon, receiving money from those under account. And immediately after supper he bawls for his slippers; and then, having gone there very early, he sleeps first, sticking to the column like a limpet. And through moroseness awarding to all the long line,⁴ he enters his house like a bee, or a bumble-bee, having wax stuffed under his nails. And having feared he might sometime want for pebbles, he keeps a shingle within, in order that he may be able to act the dicast. In⁵ such sort does he rave: and being admonished, he always acts the dicast the more. Him, therefore, we are guarding, having shut him in with bars, that he may not get out; for his son is grieved at his distemper. And at first he appeased him with words, and tried to persuade him not to wear the cloak, and not to go forth out of doors; but he used not to obey. Next he washed him and cleansed him. But he did not much heed it. After this he purified him by Corybantic rites. But he rushed out together with the kettle-drum, and rushed into the New Court,⁶ and began to judicate. But when now he did not profit aught by these ceremonies, he sailed over to Ægina. And then he seized him, and made him lie down by night in the temple⁷ of Æsculapius: but he appeared at early dawn at the bar. From that time we no longer let him out. But he used to escape through the sewers and chimneys. And we stuffed up with rags every crevice there was, and made them fast. But he, like a jackdaw, used to hammer in pegs for himself into the wall, and then used to leap out. So we covered the whole hall with nets round about, and keep guard. Now the name of the old man is Philocleon, by Jove; but of his son here, Bdelycleon, having wanton and haughty manners.

BDELYCLEON. (from within). O Xanthias and Sosias, are you asleep?

XAN. Ah me!

SOS. What is the matter?

XAN. Bdelycleon is getting up. [Enter Bdelycleon.]

BDEL. Will not one¹ of you quickly run round hither? for my father has entered into the furnace, and is running about like a mouse, having crept in. But look about, that he may not escape through the hole of the kitchen-boiler. And do you press against the door.

SOS. Aye, Aye, master.² [Sets his back against the door.]

BDEL. King Neptune! why in the world, then, does the chimney rumble? Hollo you! who are you?

PHILOCLEON.

PHIL. I am smoke coming out.

BDEL. Smoke? Come, let me see of what wood you are.

PHIL. Of fig.³

BDEL. Aye, by Jove, which is the most pungent of smokes. But,—for you will not go in, where is the chimney-board? Go in again! [Philocleon is driven in again.] Come, let me⁴ also lay a lump of wood on you. There now⁵ seek some other

SOS. Push against the door; now press against it very vigorously, and like a man, for I am coming there. And take care of the lock and of the bar. Watch that he do not gnaw through the peg.

PHIL. (from within). What are you going to do? Will you not let me out, O most abominable, to judicate, but shall Dracontides escape?

BDEL. Would you be vexed at this?

PHIL. Yes, for the god at Delphi once upon a time responded to me, consulting him,² that I should then pine away, when any one shall have escaped me.

BDEL. O Apollo, averter of ill, what an oracle!

PHIL. Come, I entreat you, let me out, lest I burst.

BDEL. Never, O Philocleon, by Neptune!

PHIL. Then I will gnaw through your net with my teeth.

BDEL. But you have no teeth.

PHIL. Ah me, miserable man! Would I could kill you! would I could! Give me a sword as quick as possible, or a tablet of assessment.³

BDEL. This man desires to do some great mischief.

PHIL. No, by Jove, certainly not; but I wish to take and sell my ass together with his panniers, for it is the New Moon.⁴

BDEL. Pray, could not I then sell it as well?

PHIL. Not as I could.

BDEL. No, by Jove, better. Come, bring forth the ass.

XAN. What a pretext he has put forward! how dissemblingly! that you might let him out.

XAN. But, by Jove, he is carrying some one here² below, who has crept under him.

BDEL. Of what sort? Let me see.

XAN. This here. [Points to Philocleon, who is hidden under the ass's belly.]

BDEL. What is³ this? Pray, who in the world are you, fellow?

PHIL. Nobody, by Jove.

BDEL. You Nobody? Of what country?

PHIL. Of Ithaca; son of Runaway.⁴

BDEL. In no respect, by Jove, shall you go off with impunity, you Nobody! Draw him quickly from beneath. O most abominable! See where he's crept to! so that he seems to me most like the foal of a summons-witness.⁵ [Xanthias and Sosias drag him from under the ass.]

PHIL. If you won't let me alone, we will do battle.

BDEL. About what, pray, will you fight with us?

PHIL. About the shade of an ass.

BDEL. You are a knave far advanced in artifice,⁶ and reckless.

PHIL. I a knave? No, by Jove. You are not now aware that I am most excellent. But you will know it, perhaps, when you eat the paunch of an old Heliast.⁷

BDEL. Push the ass and yourself into the house.

PHIL. O fellow-dicasts, and Cleon, assist me. [Exit Philocleon with the ass.]

BDEL. Bawl within, now the door has been shut. Do you shove many stones against the door, and thrust in the peg again into the bar, and put the great kneading-trough against the beam, and roll it quickly against it. [Exit Bdelycleon.]

SOS. (scratching his head and looking towards the roof). Ah me, wretched man! Whence in the world has the little clod fallen upon me?

XAN. Perhaps from above a mouse has cast it upon you from some quarter.

SOS. A mouse! No, by Jove, but some roof-haunting Heliast here, creeping from under the tiles.

XAN. (spying Philocleon upon the roof). Ah me, miserable! the man is becoming a sparrow: he will fly off. Where, where is the net? Shoo,¹ shoo! shoo, back again! [Re-enter Bdelycleon: Philocleon retires again.]

BDEL. By Jove, in truth it were better for me to keep guard over Scione,² instead of this my father.

SOS. Come now, since we have scared him away, and since it is not possible that he can ever give us the slip without our perceiving it, why don't we lie down³ only a little bit?

BDEL. Nay, you wretch, his fellow-dicasts will come ere long, to summon this my father.

SOS. What do you say? Nay, it is now early dawn.⁴

BDEL. Yes, by Jove; for they have got up late to-day; since they always summon him at mid-night, with lamps in their hands, and humming dear old songs from Phrynichus' Phœnissæ,⁵ with which they summon him.

Sos. Therefore, if need requires, we will pelt them¹ at once with stones.

BDEL. Nay, you wretch, if any one irritate the race of old men, it is like to a wasps' nest; for they have also a very sharp sting in² their loins with which they sting; they buz and bounce and strike like sparks. [Exit Bdelycleon.]

Sos. Do not heed it. If I have stones, I will disperse a nest of many dicasts. [Xanthias and Sosias lie down and fall asleep.]

CHORUS.³

CHO. Proceed, advance vigorously. Comias, do you tarry? By Jove, you used not, however, to do so formerly; but you were as tough as a piece of dog's skin. But now Charinades is better than you at walking. Strymodorus⁴ of Conthyle, best of fellow-dicasts, is Evergides any where here, or Chabes of Phlya? There is present what still remains, papæ! papæax! of that youth, when at Byzantium⁵ we were fellow-soldiers keeping guard, both you and I. And then we two, while taking our rounds by night, stole, unobserved, the baker-woman's kneading-trough; and then split it up and cooked some pim-pernel.⁶ Come, let us hasten, my friends, since it will be now Laches'⁷ turn; and they all say that he has a hive of money. BOY.

BOY. Father, father, beware of this mud here.

CHO. Take you then a chip from the ground, and trim the lamp.

BOY. No; but methinks I'll trim it with this.

CHO. What has come into your head, pray, that you push up the wick with your finger, and that too when the oil is getting scarce, you do? for it gives you no uneasiness when one is obliged to buy it at a high price.

BOY. If, by Jove, you shall admonish us again with your knuckles, we will extinguish the lamps, and go away home by ourselves; and then, perhaps, in the dark, deprived of this, you will stir up the mud as you walk, like a snipe.²

CHO. Assuredly³ I punish even others greater than you. But this here, as I tread on it, seems to be mud; and it is certainly inevitable that the god rain within four days at the utmost. At any rate there are these here funguses⁴ upon the lamps; and he is wont, when this is the case, to rain most of all. And whatever fruits are not early have need that there should be rain, and that the north wind blow upon them. What is the matter, then, with our fellow-dicast in this house, that he does not come forward hither to our company? Assuredly he used not to be a laggard formerly,¹ but used to lead the way in front of us, singing the songs of Phrynichus; for the man is fond of singing. Come, I vote² we stand here, my friends, and call him out by singing, if by any means, having heard my song, he should creep out of doors under the influence of pleasure. Why in the world, then, does the old man not show himself to us before the doors, nor answer? Has he lost his slippers, or some where in the dark hit his toe against any thing; and then has his ankle become inflamed, being an old man? And perhaps he may have a swelling in his groin. Assuredly he used to be far the fiercest of our company, and alone used not to be persuaded; but whenever any one supplicated him, he used to bend his head down in this way and say, "You are boiling a stone." And perhaps on account of the fellow of yesterday, who escaped us by deceit by affirming, "That he was a friend of the Athenians, and was the first who gave information³ of the affairs at Samos,"—on this account having been grieved, he then perhaps lies sick⁴ of a fever. For the man is just that sort of a person. CHO. "I wore thee, then, a useless ornament,⁵ my little wallet."

BOY. Alas! alas! "It is our fortune to groan."⁶

PHIL. (peeping out). My friends, I have been pining away this long while, as I listened to you through the crevice. But indeed I am not able any longer to sing. What shall I do? I am guarded by these; for I have been wishing this long while to go with you to the balloting urns and work

³ According to the Scholiast, from Pindar. The former part is a parody upon Soph. Ant. vs. 2. Compare also El. 958.

"Although as a comic poet, Aristophanes is, generally speaking, in the relation of a parodist to the tragedians, yet he never attacks Sophocles." Schlegel. This dictum may be justly questioned. Have the heart,³ O king, to grant me this favour, having pitied my sufferings; or with a red-hot thunderbolt quickly reduce me to ashes; and then take me up and blow me away and cast me into hot pickle; or make me, pray, the stone, upon which they count the shells.⁴

CHO. Why, who is he that confines you thus,⁵ and shuts the doors? Tell us, for you will speak to well-inclined persons.⁶

PHIL. My son; but do not bawl, for he is sleeping here in the front of the house. Lower the tone of your voice.

CHO. As a pretext for what, O foolish fellow, does he wish to treat you thus?⁷

PHIL. He suffers me not, my friends, to act the dicast, nor to do any ill, but he is ready to feast me. But I am not willing.

CHO. Has the wretch, the haranguing Cleon,⁸ dared to utter this? For this man would never have dared to say this, if he were not a conspirator. But in consequence of this,⁹ it is time for you to seek some new device, which will cause you to come down hither, without the knowledge of this man here.

Καπνός was a nickname for Theogenes. See Av. 822, 1127.

⁷ “Π. = ἐπισχεσία, a pretext, excuse, τοῦ δ’ ἔφεξιν; = τίνος χάριν; Ar. Vesp. 338.” Liddell, Lex.

⁸ There is considerable difficulty in this epithet. It would be well if it could be understood to mean, “aping the powerful eloquence of our Cleon.” See Mitchell’s note. For χανεῖν, see Lob. ad Aj. 1227. The next line is omitted in Dindorf’s 3rd edition; as also 339, supra.

PHIL. What then can it be? Do ye seek it, since I would make every exertion; so much do I long to make a circuit of the tablets¹ with the shell.

CHO. Is there, pray, a crevice which you might be able to dig through from within, and then to escape, disguised in rags,² like the very prudent Ulysses?

PHIL. All parts have been secured, and there is not a bit of a crevice,³ not even for a pismire to creep through. You must seek something else; but a cheese⁴ it is not possible to become.

CHO. Do you remember, pray, once upon a time, when you, being on service, stole the spits and let yourself down by the wall, when Naxos⁵ was taken.

PHIL. I know, but what of this?⁶ for this is in no wise similar to that: for I was young, and was able to steal, and was master⁷ of my own actions, and no one kept watch over me, but I was permitted to fly without fear. But now hoplites with arms, drawn up in the passages, are on the look-out, while two of them⁸ at the doors with spits in their hands, watch me like a weasel that has stolen some meat.

CHO. But even now devise a plan as quick as possible, for it is morning, my little bee.

PHIL. Therefore it is best for me to gnaw through the net. But may Dictynna pardon me for the net.

CHO. These acts are in character with⁹ a man, who is hastening to safety. Come, lay your jaw to it.

PHIL. This has been gnawed through. Do not bawl by any means; but let us take care that Bdelycleon shall not perceive us.

CHO. Fear nothing, my friend, nothing; since I will make him, if he grumble, gnaw his heart, and run the race for his life: that he may know not to trample upon¹ the decrees of the two goddesses. But fasten the small cord through the window and then let yourself down, having fastened yourself to it, and having filled your soul with Diopithes.

PHIL. Come now, if these two perceive you and seek to fish me up, and to draw me within, what will you do? Tell me now.

CHO. We will defend you, all of us, having summoned a heart as tough as oak, so that it shall not be possible to confine you. Such deeds will we perform.

PHIL. I will do it then, relying upon you: and remember,² if I suffer aught, to take me up, and lament me, and bury me under the bar.

CHO. You shall suffer nought: fear nothing. Come, good sir, let yourself down with confidence, and with prayers to your country's gods.³

PHIL. (preparing to descend by the window). O master Lycus, neighbouring hero! for you delight in what I do, in the tears of the defendants on each occasion,⁴ and their lamentations. At any rate you came and fixed your residence here on purpose, that you might hear these things; and, alone of the heroes, you wished to sit beside the person who wept. Pity and save now your own neighbour, and I will never make water nor break wind near your reed-fence.⁵ [Re-enter Bdelycleon.]

BDEL. No, by Jove, certainly not; but is letting himself down, having fastened himself to a cord.

SOS. O most abominable!¹ what are you doing? Get down with you.²

BDEL. Mount quickly to the other window, and beat him with the boughs,³ if by any means he will back astern, having been beaten with the harvest-wreaths.

PHIL. Will you not assist me, as many as are going to have suits this year, Smicythion,⁴ and Tisiades, and Chremon, and Pheredipnus? When, if not now, will you aid me, ere that I be carried more in? [Philocleon is driven in.]

CHO. Tell me, why do we delay to rouse that wrath of ours, which we are wont to rouse, when any one irritates our wasps' nest? Now that, now that choleric sting, with which we punish⁵— [To the boys in attendance.] Come, my lads, throw off your garments as quick as possible, and run and shout and tell this to Cleon, and bid him come against a man who is a hater of our commonwealth, and who shall perish, because he introduces this opinion, "not to try causes."

BDEL. My good sirs, hear the matter, and do not bawl.

CHO.⁶ Yea, by Jove, to heaven;⁷ since I will not let go this man. Are not these things terrible, pray, and manifest tyranny? O city, and impiety of Theorus, and whatever other flatterer presides over us!

XAN. Hercules! they have stings too! Do you not see, master?

BDEL. Aye, with which they destroyed Philippus,¹ son of Gorgias, on his trial.

CHO. And in turn we will utterly destroy you too. But turn, each of you, hither, and put forth your sting, and then rush against him, all ready, in good order, full of anger and fury, that he may know well henceforth what² a swarm he has enraged.

XAN. This, in truth, is now a hard case, by Jove, if we must fight; for I dread to behold³ their stings.

CHO. Come, let go the man; otherwise, I declare you shall bless the tortoises for their shells.

PHIL. On then, fellow-dicasts, irascible⁴ wasps, do some of you in your wrath fly at their rumps, and ye others sting their eyes round about, and their fingers.⁵

BDEL. Midas, and Phryx, and Masyntias, render assistance here! and lay ye hold on this fellow, and do not give him up to any one; otherwise, ye shall breakfast on nothing in stout fetters. For I, having heard the sound of many fig leaves, know it. [Philocleon is seized by the servants.]

CHO. (to Bdelycleon). If you will not let this man go, something shall be fixed in you.

PHIL. O Cecrops, hero, king, serpent-like in your feet! dost thou suffer me to be overpowered in this way by barbarians, whom I have taught⁶ to weep four to the chœnix?

CHO. Then are there not, pray, many direful evils in old age? Doubtless there are. And now these two are forcibly overpowering their old master, having no recollection of the leather jackets of old, and the sleeveless frocks, which he used to purchase for them, and the caps, and used to benefit their PHIL. It appears then² you are ungrateful. But let me go, you, and you, ere that my son run out.

CHO. You shall speedily give us proper satisfaction for these things, at no distant period; that you may know what is the disposition of men passionate, and just, and looking sour.³

BDEL. Beat, beat the wasps from the house, Xanthias!

XAN. Nay, I am doing so; but do you also stifle them with smoke in abundance.

SOS. Will you not fly? Will you not to the crows? Will you not depart? Beat them with the lump of wood.

XAN. And do you add Æschines, the son of Sellus, and smoke him. [the Chorus give way and retire a few steps.] I thought I should drive you away some time at length.⁴

BDEL. But, by Jove, you would not have got rid of them so easily, if they had happened to have fed on the songs of Philocles.⁵

CHO. A conference with thee, thou hater of the democratic party, and loving absolutism, and siding with Brasidas,¹ and wearing fringes of wool, and keeping your mustache unshaven?

BDEL. By Jove, in truth it were better for me to give up my father altogether, rather than daily² contend with so great ills.

CHO. The matter has not yet arrived either at the parsley or the rue, for this most capacious word will we interpolate. Now, however, you are no way grieved, but you will be, when the public accuser asperses you with the self-same accusations, and summons your fellow-conspirators.

BDEL. Oh, by the gods,³ will you get away from me? or I am determined to be beaten and to beat the day through.

CHO. Never! no, as long as any part of me be left! you, who have⁴ thus set out for a tyranny over us!

BDEL. me, you ask for a leek, is it for a tyranny? or do you think that Athens brings you tribute of sauce?"

XAN. Aye, and yesterday¹ my lady, when I went in unto her at noon, being enraged because I requested her to ride the high horse, asked me, "If I am for setting up a riding tyranny."

BDEL. Yes, for these expressions are pleasing to them to hear; although I now, because I wish my father, having been freed from these early²-rising base-informing sad-litigious plaguy ways, to live the life of a gentleman, like Morychus,³ am accused of doing this because I am a conspirator and favour tyranny.

PHIL. Aye, by Jove, with justice; for I would not even accept of bird's milk in preference to this life, of which you are now for depriving me: nor do I so delight in prickly-roaches, or in eels; but would more gladly eat a little suitlet⁴ stewed in a dish.

BDEL. Yes, by Jove, for you have been accustomed to be delighted with such things. But if you will bear to be silent, and learn what I say, I think I shall teach you better, that you err in all this.

PHIL. I err, in acting as dicast?

BDEL. Nay, rather, don't perceive that you are laughed at by those whom you all but worship. Nay, you are a slave, without your knowing it.

PHIL. Cease speaking of slavery to me, who lord it over all!

BDEL. Not a bit of it:—But you are a slave, while you fancy you rule. For, teach us,⁵ father, what honour you have, who plunder Greece.

PHIL. And give me a sword too, for if I be overcome by you in argument, I will fall upon my sword.

BDEL. Tell me, Mr. Whatd'yecall'em, what if you do not abide by their decision?

PHIL. May I never drink my pay in pure good fortune.²

CHO. Now it behoves you, who are from our school, to speak something new, so that you shall appear——

BDEL. Let some one bring me hither my writing-desk as quick as possible.—(To the Chorus.) But what sort of a person will you appear to be, if you instigate him to this?

CHO. — not to speak after the manner of this stripling here; for you see how great is the contest,³ and for your all, if (which may Heaven forefend) this fellow shall conquer you.⁴

BDEL. Well now, I will write memorandums in short-hand⁵ of whatever he says.

PHIL. (to the Chorus). What say you, if this man overcome me in argument?

CHO. The multitude of old men is no longer of any use, not even in the least; but we shall be jeered in the streets, and called branch-bearers, husks of affidavits. Come, O thou who art about to dispute for our whole sovereignty, now boldly exert all thy powers of speech.

PHIL. Well now, I will demonstrate forthwith from the starting-point respecting our dominion, that it is inferior to no sovereignty. For what animal at the present time is more happy and enviable, or more luxurious, or more terrible, than

And then straightway he¹ lays his hand gently upon me as I approach, which has pilfered from the public money; and bowing low they supplicate me, uttering a piteous voice—"Pity me, father, I beseech you, if ever you yourself also stole any thing, when holding any office, or on service, when making purchases for your messmates." A fellow who would not even have known that I was alive, but for his former acquittal.

BDEL. (writing.) Be this my memorandum about "the supplicators."

PHIL. Then, when I have entered, after being entreated, and having had my anger wiped away, when within, I perform none of all these things which I promise; but I listen to them uttering all their eloquence² for an acquittal. Come, let me see; for what piece of flattery is it not possible for a dicast to hear there? Some lament their poverty, and add ills to their real ones, until, by grieving, he makes his equal to mine; others tell us mythical stories; others, some laughable joke³ of Æsop; others cut jokes, that I may laugh and lay aside my wrath. And if we should not⁴ be won over by these means, forthwith he drags in his little children by the hand, his daughters and his sons, while I listen. And they bend down their heads together,⁵ and bleat at the same time; and then their father, trembling, supplicates me as a god in their⁶ behalf, to acquit him from his account:—"If you take pleasure in the voice of your lamb, pity the voice of my son;" but if, on BDEL. (writing). Next, in the second place, I write down this item, "your derision of wealth." And relate to me the advantages which you possess, who say that you rule over Greece.

PHIL. Furthermore, when youths³ undergo the scrutiny, then our presence is required. And if Æagrus⁴ enter court as a defendant, he does not get off until he recite to us a passage from the Niobe, having picked out the most beautiful. And if a flute-player gain his suit, as our fee for this, he plays a finale for us dicasts as we leave the court, with his mouth-piece on.⁵ And if a father, leaving an heiress at his death, give her to any one, with respect to the principal clause,⁶ we, having bid a long farewell to the testament, and to the case, which is very solemnly put upon the seals, give this heiress to him who by his entreaties shall have won us over. And this we do without being responsible, while of the others not a single magistracy is so.⁷

BDEL. I certainly deem you happy with respect to this⁸ alone of these things which you have mentioned; but you do injustice in opening and falsifying the will of the heiress.

PHIL. Moreover, the Senate, and the people, when it is at a loss to decide a matter of importance, decrees⁹ to hand over the culprits to the dicasts; then Evathlus,¹⁰ and this big fellow, parasite-named, the caster away of his shield, say that they will not betray you,¹ but will fight for the democratic party. And no one ever at any time used to get his opinion carried amongst the people, unless he bade them dismiss the courts, when they have first tried one cause.² And Cleon himself, the conqueror³ of all in bawling, at us alone does not carp, but watches over us, holding us in his hands, and keeps off the flies.⁴ You, on the other hand, have never at any time done any whatever of these things to your own father. But Theorus,⁵ and yet he is a man in no way inferior to Euphemius, blacks our shoes with a sponge from the dish. Consider from what good things you are for excluding me, and withholding me; which you said you would prove to be slavery and hard service.

BDEL. Satisfy yourself with talking; for at all events you will assuredly some time or other cease from speaking of your very dignified empire, and will appear supremely ridiculous.⁶

PHIL. But what is the most delightful of all these things, which I had forgotten; when I come home with my fee, then⁷ all of them together salute me on my arrival, for the money's sake. And first *when*⁸ my daughter washes me, and anoints my feet, and stooping over me gives me a kiss, and wheedling me, at the same time fishes⁹ out the three-obol-piece¹⁰ with her tongue, and when my little woman, having won me over by flattery, brings me a light barley-cake,¹¹ and then sitting and sycophant, and like the craven Cleonymus, served as a perpetual butt for the comic muse.

But if he should not quickly knead me a cake, I possess this,¹ a protection against ills, an armour and defence against darts. And if you should not pour me wine to drink, I bring in this beaker (producing a large goblet) filled with wine,² and then in a recumbent posture I have my cup filled;³ while this, braying with open mouth, farts mightily and valiantly at your beaker. CHO. It behoves you to contrive devices³ of all kinds for an escape; for it is a difficult matter for one who does not speak on my side,⁴ to soften my wrath. Wherefore it is time for you to seek a good millstone, and newly chiselled, which shall be able to smooth down my passion, unless you speak to the purpose.

BDEL. It is a difficult task, and the office of a powerful intellect, and greater than belongs to comedians, to heal an inveterate disease, which has been bred in our state. But,⁵ O our father, son of Saturn—

PHIL. Cease; and call me not father. For if you shall not quickly teach me this,⁶ how I am a slave, you shall certainly die, even though it be necessary for me to abstain from entrails.⁷

BDEL. is nearly two thousand talents. From these now set down the yearly pay of the dicasts, being six thousand,—and they do not as yet dwell¹ in the country in larger numbers,—and it amounts ¶ ween, to a hundred and fifty talents.

PHIL. Then not even the tenth part² of the public revenue comes to us, as our fee!

BDEL. Certainly not, by Jove!

PHIL. And what then, pray, becomes of the rest of the money?³

BDEL. It goes to these who say, “I will not betray the noisy crowd of the Athenians, but will always fight for the democratic party.” For you, father, choose them to rule over you, cajoled by these little clap-traps. And then these take bribes from the cities at the rate⁴ of fifty talents, threatening them in such terms, and terrifying them; “you shall give the tribute, or I will thunder and overturn your city.” But you are contented to gnaw at the offal of your dominion; while your allies, when they have perceived the rest of the mob becoming hollow in the flank from the ballot-box, and eating nothing, think you a Connas’ decree, while to them they offer presents,⁵ pickle-jars, wine, carpets, cheese, honey, sesame-fruit, cushions, goblets, cloaks, chaplets, necklaces, drinking cups, health and wealth. But no one of those you rule over gives you even a head of garlic to your boiled fish, after you have laboured⁶ much on land and much at sea.

PHIL. No, by Jove, for I even sent for three heads⁷ of garlic at my own expense from Eucharides’ shop. But you weary me out by not demonstrating the slavery itself.

BDEL. Why, is it not great servitude, that all these should both be in office themselves, and their flatterers receiving pay? while, if one give you your three obols, you are⁸ content; for whom you have yourself acquired the money by rowing, and by fighting on foot, and by besieging, having laboured much. And in addition to this, you go when ordered, which especially makes me choke with spite, when a lewd stripling having entered your house, a son of Chæreas, straddling thus, wriggling his body, and with a coxcomb's air, bids you be present early and in good time to act as a dicast, since whoever of you arrives after the signal,¹ will not receive his three-obol-piece; while he himself bears off the counsel's fee, a drachma,² even if he come behind time; and sharing with some other of those in office with him, if any of the defendants give any thing, they, being two, having concerted the affair, make haste; and then, one draws it up, like a saw, and the other gives way in turn. But you gape at the pay-clerk, while that which is done escapes your notice.

PHIL. Is it thus they treat me? Alas! what do you say? How you agitate the very bottom of my heart, and draw my attention the more, and do I know not what to me.

BDEL. Consider therefore how, when it is possible for you and all to be rich, you are some way involved³ in difficulties by those who cheat the people on each occasion.⁴ Who, although ruling over very many cities, from the Euxine to Sardis, derivest not a morsel of benefit, except this which you receive. And this they always drop upon you as if from a fleece, by little and little, like oil, just to keep life in you. For they wish you to be poor; and I will tell you for what purpose they do this; it is, that you may know your domesticator; and then, when this fellow hisses you on, having hounded⁵ you on against some one of his enemies, you may spring upon them ferociously. for the people, it would be easy.¹ There are a thousand cities which now pay us tribute; if one² ordered each of these to maintain twenty men, twenty thousand³ of the commons would live on all dainties, and chaplets of every description, and beestings, and beestings-pudding,⁴ enjoying things worthy⁵ of their land, and of the trophy at Marathon. But now, like olive-gatherers, you go along with him who has the pay.⁶

PHIL. Ah, me! Something or other is poured like numbness over my hand, and I cannot hold my sword,⁷ but am now softened.

BDEL. But when they are themselves afraid, they offer you Eubœa, and promise to provide corn at the rate of fifty medimni. But they never as yet gave you any thing, except lately five medimni; and that you got with difficulty, at the rate of a chœnix of barley at a time, because you were indicted as an alien.⁸ For which reasons I have always been for shutting you up, wishing to support you, and that these might not laugh at you, talking big. And now I am thoroughly willing to give you what you will, except to drink pay-clerk's milk.⁹

CHO. Of a truth he was a wise man,¹ who said, "you cannot judge, till you have heard the speech of both."² For you now certainly appear to me to be far victorious; so that now I abate my anger, and throw down my staves. Come, O partner of the same age³ with us, obey, obey his words, and be not senseless, nor a very stubborn and crabbed man. Would that I had some kinsman or relative who reminded me of such things. But now some one of the gods, being present with you, assists you in this matter,⁴ appearing bodily, and is evidently benefiting you: so do you, being present,⁵ accept his offers.

BDEL. Well now, I will nourish him, providing whatever is suitable for an old man; gruel to lick up, a soft cloak, a fleecy coat, a nymph to rub his members and his loins. But in that he is silent, and mutters nothing, this cannot please me.

CHO. He has admonished himself with respect to⁶ the things, which he was then mad after; for he has just now acknowledged, and accounts all those things as faults,⁷ in which he did not obey you, when you urged him. But now, perhaps, he is obedient to your words, and is sensible, I am sure, altering his habits for the future, and obeying you.

BDEL. Come, my father, by the gods, obey me.

PHIL. In² what shall I obey you ? Say what you will, except one thing.

BDEL. Of what kind ? Come, let me see.

PHIL. Not to act as dicast : "but this shall Hades decide," before I will obey."

BDEL. Do you then, since you delight in doing this, go there no more, but here, remaining at home, give law to your domestics.

PHIL. About what ? why talk foolishly ?

BDEL. These things, which are done there. Because the house-keeper has privily opened the door, on her you shall impose a single fine only.⁴ Certainly you always used to do so there. And this indeed with good reason : if the sun's warmth arise at day-break, you shall act the Heliast in the sun ; and if it snows, sitting by the fire ; when it rains,⁵ you shall go within. And if you get up at noon, no Thesmothetes shall exclude you with the bar.

PHIL. This pleases me.

BDEL. In addition to this, if any one should plead a long cause, you shall not wait hungering, vexing yourself and the defendant.

PHIL. How then shall I be able, as heretofore, rightly to decide the causes, if I chew all the while.

BDEL. Aye, far better ; for this here is a common saying, that the dicasts, when the witnesses lie, with difficulty decide the matter by ruminating upon it.

PHIL. Of a truth you bring¹ me over to your opinion. But you do not yet tell me that, whence I shall receive my pay.

BDEL. From me.

PHIL. Capital ! because I shall receive by myself, and not with another. For in truth Lysistratus,² the jester, treated me most shamefully. Lately, when he had received a drachma with me, he went and changed it in the fish-market ;³ and then he offered me three mullet-scales, and I put them in my mouth, for I imagined I had received obols ; and then being disgusted, I smelt at them and spit them out, and then was for dragging him to law.

BDEL. What did he say to this ?

PHIL. What ? he said I had the stomach of a cock. " At any rate you will soon digest the money," said he laughing.

BDEL. Do you see, then, how much this also is which you will gain ?

PHIL. Not very small. But do what you are going to do.

BDEL. Wait then : and I will come with these things.
[Exit.]

PHIL. Observe the affair ! How the oracles are fulfilled ! For I had heard that the Athenians would some time or other decide causes in their own houses, and that every man would build⁴ for himself a little court of justice in his porch, very small, like a chapel of Hecate, every where before the doors. [Bdelycleon re-enters heavily laden.]

BDEL. Lo ! what further will you say ? since I bring you all, as many as I said, and much more beside. See here ! this chamber-pot shall hang upon the peg at your side, near at hand, if you should want to make water !

PHIL. Really you have invented this a clever remedy for strangury, and useful for an old man.

BDEL. And see here ! this fire too ! and a dish of lentils stands near it, to sup,⁵ if there should be any occasion.

PHIL. This again is clever ; for even if⁶ I be feverish, I shall at least receive my fee. For I shall remain here and gulp down the lentils. But why have you brought out the cock¹ to me?

BDEL. In order that if you should sleep when any one is pleading, this cock may rouse you by crowing above you.

PHIL. I want one thing still; but the rest please me.

BDEL. What is it?

PHIL. If by any means you were to bring out the chapel of Lycus.

BDEL. See, here it is present! and the king himself, see here he is!

PHIL. O master! O hero! how stern, then, you are to look upon!² such as Cleonymus appears to us.

Sos. Therefore neither has he himself, though a hero, any arms.

BDEL. If you sat down quickly, I would quickly call on a case.

PHIL. Call it on then, since I have been long since seated.

BDEL. Come now, what case shall I first bring forward for him? What mischief³ has any of those in the house done? The Thracian maid who lately burnt the pot—

PHIL. Stop, you there! How nearly you destroyed me! Are you going to call on the case without a bar, which used to appear as the first of our solemnities?

BDEL. By Jove, it is not here: I myself will run and fetch it immediately from within. What in the world is the matter? How powerful a thing is local attachment!

XAN. (within). Go to the devil! to think of keeping such a cur!⁴

BDEL. Pray what is the matter?

XAN. (entering). Why, did not Labes, the dog, just now rush past into the kitchen, and snatch up and devour a fresh Sicilian⁵ cheese?

PHIL. (to Bdelycleon, who enters with a swine-cote). What is this?

BDEL. A swine-cote of Vesta.¹

PHIL. Then do you bring it having committed sacrilege?

BDEL. No: but that beginning² from Vesta I may distress some one.

PHIL. Well, bring it forward quickly, since I long to pass sentence.

BDEL. Come now, let me bring the tablets,³ and the indictments. [Exit.]

PHIL. Ah me! you weary me, and will destroy me by wasting the time. I was wanting to draw furrows in my little farm.⁴ [Re-enter Bdelycleon.]

BDEL. Here they are!

PHIL. Now call on the case.

BDEL. Aye, aye, sir.⁵

PHIL. Who is this first here?

BDEL. Confound it! how vexed I am that I forgot to bring out the urns.

PHIL. You fellow! whither are you running?

BDEL. To fetch the urns.⁶

PHIL. By no means; for I had these gills.

BDEL. Then it will do most excellently; for we have all things, as many as we want, except indeed the clepsydra.

PHIL. (pointing to the chamber-pot). What is this here? Is it not a clepsydra?

CHO. Well now, we will utter an auspicious voice for you during¹ your libations and prayers, because you have nobly come to an agreement after your war and contention.

BDEL. First, now, let there be auspicious language.

CHO. O Phoebus,² Pythian Apollo, grant that the business which this man is planning before the doors be attended with good fortune to us all, since we have ceased from our wanderings. Io Pæan!

BDEL. CHO. We join in these prayers with you, and sing a song upon your new offices, on account of the things aforesaid. For we are well inclined, since what time we perceived that you love the democracy as no³ man does of those who are younger.

BDEL. If any Heliast be without, let him enter; since we shall not admit him when they begin to plead.

PHIL. Who, then, is this defendant here? What a condemnation he shall get!

BDEL. Hear now the indictment! "A dog of the Cydathenian tribe⁴ has indicted Labes, the Æxonian, for injustice, in that he devoured the Sicilian cheese¹ alone. The penalty a collar of fig-tree."

PHIL. Nay, rather, a dog's death, if once he be convicted. [Enter Xanthias with two boys dressed up as to resemble dogs.]

BDEL. But see!² here's Labes the defendant at hand.

PHIL. O the blackguard!³ What a thief's look he has too! How with his grin he thinks he will deceive me!

BDEL. Where is the plaintiff, the Cydathenian dog?

CYD. DOG. Bow, wow!

BDEL. Here he is.

PHIL. A second Labes this again; good at barking and at licking the pots.

BDEL. Silence, be seated, but do you [to Xanthias] mount up and accuse him.

PHIL. Come now, at the same time let me also pour in this and gulp it down.

XAN. as ACCUS. You have heard, O dicasts, the indictment, with which I indicted⁴ this fellow. For he has done most villanous deeds both to me and to my messmates. For he ran away into the corner, and Sicelised a large cheese, and filled himself in the darkness—

PHIL. By Jove, it is evident he has: in truth, just now this disgusting fellow belched cheese upon me most abominably.

XAN. as ACCUS. And he did not give me a share when I asked for it; and yet who will be able to do you a kindness, unless one throw something to me also, your dog?

PHIL. Did he give you no share?

XAN. as ACCUS. Not even to me, his companion.

PHIL. (supping his lentil-porridge). For the fellow is hot, no less than the lentil-porridge.

BDEL. By the gods, father, do not condemn beforehand; before you hear both.⁵

PHIL. But, my good sir, the matter is evident : it cries out of itself.¹

XAN. as ACCUS. Do not acquit him then, since he is besides far the fondest of eating alone² of all dogs ; who, having circumnavigated the mortar³ round about, has eaten up the rind from the cities.

PHIL. And I have not even enough⁴ to patch up the bucket.

XAN. as ACCUS. Therefore punish him ; for never could one bush be able to support two thieves,⁵—that I may not bark to no purpose, and in vain. But if you do not, henceforth I will not bark.

PHIL. Oh ! oh ! how great are the villanies he has denounced ! The fellow's a thief ! Don't you think so too, O cock ? Certainly, indeed, by Jove, he winks at me.⁶ Thesmothetes ! Where is he ? Let him give me the chamber-pot.

Sos. as THESM. Take it down yourself ; for I will summon the witnesses. " Let the witnesses for Labes appear !⁷ bowl, pestle, cheese-grater, brazier, pot, and the other utensils which have been burnt at the fire !" [To Philocleon.] What ! are you still making water, and don't sit down⁸ yet ?

PHIL. I fancy this fellow will evacuate to-day.

BDEL. Will you not moreover cease being ill-tempered and morose, especially to the defendants, but clingest to them with your teeth ? [To the dog.] Get up, make your defence. Why are you silent ? Speak.

PHIL. But this one seems not to know what to say.

BDEL. No ; but he appears to me to have experienced that, which Thucydides also once experienced when on his trial.⁹

PHIL. Nay, rather, he is a thief, and a conspirator.

BDEL. No, by Jove ; he is the best of the dogs of the present day, and able to guard many little sheep.¹

PHIL. What then's the good of him, if he devours the cheese ?

BDEL. In that he fights for you, and guards the door, and in other respects is most excellent. And if he did steal, pardon him ; for his education is imperfect.

PHIL. But I would have wished he had not even known his letters, so that² he might not have composed his oration to us, acting like a rogue.

BDEL. Hear, O good sir, my witnesses. Mount up, you cheese-grater, and speak aloud : for you happened to be house-keeper. Answer distinctly, if you did not grate down what you received for your soldiers. He admits having grated it down.³

PHIL. By Jove, he lies.

BDEL. My good sir, pity the wretched, for this Labes eats both offal and fishes' back-bones, and never remains in the same place ; but the other is fit for nothing but a house-dog.

² "ὥς, ὅπως, and most frequently ἵνα, are construed with the indicative of historical tenses, to denote that the proposition is not realized, or has not been realized, because the principal clause contains something merely desiderated. This idiom is purely hypothetic ; and one may, with slight alteration, suppose the principal clause transformed into a hypothetic clause (with εἰ), and the final clause into its apodosis (without ἵνα, &c.). Therefore the tenses have also the same signification as in hypothetic propositions :—ἵνα ἐγίνετο, so that it would have become, or might have become, (the latter of continuing or repeated actions,) ἵνα ἐγένετο or γεγένητο, so that it might have become. ἂν is occasionally added, inasmuch as, even when the simply wished for principal clause may actually take place, yet the accomplishment of the final clause may be still problematical.' BDEL. Come, I entreat you, pity¹ him, my father, and do² not destroy him. Where are his puppies ? Mount up, O miserables, and whining, beg, and entreat, and weep.

PHIL. Descend, descend, descend, descend !

BDEL. I will descend ; and yet this "Descend" has deceived very many indeed.³ But, nevertheless, I will descend.

PHIL. (burning his mouth with the lentil-porridge). Confound it ! How evil a thing is gulping down ! For now in my opinion I had never in any wise shed many tears, unless I had been filled with the lentil-porridge.⁴

BDEL. Pray, is he not acquitted, then ?

PHIL. It is difficult to know.

BDEL. Come, my dear little father, turn yourself to that which is better. Take this pebble here, and rush past to the second urn with your eyes shut, and acquit him, father.

PHIL. Certainly not ; "for my education is imperfect."

BDEL. Come now, let me lead⁵ you round this way by the shortest road.

PHIL. Is this the first urn ?

BDEL. This is it.

PHIL. Here it goes then !

BDEL. (aside). He is deceived, and has acquitted unwittingly.

PHIL. Come, let me pour them out. How, then, have we contended ? [Takes up the balloting urns and empties them.]

BDEL. The event will show.⁶ Labes, thou art acquitted.

PHIL. Now tell me that: is he really acquitted?

BDEL. Yes, by Jove.

PHIL. Then I am undone.¹

BDEL. Don't be concerned, my good sir, but stand up.

PHIL. (rising). How, then, shall I forgive myself for this—having acquitted a defendant? What in the world will become of me?² But, O ye highly-honoured gods, pardon me! for I did it unwillingly, and not in accordance with my habit.

BDEL. And be not displeased, for I, my father, will support you finely, taking you with me every where to dinner, to the banquet, to the public spectacles, so that you spend the rest of your life agreeably; and Hyperbolus shall not deceive you, and laugh at you.³ But let us go in.

PHIL. Aye,⁴ aye, sir, if you think fit. [Exeunt Philocleon, Bdelycleon, and attendants.]

CHO. Well, go you with joy, wherever you will! [To the spectators.] But do you meanwhile, you countless myriads, now take care of what is about to be spoken well, lest it fall unprofitably to the ground, for it belongs to a stupid audience to act thus, but is not in character with you.⁵

But now, O people, give your attention, if you love any thing true; for now the poet desires to censure the spectators. But having been raised to such a pitch of greatness, and honoured as no man ever was amongst you, he says he has not, though elevated, completed his elevation, nor puffed up his own conceit, nor does he carouse around the Palæstra tampering with the pupils.² And if any lover, hating to have his darling satirized, hastened to him, he denies ever having acceded to any one, having a just judgment; that he may not make the muses, with whom he associates, procuresses. And when he first began to publish, he denies having attacked mere men, but with³ the spirit of a Hercules, assailed the greatest monsters, forthwith from the commencement having boldly joined battle with the jagged-toothed⁴ monster itself, from whose eyes most dreadful rays⁵ of Cynna were glaring, and around whose head a hundred heads of flatterers, devil take them,⁶ were licking round about; and it had the voice of a torrent pregnant with destruction, and the stench of a sea-calf, the unwashed testicles of a Lamia, and the rump of a camel. When he beheld such a monster, he denies having through fear bought him off with a bribe; but still even now he fights for you. And he declares that after him,⁷ he last year attacked the night-mares, and the fevers, which used to strangle your fathers by night, and choke your grandfathers, and lying down upon their beds, used to glue together affidavits, and summonses, and evidences against those of you⁸ who were quiet people; so that many leaped up in terror to the Polemarch. trayed him last year, when he had sown with the newest¹ sentiments, which, through your not clearly understanding them, you made powerless. And yet, many times and on many occasions making libations, he swears by Bacchus, that no one has ever at any time heard better comic verses than these. This, therefore, is disgraceful to you, who did not understand them immediately.² But the poet has been esteemed none the worse among the wise, because, out-stripping his rivals, he utterly destroyed his hope of victory.³ But henceforth, good sirs, cherish more and honour those of your poets who seek to say, and to find out, something new, and preserve their thoughts, and put them into your chests with your apples. And if you do this, there will be an odour of cleverness from your clothes throughout the year.⁴

the swan. But even from these remnants we must assume youthful strength ; for I consider my old age to be superior to the curls, and dress, and lewdness of many striplings.

If any of you, O spectators, having seen my shape, then wonder to see me laced up in the waist like a wasp, or what is the meaning of our sting, I will readily teach him, even though he should be unpolished before.¹ We to whom this rump is attached are Athenians, alone rightfully of noble birth, and of the native stock ; a most manly race, and one which assisted this city most of all in battles, when the barbarian came, stifling the whole city with his smoke, and wasting it with fire, purposing to take away our combs by force. For we immediately ran out with spear and with buckler, and fought with them, having drunk sharp anger, man standing by man,² biting his lip through³ rage ; and by reason of the arrows it was not possible to see the sky. But, nevertheless, with the gods on our side, we repulsed them about eventide.⁴ For, before we fought, an owl flew over our army. And then we followed, darting at their trowsers ; but they fled, stung in their jaws and eye-brows ; so that among the barbarians every where, still, even now, nothing has a braver name than the Attic wasp.

Truly,⁵ then was I terrible, so that I did not fear any thing ; and I subdued my foes, sailing thither with the triremes ; for we had then no thoughts how we should speak a speech rightly, nor how we should calumniate any one, but¹ who should be the best oarsman. Hence, therefore, having taken many cities of the Medes, we are the chiefest cause of the tributes² being brought in hither, which the striplings steal.

If you often observe us, you will find us in all respects,³ in our manners and way of living, most like to wasps. For in the first place, no animal, when irritated, is more irascible, nor yet more peevish than we. Next, we contrive all the rest like unto wasps. For being collected in swarms, like the wasps' nests, some of us act the dicast where the Archon holds his court; others by the Eleven; others in the Odeum; others crowded together near the walls, frequently bowing the head to the earth, scarcely moving in their cells, like the grubs. And we are most full of resources for the rest of our maintenance; for we sting every one, and procure a livelihood. But indeed⁴ drones sit among us, not having a sting; who lie in readiness, and devour the fruit of our tribute, not being worn out with labour. But this is most grievous to us, if any one who has not seen service, carry off our salary, having received neither oar, nor spear, nor blister in defence of this country. But in brief, I move⁵ that, whoever of the citizens has not the regular sting,⁶ should not receive his three obols. [Re-enter Philocleon and Bdelycleon.]

PHIL. Never, certainly, while I live, will I strip off this cloak; since it alone preserved me when drawn up for battle, when the mighty Boreas invaded me.

BDEL. You appear to wish to experience nothing good.

PHIL. No, by Jove, for it is in no wise suitable for me. For before this, having been filled with small fry, I paid three obols to the fuller⁶ as a debt.

BDEL. Yet certainly, at least,⁷ let it be tried, since once you have delivered over yourself to me to benefit.

PHIL. What then do you order me to do?

BDEL. Let go the cloak, and put on this mantle here in the fashion of a cloak. [Takes off his cloak.]

PHIL. By all the gods, what is this plague?

BDEL. Some call it a Persian cloak, others a Caunace.

PHIL. But I fancied it a Thymætian wrapper. [Puts it on.]

BDEL. And no wonder too, for you have not been to Sardis, for you would have known; but now you don't know.

PHIL. What I? No, by Jove, certainly not: but to me it appears to be most like to a top-coat of Morychus.¹

BDEL. No; these are woven at Ecbatana.

PHIL. Is woollen tripe made at Ecbatana?²

BDEL. By no means,³ my good sir; this is woven by the barbarians at a great expense. Of a surety this consumed with ease a talent of wool.

PHIL. Ought we not then, pray, more properly to call this wool-consumer, than Caunace? [Attempts to throw it off again.]

BDEL. Stop, my good sir, and stand with it on.

PHIL. Alas, wretched man! how hot a stench⁴ the filthy garment belched upon me! [Throws it off.]

BDEL. Will you not put it on?

PHIL. No, by Jove, not I. But, my good sir, if it must be so, put on me a baking-pot.

BDEL. Come, at least I will throw it around you.⁵ Proceed then. [Throws the mantle over Philocleon's shoulders.]

PHIL. At least, however, lay down a flesh-hook too.

BDEL. Why? why, pray?⁶

BDEL. (offering a pair of Laconian shoes). Put in your foot, my good sir, and stoutly tread upon the Laconian territory with speed.

PHIL. You do me injustice, in disembarking my foot upon the enemy's country. [Draws back with only one shoe on.]

BDEL. Come, the other foot also!

PHIL. By no means this one, since one of its toes is altogether a Laconian-hater.

BDEL. There is no other way but this.²

PHIL. Wretched man that I am, who³ in my old age shall get no chilblain!

BDEL. Be quick and put it on; and then, like a wealthy man, advancing thus, swagger very effeminately. [Puts on the other shoe, and arranges his dress.]

PHIL. See! look at my dress, and observe to which of the wealthy I am most like in gait.

BDEL. To what? To a boil covered with garlic.

PHIL. Well now, I am eager to swagger.

BDEL. Come now, will you know how to utter dignified words, when very learned and clever men are present?

PHIL. I shall.

BDEL. What, then, can you speak?

PHIL. Very many: in the first place, how the Lamia⁴ fizzled when it was caught; and then how Cardopion's mother——

BDEL. Tell me no fables,⁵ but domestic stories about men, such as we are most accustomed to discourse of.

PHIL. Then I know that one of the very domestic stories, how—"Once upon a time there was a mouse and a weasel."⁶

BDEL. "O thou lubberly and ignorant fellow," said Theogenes to the scavenger, and that too, abusing him. Are you going to tell a story of mice and weasels amongst men?

PHIL. Stop, stop ; you talk nonsense.⁶ How could a man contend in the pancratium with a breast-plate on ?

BDEL. Thus the wise are accustomed to discourse. But tell me another thing—when drinking with your entertainers, what most manly feat of yours in your youth do you think you could tell ?

PHIL. That, that was the bravest of my feats, when I purloined Ergasion's vine-props.

BDEL. You will destroy me. What vine-props ?⁷—But tell how once upon a time you pursued a boar, or a hare, or ran the torch-race ; having bethought yourself of a most dashing feat.

PHIL. Then I know the most dashing feat ; when I prosecuted Phayllus the racer for defamation, and cast him by two votes, being still a great lubberly boy.⁸

PHIL. How then shall I recline ? Tell me quickly.

BDEL. Like a gentleman.

PHIL. (throwing himself on the seat in an awkward posture). Is it thus you order me to recline ?

BDEL. By no means.

PHIL. How then ?

BDEL. Stretch out your knees, and fling yourself in an easy² position, as they do in the gymnasium, on the coverlets. Then praise some of the brazen vessels ; survey the roof ; admire the tapestry³ of the hall. Water for the hands ; bring in the tables ;⁴ we sup ; we are washed ; now we pour out libations :—

PHIL. By the gods, are we feasting on a dream ?

BDEL. A flute-girl plays on her flute :⁵ your fellow-guests are Theorus, Æschines, Phanus, Cleon, and some other stranger at the head of Acestor. In company with these, see that you take up the catches cleverly.⁶

PHIL. What, really ? Aye, as none of the Diacrii⁷ shall take it up.

BDEL. I shall know : suppose me to be Cleon.⁸ And first I sing the catch of Harmodius ; and you will take me up :—
“There never yet was a man in Athens”——

PHIL. “No, never such a knave, or thief.”

BDEL. Will you do this ?⁹ You will perish by the way, if PHIL. But if he threaten, by Jove, I will sing another strain:—"You¹ fellow, you madman possessed of great might, you will overturn the city sometime!²—It is just tottering."

BDEL. But how,³ when Theorus, reclining at your feet, sings, having taken Cleon by the right hand, "My friend, having learned the story of Admetus, love the good."⁴ What catch will you recite in reply to this?

PHIL. Somehow in this way:—"It is not possible to play the fox, or to be a friend to both at once."

BDEL. After this man Æschines the son of Sellus will take it up, a man clever and musical; and then he will sing:—"Money⁵ and subsistence both to Clitagora,⁶ and me, with the Thessalians"—

PHIL. "Much, in truth, have you and I squandered."

BDEL. This, indeed, you understand pretty well. But remember that we⁷ go to dinner to Philoctemon's. [Calls to a servant.] Boy, boy, Chrysus, make ready the dinner for us, that we may be tipsy⁸ for a while.

PHIL. By no means: drinking is bad; for from wine proceed both the breaking of doors, and the dealing of blows, and the throwing of stones; and then the paying of money, after your drunken head-ache.

BDEL. Not if you associate with gentlemen, for either they intercede with the sufferer, or you yourself tell some witty story, a fable of Æsop, or of Sybaris, of the number of those which you have learnt at the banquet; and then you turn the matter into a jest, so that he lets you off, and takes his departure.¹

PHIL. Then I must learn many² stories, if I am to pay nothing, if I commit any ill. Come now, let us go, let nothing detain us. [Exeunt Philocles, and Bdelycleon.]

CHO. Oftentimes, in truth, have I appeared to myself to be clever, and never at any time to be stupid; but rather so is Amynias³ the son of Sellus, of the race of⁴ Crobylus, that fellow whom I once saw, instead of his apple and pomegranate, dining with Leogoras;⁵ for he hungers, like Antipho.⁶ But indeed, he went as ambassador to Pharsalus, and then he there alone kept company with the Thessalian Penestæ alone,⁷ being himself a beggar inferior to none. O happy Automenes, how we bless you! You have begotten children most skilful. In the first place, he who is a friend to all, and a very wise man, the most skilful in playing the cithara, whom homage attended. The second an actor,—'tis hard to say how⁸ clever! Then Aripheades,⁹ by far the most clever, whom his father once affirmed upon oath to have spontaneously learned to act obscenely, going constantly into the brothels, having learned this from no one, but from his clever natural talent.

There are some who said of me, that I was become reconciled with him again, when Cleon was troubling me a little, assaulting me, and provoked me with abuse. And then, when I was flayed with beating, those outside laughed to see me bawling loudly, there being no concern¹ for me, but only just to know, if I should utter any little jest, when hard put to it. Having observed this, I played the ape a little.² So now "the prop deceived the vine." [Enter Xanthias.]

XAN. O tortoises! happy in your hide, and thrice happy in the covering on your sides! How well and cleverly you have roofed over your backs with shell, so as to keep off the blows! But I am dead with being tattooed with a stick.

CHO. What³ is the matter, boy? for it is right to call him "boy," who receives blows, even if he be old.

XAN. For is not the old fellow a most mischievous pest, and far the most quarrelsome of the guests in his cups. And yet there were⁴ present Hippyllus, Antipho, Lycon, Lysistratus, Theophrastus, and Phrynichus.⁵ Of all these he was by far the most insolent. For forthwith, when he was filled with many good things, he danced, he skipped, he farted, he laughed, like a little ass well fed with parched barley. And he beat me wantonly, crying out, "Boy, boy." Then Lysistratus, when he saw him, made a simile:—"You are like, my old boy, to a newly-enriched old man,⁶ and to a constable who has run⁷ away to a chaff-heap." But he bawled aloud, and compared him in turn "To a locust which had cast⁸ the leaves of its cloak," and to "Sthenelus⁹ stripped of his trap-

The old fellow asked Theophrastus:—"Tell me, on what do you plume yourself, and pretend to be a pretty fellow, you who play the parasite towards whoever² happens to be well off?" In such manner did he wantonly insult them in turn, jeering them rudely, and moreover most absurdly telling stories which had nothing to do with the matter. But you will not repay it, or set about it, I well know; but will deceive it, and grin greatly at it; for you have done it already to many others.¹ But if now you will be no ill woman,² when my son dies, I will redeem you and keep you as my concubine, my little pig. But now I am not master of my own property, for I am young, and am very strictly watched. For my little son watches me, and he is morose, and a cummin-splitting cress-scraper³ besides. On this account, therefore, he fears for me, lest I should be corrupted; for he has no father but me. And see, here he is himself too! He seems to be running towards you and me. But stand with these torches as soon as possible, that I may wantonly mock⁴ him, as he once did me before my initiation. [Re-enter Bdelycleon.]

PHIL. What flute-girl? Why do you utter these absurdities, as though you had fallen from the tomb?⁷

BDEL. (pointing to the flute-girl). By Jove! this, I ween, is your Dardanis.

BDEL. But is not this thing behind a rump?

PHIL. Nay, this is a branch which projects from the torch.

BDEL. What do you say? What branch? [To the flute-girl.] Will you not come hither? [Takes the girl by the hand and proceeds to lead her away.]

PHIL. Ah! ah! what are you going to do?

BDEL. To take and lead this woman away, having deprived you of her, and thinking you to be old,¹ and able to do nothing.

PHIL. Now hear me: when I was a state ambassador at Olympia, Ephudion contended bravely with Ascondas, though he was now an old man. Then the elder struck and prostrated the younger with his fist. Wherefore, take care, lest you get a pair of black eyes.

BDEL. (retiring with the flute-girl). By Jove, you have thoroughly learned Olympia. [Enter a baking-woman, attended by her witness.]

B. WOM. (to her witness). Come, stand by me, I entreat you by the gods, for here is the fellow who ruined me, striking me with his torch, and knocked out afterwards ten loaves at an obol a-piece, and four which I had given into the bargain. [Re-enter Bdelycleon.]

B. WOM. What, do you laugh at me? I summon you, whoever you are, before the Market-clerks, for injury¹ done to my wares, having this Chærephon as my witness.

PHIL. Nay, by Jove, hear, if I appear to say any thing to the purpose. "Once upon a time Lasus² and Simonides brought rival plays upon the stage. Then Lasus said, 'I am little concerned.'"

B. WOM. What, really, you fellow?

PHIL. And you, now, Chærephon, appear to me to be a witness to a sallow³ woman, "To Ino suspended at the feet of Euripides."⁴ [Exeunt Baking-woman and witness.]

BDEL. See! here's another coming to summon you, as it seems. Certainly, indeed, he has his witness with him. [Enter a plaintiff, attended by his witness.]

PLAIN. Ah me, miserable! I summon you, old man, for outrage.

BDEL. For outrage? Nay, nay,⁵ by the gods, don't summon him; for I will pay you the penalty for him, whatever you fix it at, and will owe you thanks beside.⁶

PHIL. Nay, rather, I will make peace with him willingly; for I confess that I struck and pelted him.⁷ But come hither

CHO. I deem the old man happy for his good fortune, because¹ he has so far ceased from his sober ways, and mode of life; and now having learned different things instead, assuredly he will experience something great towards luxury and ease. But perhaps he will not be willing, for it is difficult to renounce one's nature, which one has always had. And yet many have experienced this: by siding with the opinions of others, they have changed their habits. But the son² of Philocleon will go off, having met with much praise from me, and from those who are wise, on account of his love for his father,³ and his wisdom. PHIL. What is this which approaches? a shrimp, or a spider?

BDEL. This is the pinna-guard² of the race, the youngest that makes tragedy.

PHIL. O Carcinus! happy in your possession of fine children! What a multitude of wrens has fallen down! But I must go down³ against them, wretch! Mix brine-pickle for these, if I conquer.

CHO. Come now, let us all make a little room for them, that in quiet before us they may whirl themselves about. Whirl round, advance in a circle, and punch yourself in the belly, fling your leg sky-high, let gyrations be made; for the king himself who rules the sea, your father, approaches, delighted with his own children, the noble trio.⁵ [Carcinus enters and joins the dance.]

But quickly lead us out of doors, if at all you like to dance; for no one has ever done this before—dismissed a chorus of comedians dancing.⁶ [Exeunt omnes.]

² Xenocles is meant. See note on Nub. 1259

⁵ There is also a pun on ρᾶίς and δρᾶίοναι.

THE ARGUMENT.

"Aristoph. Εἰρήνη. In the thirteenth¹ year of the war Pac. 990, τρυνχόμεθ' ἤδη τρία καὶ δέκ' ἔτη. Schol. Pac. 353, γ' γὰρ ἔτη εἶχον πολемоῦντες. Consequently not before the spring of the archon Astyphilus." Clinton, Fast. Hellen., p. 69. "The Peace of Aristophanes, according to a recently discovered notice of the Scholiast, was brought out in the archonship of Alcæus, at the Great Dionysia, that is, in the March of the year 421. This piece obtained the second prize, the Κόλακς of Eupolis the first, and the Φράτορες of Leucon the third." Droysen. The plot is this:—Trygæus, a rustic patriot, deeply indignant at the continuance of the Peloponnesian war, resolves to ascend to heaven for the purpose of remonstrating with Jupiter on the evils which he has been inflicting on the Grecian cities. He accomplishes his aerial voyage on the back of a gigantic dung-beetle, which he has fed and trained for this excursion; but finds that the gods have emigrated from their usual place of residence, and that their place in heaven is occupied by the demon of War, who is occupied in pounding the Greek states in a huge mortar. His benevolent enterprise is not, however, destined to be fruitless; for having learned from Mercury that the goddess Peace has been shut up in a dungeon, he contrives, by the help of all the Greek nations, to extricate her from her imprisonment, and descends with her in triumphal state to earth.—The play concludes with the restoration of the goddess to her ancient honours, the festivities of the rural population, and the nuptials of Trygæus, who is but poorly rewarded for his adventurous flight by receiving the hand of a nymph of somewhat equivocal reputation. *Droysen*² surmises that there were two editions put forth by the poet, of which the present copy is the second.

² "Diese äusseren Gründe, in Verbindung mit den oben bezeichneten Sonderlichkeiten des Stückes, veranlassen mich zu glauben, dass der Frieden, wie wir ihn jetzt haben, die spätere Bearbeitung mit sehr starken und nichts weniger als glücklichen Veränderungen ist."

PEACE.

[SCENE—the interior of a farm-yard; two servants are seen busily engaged near a large pig-sty.]

1ST SERVANT. BRING, bring as quickly as possible, a cake for the beetle.

2ND SERVANT. Here it is. Give it to him, the devil take him!¹ And may he never eat a sweeter cake than it!²

1ST SER. Give him another cake, made of ass's dung.

2ND SER. Well! there's another!³ Why, where is the one you brought just now? Has he not devoured it?

1ST SER. Yes, by Jupiter, he snatched it away and bolted it whole, having rolled it round with his feet. Come, beat up for him, then, as quickly as possible, many thick⁴ ones.

2ND SER. You dung-gatherers,⁵ help me, by the gods, if you do not wish to allow me to be suffocated!⁶

1ST SER. Give him another, another made of the dung of a boy-catamite; for he says he likes it beaten up.

2ND SER. Very well.—From one thing, sirs, methinks I am free; for no one can say that I eat while I knead.

² "Utinam tu nunquam suaviorem hac mazam comedas! All the wit of the passage was lost in the corrupt reading φάγοι for φάγοις. This is a frequent error of the copyists, especially in the end of a verse." Brunck. The reading proposed by this learned editor improves the sense of the passage, but it is unfortunately unsupported by any authority.

³ "Da ist noch einer!" Droysen.

⁶ Cf. Eccles 370, 1055, 1068. Vesp. 439. Thesm. 698.

1ST SER. Ha! Bring another, and another, and another; and still beat up others.

2ND SER. No, by Apollo, will I not! for I am no longer able to bear the filth. Therefore I will seize and take away the filth itself.¹ [Exit.]

1ST SER. Aye, by Jupiter, to the deuce, and yourself into the bargain. [Re-enter 2nd Servant.]

2ND SER. (to the spectators). If any of you knows, let him tell me whence I can purchase an unperforated nose; for it appears no task is more wretched than to knead and offer a beetle to eat.² For a pig or a dog readily³ falls to, according as one evacuates; but this fellow bears himself haughtily through pride, and does not deign to eat, unless I serve up a kneaded ball to him, as if he were a lady, having beaten it up the whole day. But I will see if he has ceased from eating, having opened a little⁴ of the door in this way, that he may not see me. [Goes to the pig-sty and peeps in.] Fall to! May you never leave off eating till⁵ you burst unawares. How the abominable creature stoops down and keeps eating like a wrestler,⁶ laying his grinders to it; and that too turning round his snout and two paws somehow in this way,⁷ like those who twist the thick ropes for merchant vessels. The creature is abominable, and stinking, and gluttonous; and I know not of what deity in the world it is the attack.⁸ For, indeed, it does not appear to me to belong to Venus, nor, assuredly, to the Graces.

1ST SER. Why, whose is it?

2ND SER. It must be that this is the portent of Jupiter descending in thunder. Therefore some one of the spectators, some stripling wise in his own conceit, will now say, "What's the matter? For what purpose the beetle?" And then some Ionian, who sits beside him, says, "I fancy¹ this hints² at Cleon; since he³ shamelessly eats excrement."—But I will go in and give the beetle to drink. [Exit.]

1ST SER. (coming forward). And I will tell the argument to the boys, and to the youths, and to the men, and to the oldest men, and furthermore to those who think themselves ever so much more than men.⁴ My master is mad after a new fashion; not as you are mad, but in another very novel way. For, looking up to heaven throughout the day, he thus with open mouth reviles Jupiter, and says, "O Jupiter, what in the world are you intending to do? Lay aside the besom! Do not sweep away Greece!"

TRYGÆUS (behind the scene). Ho! ho!

1ST SER. Be silent! for methinks I hear his voice.

TRY. (behind the scene). O Jupiter, what in the world do you wish⁵ to do to our people? You will gut our cities without being aware of it.

1ST SER. This, this is the very⁶ mischief of which I spoke; for you hear the proof of his madness. But you shall hear what he said at first, when the phrensy⁷ began. For here he said to himself, "Would⁸ that I could proceed direct to the mansion of Jupiter!" Then he used to construct slender little ladders, and clamber up upon these towards heaven; till he fell down and broke his head.⁹ And yesterday, after this, he rushed out some whither and brought in a very large Etnæan¹ beetle; and then forced me to groom it; and he himself pats it like a colt, and says, "O my little Pegasus!² my noble winged creature! see that you take me on your back and fly straight to the mansion of Jupiter."—But I will peep in thus³ and see what he is doing. [Opens the door of the farm-yard and peeps in.] Ah, unhappy man! come hither, hither, O neighbours! for my master is rising aloft into the air upon his beetle, as on horseback.⁴ [The door of the farm-yard opens, and Trygæus is seen mounted on a huge dung-beetle.]

TRY. Softly, softly, gently, O beetle! Do not go very violently immediately at first, trusting to your strength, before you shall have sweated and made supple the nerves of your joints with the rush of your wings. And do not breathe upon me offensively, I beseech you. But if you will do so, remain here in my house.

1ST SER. O lord and master! how crazed you are!

TRY. Silence! silence!

1ST SER. Whither, pray, are you pursuing vanities⁵ to no purpose?

TRY. I am flying in behalf of all the Greeks, having contrived a novel and daring exploit.

1ST SER. Why do you fly? Why to no purpose are you mad?⁶

TRY. It behoves you to use words of good omen, and not to mutter any thing bad, but to raise a shout; and command the people to be silent, and to wall up with new bricks the privies and sewers,⁷ and to shut up their backsides.

1ST SER. It is not possible that I can keep silence,⁸ if you do not tell me whither you are intending to fly.

TRY. To ask him what he designs to do respecting all the Greeks.

1ST SER. But if he should not tell you?

TRY. I will indict him for betraying¹ Greece to the Medes.

1ST SER. Never, by Bacchus, while I live!

TRY. There is no² other way.

1ST SER. Alas! alas! alas! [Runs to the farm-house.]
O damsels, your father is secretly taking his departure for heaven, having left you deserted! But entreat your father, O unhappy girls! [Enter daughters of Trygæus.]

DAUGH. O father, father! has a true report come to our abodes, that with the birds thou wilt go bootlessly to the crows,³ having deserted me? Is aught of these reports true? Tell me, O father, if at all you love me.

TRY. You may suppose so, my daughters; but the truth is,⁴ I am grieved at you, when you ask me for bread, calling me papa, and there is not even a bit of money in the house at all. But if I come back again, having prospered well, you shall have in due season a large roll and fist-sauce to it.⁵

DAUGH. Why, what means of performing your journey will you have? for a ship cannot⁶ convey you this road.

TRY. A winged colt will convey me. I shall not go by sea.⁷

DAUGH. But what is your purpose, dear little papa,⁸ that you have saddled a beetle and are riding to the gods?

TRY. He has been found in the fables of Æsop, to have been the only winged creature that has made his way to the gods.

DAUGH. O father, father, you tell us an incredible story,⁹ that a stinking animal made his way to the gods.

TRY. Nay, my dear, I should have needed double rations. But now, whatever³ provisions I eat myself, with these shall I feed this beast.

DAUGH. But how, if it should fall into the watery depths⁴ of the sea? How will it, a winged creature, be able to escape?

TRY. I had a rudder on purpose, which I'll make use of; and a Naxos-built Cantharus shall be the vessel?⁵

DAUGH. But what harbour will receive you as you are carried along?

TRY. There is, you know, in the Piræus, the harbour of Cantharus.⁶

DAUGH. Take care of that,⁷ lest you slip and tumble down from thence; and then, being crippled, furnish a subject for Euripides, and be made a tragedy.⁸

TRY. This shall be my care. But fare you well! [Exeunt

MER. But on what account have you come?

TRY. To bring you some meats—see, here they are! [Gives him the meat.]

MER. Poor fellow,³ how did you come?

TRY. Do you see, you niggard,⁴ that I no longer appear to you to be most impure? Go now, call Jupiter to me.

MER. Ho! ho! ho! because you are not likely to approach the gods! for they vanished yesterday, having emigrated.

TRY. Whither on earth?

MER. On earth, quoth'a!⁵

TRY. Where then?

MER. Very far remote, absolutely under the very vault of heaven.

TRY. How then, pray, were you left here alone?

MER. I am taking care of the rest of the utensils of the gods, the little pots, and small trenchers, and little jars.

TRY. On what account did the gods emigrate?

MER. Because they are angry with the Greeks. Therefore they have located War here, where they were themselves,

TRY. But on what account did they do this to us? Tell me.

MER. Because you chose to be at war, when they were oftentimes for making peace. And if the Lacedæmonians at any time gained a small advantage, they used² to talk as follows: "By Castor and Pollux, now shall the little Athenian suffer punishment!" If, on the other hand, the Athenians obtained any success, and the Lacedæmonians came to treat about a peace,³ you used to say forthwith, "By Minerva! by Jove! we are deceived; we must not accede to them. They will come again too, if we retain Pylos."

TRY. At any rate, the character of the speeches is that of our country.

MER. On account of which, I know not if henceforth you will ever see Peace any more.

TRY. Whither, then, is she gone?⁴

MER. War has cast her into a deep cave.

TRY. Into what sort of cave?

MER. (pointing). Into this nether one. And, besides, you see how many stones he has heaped above her, in order that you may never get her.

TRY. Tell me, what, pray, is he preparing to do to us?

MER. I know not, save this one thing; that in the evening he brought in a mortar very large in⁵ size.

TRY. What, pray, will he do with this mortar?

MER. He purposes to pound your cities in it. But I will go; for in my opinion, he is about to come forth. At any rate, he is making a disturbance within. [Exit Mercury.]

WAR. Ho you! [Re-enter Tumult.]

WAR. Return,¹ then, quickly. [Exit Tumult.]

TRY. Sirs, what will become of us? Now there is great danger. But if any one of you happen to be initiated in the Samothracian² mysteries, now is a fair occasion to pray that the feet of the messenger may be put out of joint. [Re-enter Tumult.]

TUM. Alas, me miserable! alas! and again alas!

WAR. What is the matter? Do you bring nothing again?

TUM. Yes; for the pestle of the Lacedæmonians also is destroyed.

WAR. How, you villain?

TUM. They lent it to others against the Thrace-war countries, and then lost it.

TRY. Well done, well done, O Castor and Pollux! Mayhap all may be well. Take heart, mortals!

WAR. Take and carry back these vessels; but I will go within and make a pestle for myself. [Exeunt War and Tumult.]

TRY. (coming forward). There³ now has come the very song of Datis, which he sang once upon a time at noonday with his hands in his pockets, "How I am pleased, and rejoiced,⁴ and delighted!" There is now, O men of Greece, a favourable opportunity for us, while we are free from troubles and battles, to draw out peace, beloved by all, before any other pestle again prevent us. Come, O ye husbandmen, and merchants, and artificers, and labourers, and foreign residents, and strangers, and islanders,⁵ come hither, ye people all, as quickly as possible, with shovels, and crow-bars, and ropes! for now it is permitted us to snatch a bowl of good fortune.⁶ [Enter Chorus.] being free from battle-arrays and deep-dyed miseries! for this day has shone forth a hater of Lamachus.¹ Wherefore, point out to us whatever we ought to do, and be our director of works; for it is not possible² that I should think fit to give out to-day, till with crow-bars and engines we haul up to light the greatest of all goddesses, and the most friendly to the vine.

TRY. Will you not be silent, lest, overjoyed at the circumstance, you rekindle war³ from within with your bawling?

CHO. But we rejoice at having heard such a proclamation; for it was not to come with provisions for three days.⁴

TRY. Beware, then, of that Cerberus below;⁵ lest, fuming and bawling, as when he was here, he should be an obstacle to our hauling out⁶ the goddess.

CHO. By no means doth there now exist a person who shall take her away, if once she come into my hands.⁷ Huzza! huzza!

TRY. Sirs, you will utterly destroy me, if you do not cease from your shouting! for he will run out and disturb all these things with his feet.

CHO. Then let him confound, and trample on, and disturb all things! for to-day we cannot cease from rejoicing. [They begin to dance.]

CHO. Nay, I do not wish to dance; but through joy my legs dance of their own accord, without my moving.

TRY. Do not dance any more now; but cease, cease dancing!

CHO. Lo! see! now I have ceased.

TRY. You say so indeed, but you do not yet cease.

CHO. Nay, but permit me to dance this one measure, and no more.

TRY. Dance this then, and dance² nothing else beside.

CHO. We would not dance, if we should serve you at all by abstaining.

TRY. But see, you have not yet ceased!

CHO. By Jove, we will cease forthwith after we have tossed this here right leg.

TRY. I concede this to you, so that you do not annoy me any more.

CHO. But it is necessary³ that I also toss the left, for I am pleased and rejoice, and trump and laugh more at my escape from the shield, than if I had divested myself of my old age.

TRY. Do not rejoice at all now, for you don't know clearly as yet. But when we shall have got her, then rejoice, and shout, and laugh; for then at length it will be permitted you to sail away, to stay at home, to wench, to sleep, to go as a spectator to the public festivals, to feast, to play at the Cotabus, to live like a Sybarite, to shout huzza! huzza!

For long time enough have we been wasted, and quite worn out with wandering into the Lyceum,² and out of the Lyceum with spear and with shield. But come, tell us by doing what shall we gratify you most; for some good fortune has chosen you as our plenipotentiary.

TRY. Come now, let me see whither we shall drag away the stones. [Enter Mercury.]

MER. O impure and audacious man! what are you purposing to do?

TRY. Nothing bad;³ but just what Cillicon did.

MER. You are undone, you wretch.

TRY. No doubt,⁴ if I draw the lot; for you, being Mercury, will, I well know, do something with the lot.

MER. You are undone, you are utterly undone.

TRY. On what day?

MER. Forthwith.

TRY. But I have purchased nothing as yet, neither meal nor cheese, as if about to perish.⁵

MER. And yet you are utterly undone.

MER. Be well assured that there is.

TRY. Lend me then three drachmæ for a little pig; for I must be initiated before I die.

MER. O Jupiter, the lightener and thunderer!

TRY. Do not, master, by the gods, inform against us, I beseech you!

MER. I cannot hold my peace.

TRY. Yea, by the meats,¹ which I zealously brought you.

MER. Nay, my good sir, I shall be destroyed by Jupiter, if I shall not shrilly proclaim² these things, and shout aloud.

TRY. Do not then shout aloud, I beseech you, my dear little Mercury! Tell me,³ what ails you, sirs? You stand confounded. O wretches! do not be silent; otherwise he will shout aloud.

CHO. By no means,⁴ master Mercury, by no means; nay, by no means, if you remember having devoured with satisfaction a little pig from my hands; do not consider this a trifling circumstance in this transaction.⁵

TRY. Do you not hear, O king and master, how they flatter you?

CHO. * * * * so that⁶ we do not obtain her. But gratify us, O you most benevolent and most bountiful of gods! if at all you abominate the crests and eyebrows of Pisander.⁷ And we will always glorify you, O master, with sacred sacrifices and magnificent processions for ever.

TRY. And I will tell you of a terrible and important thing which is being plotted against all the gods.

MER. Come now, tell it; for you may perchance prevail upon me.

TRY. For the moon and the roguish sun have been plotting against you now for a long time, and betraying Greece to the barbarians.

MER. But wherefore do they do this?²

TRY. Because, by Jupiter, we sacrifice to you, while the barbarians³ sacrifice to them. On this account naturally they would wish you all to perish utterly, in order that they alone of the gods might receive the sacred offerings.

MER. It is on this account, then, they have been this long time filching underhand from the days,⁴ and nibbling at the cycle of the seasons through their chariot-driving.

TRY. Yes, by Jupiter! Therefore, O dear Mercury, zealously join us in obtaining her, and help to draw her out, and we will celebrate in honour of you the great Panathenaic festival, and all the other festivals of the gods, the mysteries of Ceres, the festival of Jove, the festival of Adonis in honour of⁵ Mercury; and other cities having ceased from miseries, will sacrifice every where to Mercury as the averter of evil:⁶ and you will obtain many other blessings besides. But first I give you this as a⁷ present, that you may be able to make libations. [Presents Mercury with a beautiful golden cup.]

MER. Ah me! how compassionate I always am towards golden cups! Henceforth, sirs, the task is yours.¹ But go in and drag away the stones with your shovels as quickly as possible.

CHO. This we will do: but do you, O wisest of the gods, stand by and dictate to us in a workmanlike manner, what we ought to do. For the rest, you will find us not slothful to follow your directions.

TRY. Come now, do you quickly hold² your goblet under, that we may set about our work, after having prayed to the gods. The libation is being made! the libation! Use no ill-omened words! use no ill-omened words! [Makes a libation.] While we pour the libation, let us pray that the present day may be the beginning³ to the Greeks of many blessings, and whosoever zealously takes hold of the ropes with us, that this man may never take a shield.

CHO. No, by Jupiter! but may spend his life in peace, with his mistress, and poking the coals.⁴

TRY. But whosoever wishes that there should rather be war, we pray that he may never cease, O king Bacchus, to draw out arrows from his elbows!

CHO. And if any one, desiring to be a Taxiarch,⁵ grudges, O mistress, that you should return to the light, may he suffer in battle some such things as Cleonymus!⁶

TRY. And if any spear-maker, or retailer of shields, wishes for battles, in order that he may have a better sale, may he be taken by robbers, and eat barley only.

CHO. And if⁷ any one, wishing to be general, does not assist, or any slave ready to desert, may he be scourged and twisted on the wheel, while ours be blessings! Huzza! Pæan, huzza!

CHO. Heave, ho, again!

MER. Heave, ho!

CHO. Come, again!

MER. Heave, ho! heave, ho.

TRY. But the men are not pulling alike. Will you not³ lay hold? How you puff and blow! You shall smart for it, you Bœotians.⁴

MER. Now, heave, ho!

TRY. Heave, ho!

CHO. But come, do you two also pull.

TRY. Am I not, then, pulling, and hanging on to the rope,⁵ and setting to work, and labouring earnestly?

MER. How then does the work not proceed? [Lamachus in full array sets himself in the way.]

CHO. O Lamachus, you do wrong in sitting in the way. We have no need, my man, of your bugbear.⁶ [Now the Argives set themselves in the way.]

CHO. He says that the work proceeds; but be zealous, every man of you!

TRY. Of a truth the husbandmen are accomplishing the task by their pulling,⁵ and no one else.

CHO. Come now, come every one of you! And in truth now it's nearly accomplished. Let us not relax then,⁶ but exert ourselves more manfully. you¹ come to us! For I was overcome with longing for you,² wishing prodigiously to return to the country; for you were the greatest gain to us, O you much-desired goddess! For you alone aided us.³ * * * * to all of us, as many as passed an agricultural life. For formerly we experienced many sweet, and inexpensive, and dearly-loved pleasures in your time; for you have been barley-groats⁴ and a safe-guard to the husbandmen; so that the little vines, and the young fig-trees, and all the other plants, shall smile upon you, having received you with joy.—But wherever has she been absent from us this long time? Inform us of this, O most benevolent of gods.

MER. Most sapient⁵ husbandmen, now hear my words, if you wish to hear how she was lost. Phidias first began the calamity, having been unfortunate;⁷ and then Pericles, fearing lest he should share his fortune, dreading your disposition and right stubborn temper, before he suffered any calamity, with his own hands set the city in a flame, having thrown in a slight spark of a Megarian decree, and blew up so great a war, that all the Greeks, both⁸ here and there, shed tears by reason of the smoke. And as soon as the vine once crackled⁹ in the flames perforce, and wine-cask, being struck, angrily kicked against wine-cask, no longer was there any one to put a stop¹⁰ to these things, and this goddess disappeared.

TRY. Now, by Apollo, I had not learned these matters from any one; nor had I heard how Phidias was connected with her.¹

CHO. Nor I, till now. On this account then she is fair of feature, because she is a connexion of his.² Certainly many things escape our observation.

MER. And then, when the cities which you ruled over perceived that you were incensed against each other, and showing your teeth, through dread of the tribute, they contrived all stratagems against you, and gained over the chief men of the Lacedæmonians with money. And they, since they were sordidly greedy of gain,³ and treacherous under the mask of hospitality, shamefully rejected this goddess and took up war. And then, their gain was ruin to the husbandmen; for the triremes from this country again, taking vengeance in turn, used to devour the fig-trees of innocent men.

TRY. Nay, rather, with justice; since of a truth also⁴ they cut down my raven-gray fig-tree, which I planted and reared.

CHO. Yes, by Jove, good sir, certainly with justice; since they also threw a stone in and destroyed my corn-chest holding six medimni.⁵

MER. And then also, when the labouring population flocked together into the city from the fields, they did not⁶ perceive that they were sold in the same way as the towns-people; but since they were without grape-stones, and loved the dried figs, they looked to the orators; and they, well knowing that the poor were weak and in want of victuals, drove away this goddess with two-pronged clamours,⁷ though she oftentimes showed herself through love to this country; and they used to harass¹ the rich and wealthy of our allies, attaching to each the imputation that he favoured Brasidas.² And then you used to worry him like little dogs; for³ the city, pale, and sitting in terror, used gladly to devour these, whatever calumnies any one threw to her. But they, the foreigners, seeing the blows with which they were beaten,⁴ stopped up with gold the mouths of those who did this, so as to make them rich, while Greece used⁵ to be impoverished without your perceiving it. Now the tanner was the person who did this.

TRY. Stop, stop, master Hermes, say not so; but suffer that man to rest in the grave, where he is. For that man is no longer ours, but yours. Whatever things, therefore, you say of him, even if he was a villain when he was living, and a babbler, and a common informer, and a mischief-maker, and a disturber, with every one of these now you revile your own people. But [turning to the goddess] tell me, O mistress, why you are silent.

MER. Nay, she will not tell it in the presence⁶ of the audience; for she is very angry at them, on account of the things which she suffered.

TRY. At least, let her tell a little to you alone.⁷

MER. Tell me, O dearest goddess, how you are minded towards them. Come, O you of all women most hating war! [Here Peace whispers something in his ear.] Well!—I hear

TRY. We erred in this; but pardon us; for our minds² at that time were wrapped up in the hides.

MER. Come now, hear what she just now asked me:—Who here was most disaffected towards her; and who was friendly, and zealously exerted himself that there should be no battles.

TRY. Cleonymus was by far the most well-disposed towards her.

MER. What sort of person then does Cleonymus appear to you to be in warlike matters?

TRY. Most brave in soul—except that he is not the son of the father³ he professes to be. For if ever he went out as a soldier, straightway he became apt to throw away his arms.⁴

MER. Hear now further what she just now asked me:—Who at present is master of the Bema⁵ in the Pnyx.

TRY. Hyperbolus is now in possession of this post. [The goddess turns away her head in disgust.] Hollo, you! what are you doing? Whither are you turning your head?

TRY. We shall become more prudent in counsel.

MER. In what way?

TRY. Because he is a lamp-maker.³ Formerly, indeed, we groped through the public business in the dark;⁴ but now we shall deliberate on all matters by lamp-light. [The goddess makes very impatient gestures.]

MER. Oh, oh! what things she bade me inquire of you!

MER. Very many, and the matters of old date, which aforesime she left behind. And first she inquired how Sophocles is doing.

TRY. He is prosperous; but a strange circumstance has befallen him.

MER. What?

TRY. From being Sophocles he has become Simonides.⁵

MER. Simonides? How?

MER. Come now, take this Opora on these terms¹ as your own wife; and then live with her in the country and beget for yourself clusters of grapes. [Here Mercury delivers Opora to him.]

TRY. O dearest! come hither and let me kiss you! O master Mercury, do you think I should be injured, if I embraced Opora after so long an interval?

MER. No, if² you were to drink a potion prepared with pennyroyal. But take this Theoria, and lead her away as quickly as possible to the Senate, to which she formerly belonged. [Commits Theoria to his care.]

TRY. O Senate, happy in Theoria! what soup for three days³ you will gulp down! and what boiled tripe and meats you will devour! But, my dear Mercury, fare thee well!

PARABASIS.⁴

It were indeed proper that the beadles should beat him, if any comic poet praised himself, having come forward to the audience⁵ in his anapæsts. If, however, it is fit, O daughter of Jupiter, to honour a person who has been the most skilful and most celebrated comic poet of all men, our poet says he is worthy of great praise. For, in the first place, he alone of men made his rivals cease always scoffing at the rags and warring with the lice; and he first drove off with contempt the barking Herculeses, and those Herculeses hungering, and running away, and cheating, and intentionally suffering themselves to be beaten; and he dismissed the slaves whom they were always bringing forward weeping, and that too for this purpose, that a fellow-slave, jeering at his stripes, might then ask,⁶ "O unhappy wretch, what have you suffered in your hide? Has the lash invaded your sides with a great army, and laid waste your back?" Having removed such rubbish, and stuff, and low buffooneries, he made our profession dignified, and elevated it, having raised it with dig-

⁵ For the construction, see Ach. 629. Eq. 508. "Of this 'self-laudation' our German readers have a very conspicuous example in the case of Count Plate and his Parabases, who in this characteristic also, and with the best success, has endeavoured to imitate the Greek comic writers." nified words and thoughts, and no vulgar jests; not satirizing private men or women, but with the spirit of Hercules he assailed the greatest monsters, having passed through the dreadful stench of hides and muddy-minded threats. And first of all I battle with the jagged-toothed monster himself, from whose eyes the most dreadful rays of Cynna flashed, and about his head a hundred heads of flatterers—the devil take them! were licking round about; and he had the voice of a torrent bringing forth destruction, the stench of a sea-calf, the unwashed testicles of a lamia, and the rump of a camel. At the sight of such a monster, I did not greatly fear; but, fighting in defence of you and the other islands, I always withstood him. On which account now it is reasonable that you should repay me the favour, and be mindful of it. For aforetime, when I succeeded according to my wish, I did not tamper with the boys, going about the Palæstra; but took up my baggage and immediately retired, having caused little pain and much pleasure, and in all things having performed my duty. Wherefore it is fitting that both men and boys be on my side. And we exhort the bald to be zealous for the victory. For if I gain the prize,¹ every one will say, both at table and at drinking parties, “Bear to the bald man; give some of the sweetmeats to the bald man, and do not take away from the most noble of poets, who has a shining forehead.”² O Muse! do you, having banished wars, dance with me your lover, celebrating the nuptials of the gods, and the banquets of men, and the feasts of the blessed; for from the first these themes have been your care. But if Carcinus³ should come and beseech you to dance

¹ It seems not to be generally known that such constructions as ἐμοῦ κακοῦ, I being wicked, ἀνδρῶπου περιχαροῦς, the man being overjoyed, with an ellipsis of ὄντος, are utterly unstatutable. “An absolute genitive, with ὄντος to be supplied, is not used in Greek; for in such constructions as Θεμιστοκλέους ἀρχοντος, ἀρχοντος is a participle. ἐκὼν and ἄκων also are equivalent to participles. ἐτοίμων in Thuc. iii. 82, and Xen. from heaven you appeared to me to be very ill-disposed ; but from here you appear very much more ill-disposed. [A servant comes out of the house.]

SER. O master, are you come?

TRY. Aye, as I've been told.

SER. How have you fared?

TRY. I had a pain in my legs with having traversed so long a journey.

SER. Come then, tell me—

TRY. What!

SER. Did you see any other man wandering in the air except yourself?

TRY. No; except, possibly, two or three souls of dithyrambic poets.¹

SER. What were they doing?

TRY. They were collecting, as they flew, certain² beginnings of odes of men that float aloft in air.

SER. Is it not true, then, in the air, what people say, how that we become stars, when one dies?³

TRY. Certainly.

SER. And who is now a star there?⁴

TRY. Ion⁵ the Chian, who, some time ago, composed here the Morning Star; and when he went yonder,⁶ immediately all called him the Morning Star.

SER. Who are those erratic stars that run about burning?⁷

TRY. These are certain of the rich stars, that¹ are returning from supper with lanterns, and in their lanterns fire. But take and lead in this lady [pointing to Opora] as quickly as possible, and wash out the bathing-tub, and heat some water, and spread for me and her a nuptial couch. And when you have done this, come back again hither; and I in the mean time will deliver over this one to the senate.

SER. Whence did you get these?

TRY. Whence? from heaven.²

SER. I would no longer give three obols for the gods,³ if they keep prostitutes like us mortals.

TRY. Not so; but⁴ there also some get their living by these means.

SER. Come then, let us go. Tell me, shall I give any thing to her to eat?

TRY. Nothing: for she will not be willing to eat either bread or cake, having been always accustomed among the gods above to lick up ambrosia.

SER. Then we must get ready something for her to lick⁵ here also. [Exeunt servant and Opora.]

CHO. The old man, as far as we can thus discern,⁶ is at present transacting these matters happily.⁷

TRY. What, then, will you say,⁸ when you see me a spruce bridegroom?

CHO. You will be enviable, old man, being a youth over again, and anointed with perfumes.

TRY. I think so. What, then, will you say, when I am with her and lay hold of her breasts?

SER. The girl has bathed, and all her body is fair: the cheese-cake is baked, the sesame-cake is being kneaded, and the other things every one. But one thing is wanting.

TRY. Come then, let us quickly deliver over this Theoria to the senate here!

SER. What do you say? Is this Theoria, whom we once kissed on the road to Brauron, when rather tipsy?

TRY. Be well assured it is; and she was caught too with difficulty.

SER. O master, how great¹ is the quintennial debauchery which she affords!

TRY. Well! who of you is just? who in the world is? who will take and guard her for the senate? [To the servant.] Hollo, you! what are you sketching out?

SER. Confound it! I am pre-occupying a tent for my² four quarters for the Isthmian games.

TRY. (to the audience). Do you not yet tell me who is to take care of her? [Takes Theoria by the hand.] Come hither you! for I will myself lead and deposit you in the midst.

SER. (pointing to the audience). That man yonder nods.

TRY. Who?

SER. Who? Aripkrades, beseeching you to lead her to him.

TRY. But, my good sir, he will fall upon her and lap her up like broth. [To Theoria.] Come now, first lay down your clothes upon the ground? [Theoria undresses herself, and is shown to the audience.] Senate, and Prytanēs, behold Theoria! Observe what blessings I shall take and hand over to you! so that, having set her on high, you may immediately celebrate the Apaturian festival. But see this kitchen, how beautiful it is! On this account also it is blackened¹ with smoke; for here, before the war, were formerly the senate's gridirons. In the next place, having her, we shall be at liberty immediately to celebrate very beautiful games on the morrow; to wrestle on the ground, to box with hand and foot, to aim strokes obliquely, to drop head foremost on the knees; and, as in the Pancratium, having anointed ourselves, to strike and punch vigorously with both fist and foot. And on the third day after this, you shall hold a chariot-race, where horseman shall ride past horseman, and chariots, overturned upon each other, shall struggle, puffing and blowing; while other charioteers, having fallen near the goal, shall lie with broken heads. But, O ye Prytanes, receive Theoria! See how readily the Prytanis received her! But you would not have been so ready, if you had to bring forward something gratis; but I should have found you alleging a holiday.²

TRY. When you gather in the vintage, you will know still more what sort of a person I am.

CHO. Even now it is evident,³ for you have been a pre-server to all men.

TRY. You will say so, when you drink a bowl⁴ of new wine.

CHO. And, with the exception of the gods, we will ever consider you the first.

TRY. I, Trygæus, the Athmonian, am deserving⁵ of much at your hands, for having relieved the people and the agricultural population from dreadful miseries, and for having put a stop to Hyperbolus.

TRY. Or with a swine, fat and large?

CHO. No, no.

TRY. Why?

CHO. Lest there be a swinishness, such² as Theagenes'.

TRY. With what then, pray, of the other victims, does it seem fit to you?

CHO. With a sheep.

TRY. With a sheep?

CHO. Yes, by Jupiter.

TRY. But this word is Ionic.³

CHO. Certainly, on purpose; in order that, if any one says⁴ in the Assembly that we ought to go to war, the audience through fear may cry out in the Ionic fashion "Oi"—

TRY. Upon my word you say well.

CHO. And may be in other respects gentle; so that we shall be lambs in disposition towards each other, and far milder towards our allies.

TRY. Come then, take and bring the sheep as quickly as possible! and I will furnish an altar on which to sacrifice. [Exeunt Trygæus and servant.]

CHO. How all things proceed according to our wish, as many as God wills,⁵ and Fortune directs; and one of these concurs opportunely with the other! [Re-enter Trygæus bearing the altar.]

TRY. Come now, do you take the basket and the holy water and quickly go round the altar to the right.

SER. Very well. Command³ something else: I have gone round it.

TRY. Come now, I will take and dip this torch⁴ in water. Do you shake it rapidly; and do you hand me some⁵ of the coarse barley; and do you yourself wash your hands in the holy water, when you have handed this to me; and throw some of the barley to the spectators. SER. Come, let me give some to these here; for there are many pious people.

TRY. Do you consider these pious?

SER. (sprinkling the audience with holy water). Why, are they not; who, while we pour so much water on them, go and stand in the same place?

TRY. Come, let us pray as quickly as possible, now let us pray. Most august goddess queen, venerable Peace, mistress of choral dances, mistress of nuptials, receive our sacrifice!²

SER. Receive it, pray, O highly-honoured goddess, by Jupiter! and do not do what the lewd women do. For they open the house-door a little³ and peep out; and if any one direct his attention to them, they retire; and then, if he go away, they peep out again. Now do not thou do any of these things to us.

TRY. No, by Jupiter! but show yourself entire, in a manner befitting a noble person, to us your lovers, who have been pining away for you now these thirteen⁴ years. O highly honoured goddess, grant these things to our prayers!

SER. Take the knife; and then see that you slay the sheep in a cook-like way.

TRY. But it is not lawful.

SER. Why so? Why, pray?³

TRY. Peace, I ween, does not take pleasure in slaughter, nor is her altar stained with blood. But take it within and sacrifice it and take out⁴ the thigh-bones and bring them out hither; and thus the sheep is preserved for the Choregus. [Exit servant carrying back the sheep.]

TRY. Do I not, therefore, seem to you to arrange the fag-gots like a soothsayer?

SER. This has been done.³ Take and place the thighs on the fire; but I will go for the entrails and the cakes. [Exit servant.]

TRY. This shall be my care; but you ought⁴ to have been here. [Re-enter servant.]

SER. Well! I am here. Do I appear to you to have delayed?

TRY. Now roast them well! for see, here comes some one crowned with laurel! Who in the world then is he?

SER. What⁵ an impostor he appears! He is some prophet.

TRY. No, by Jupiter! but Hierocles.

SER. This, I presume, is the soothsayer from Oreus.⁶ What in the world then will he say?

¹ "Stilbides was a celebrated soothsayer, whom the Athenians led with them in the Sicilian expedition. SER. Bravely, to be sure, O dear mistress Peace!

HIER. Come then, begin the sacrifice, and then give me the first offerings!³

TRY. It is better to roast them first.

HIER. But these here are already roasted.

TRY. Ho! ho! What a number has come to the wedding-dinner! Stop! wipe the tables with this crest; for there is no use at all for it any longer. Then bring in the cakes of fine meal, and the thrushes, and many dishes of hare, and the rolls. [Enter sickle-maker.]

SICKLE-MAKER. Where, where is Trygæus?

TRY. I am boiling thrushes.

SICKL. O dearest Trygæus! how² numerous are the blessings you have conferred on us by having made peace! For heretofore no one used³ to purchase a sickle, not even for a small coin, while now I sell them for fifty drachmæ;⁴ and this man here sells his casks into the country at three drachmæ apiece. But, O Trygæus, take of the sickles, and of these, what you please, gratis; and accept these gifts. For out of our sales and profits⁵ we bring you these presents for your marriage.

TRY. Come then, deposit these gifts with me, and go in to dinner as quickly as possible; for see, here's this retailer of arms approaching in high dudgeon! [Sickle-maker goes into Trygæus' house.]

CREST-MAKER. (running in). Alas, O Trygæus, how utterly you have ruined me!

TRY. What is the matter, unhappy man? Surely you are not ill of a crest?⁶

CREST. You have destroyed my trade and means of life, and this man's, and yonder spear-maker's.

TRY. What shall I pay you then for these two crests?

CREST. What do you offer yourself?

TRY. What do I offer? I am ashamed to mention it. But still, because the point of the helmet takes a great deal of labour, I would give three chœnixes of dried figs for them, in order that I may wipe my table with this here.

CREST. Go in, then, and bring the dried figs; for it is better, my friend, than to get nothing. [Enter breastplate-maker and trumpet-maker.]

TRY. Take them away, take them away, with a mischief, from my house! The crests are losing their hairs and are good for nothing. I would not purchase them, not even for a single dried fig. [Exit crest-maker.]

BREASTPLATE-MAKER. What then, wretched man, shall I make of this hollow breastplate worth ten minæ, which has been most beautifully put together!

TRY. This article shall not¹ cause you loss; but give this to me at cost price; for it is very convenient to use for a close-stool—

BREASTPL. Cease to insult me on account of my wares!

TRY. In this way, when I have put three stones² beside it. Is it not handy?

BREASTPL. But how in the world will you wipe, you great stupid?

TRY. Thus, putting my hand through the oar-hole, and thus ———

BREASTPL. With both hands at a time, pray?

TRY. Aye, by Jove! lest I be detected filching an oar-hole of the ship.

BREASTPL. Then will you sit and ease yourself over a vessel worth ten minæ?

TRY. Aye, by Jove, you rogue! for do you suppose I would sell my rump for a thousand drachmæ?

BREASTPL. Come now, bring out the money!

TRY. But, my good sir, it presses my bottom. Take it away! I won't buy it. [Exit breastplate-maker.]

HELMET-MAKER. O implacable Fortune, how you destroyed me, when¹ I gave a mina for these! And now what shall I do? for who will purchase them?

TRY. Go and sell them to the Egyptians; for they are convenient for measuring their purgative draughts.² [Enter spear-maker.]

SPEAR-MAKER. Alas, helmet-maker, how miserably are we circumstanced!³

TRY. This man has not suffered any evil.

SPEAR. But what is there any longer for which any one will make use of helmets?

TRY. If a person learn to make handles of this sort, he will sell them far better than at present. [Pulls him by the ears.]

HELM. Let us depart, O spear-maker!

TRY. By no means, for I will purchase these spears from him.⁴

SPEAR. How much, then, do you offer?

TRY. If they were sawn in two, I would take them for vine-props, at a hundred the drachma.⁵

SPEAR. We are insulted. Let us retire, my friend, out of the way. [Exeunt trumpet-maker, helmet-maker, and spear-maker.]

TRY. "Bucklers?" Will you not cease mentioning a buckler to us?

SON OF L. "Then at the same time arose the wailing and the triumphant shout of men."

TRY. "The wailing of men?" You shall repent, by Bacchus, of singing of wailings, especially such as have bosses!

SON OF L. What then, pray, shall I sing? for do you tell me in what songs you take pleasure.

TRY. "Thus they feasted on the flesh of oxen," and such songs as this. "They set out breakfast, and whatever is most agreeable to eat."

SON OF L. "Thus they feasted on the flesh of oxen, and unharnessed the sweating necks of their horses when they were sated of war."

SON OF L. I?

TRY. Yes, you, by Jupiter.

SON OF L. The son of Lamachus.

TRY. Bah! Upon my word, I was wondering, as I listened to you, if you were not the son of some strife-desiring man who will² come to a bad end in battle. Begone, and go and sing to the spearmen! [Exit son of Lamachus.] Where is the son of Cleonymus? [Enter son of Cleonymus.] Sing me something, before you go into the house! for I well know that you will not sing of battles; for you are the son of a discreet father.

TRY. Tell me, you imp, are you singing against your own father?

SON OF CL. "But I saved my life."

TRY. And disgraced your parents.—But let us go in; for I well know for a certainty that, being the son of that father, you will never forget these, as many as you sung just now about the shield. [Exit son of Cleonymus.] Now it will be your remaining task who remain here,⁴ to eat up all these, and to devour them, and not to ply empty jaws. But fall upon them manfully, and grind them with both your jaws; for there is no use, you rogues, in white teeth, unless they also chew something.

CHO. This shall be our care; but you also do well in admonishing us.

And now we ought to carry back all the implements to the fields, after having danced and poured libations, and driven away Hyperbolus, and prayed to the gods to give wealth to the Greeks, and that we may all alike produce abundant barley and abundant wine, and figs to eat; and that our wives may bear us children, and that we may recover again, as before, all the blessings as many as we lost, and that glittering iron cease! [Enter Opora dressed as a bride, and escorted by numerous attendants bearing torches.]

TRY. Come, wife, to the country; and see that, pretty² as you are, you lie with me prettily!

CHO. O thrice happy! How justly now you enjoy your blessings! O Hymen, Hymenæus! O Hymen, Hymenæus! What shall we do to her? What shall we do to her? We will take a crop of her: we will take a crop of her. Come, sirs, let us³ who are appointed take up and carry the bridegroom! O Hymen, Hymenæus! O Hymen, Hymenæus!

TRY. At any rate you shall dwell happily, not having troubles, but gathering figs. O Hymen, Hymenæus! O Hymen, Hymenæus!

CHO. His fig great and thick, and hers sweet.

TRY. You will say so, when you eat it, and drink abundant wine. O Hymen, Hymenæus! O Hymen, Hymenæus!

THE ARGUMENT.

For the date of this Comedy, see Clinton's Fast. Hellen p. 75, ed. 2nd.

"Aristoph. "Ὀρνιθες. Arg. Avium ii., ἐδιδάχθη ἐπὶ Χαβρίου ἄρχοντος εἰς ἄστυ διὰ Καλλιστράτου, ὃς ἦν δεύτερος τοῖς "Ὀρνισι" πρῶτος 'Αμειψίας Κωμασταῖς' τρίτος Φρύνιχος Μονοτρόπῳ. Arg. Av. iii., ἐπὶ Χαβρίου τὸ δρᾶμα καθήκεν εἰς ἄστυ διὰ Καλλίου (l. Καλλιστράτου). [Elaphebolion, or March, v. c. 414.] Schol. Av. 998, καθεῖται δὲ καὶ ὁ Μονότροπος ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ χωρίου."

This Comedy is a burlesque upon the national Mythology of that

"Blithe race! whose mantles were bedeck'd
With golden grasshoppers, in sign that they Had sprung, like those bright creatures, from the soil
Whereon their endless generations dwelt."

The plot is this. Euelpides and Pisthetairus, two old Athenians, disgusted with the litigiousness, wrangling, and sycophancy of their countrymen, resolve upon quitting Attica. Having heard of the fame of Epops, sometime called Tereus, (τὸν Τηρέα ἔποπα γενόμενον, Arg.,) and now King of the Birds, they determine, under the direction of a raven and a jackdaw, to seek from him and his subject birds a city free from all care and strife. After some scrambling, their guides intimate to them that they are arrived at the residence of Epops. They knock, and Trochilus appears, in great alarm, as he takes them for fowlers. Epops, he informs them, is now asleep vs. 82, εὔδει καταφαγὼν μύρτα καὶ σέρφους τινάς.

After some time his Majesty awakes, and, upon their urging their suit, makes them the offer of several cities. These they refuse, and Epops descants on the happiness of living among the Birds. Pisthetairus proposes a scheme to enhance it. Upon this Epops summons the Nightingale to call the Birds to council. They take fright, and are about to tear the two old worthies to pieces, imagining that their king has betrayed them. Epops explains his relationship, dwells upon their praise, and thus saves their lives. Following the advice of Pisthetairus, they build out the gods, and name their new city Nephelococcygia, or "Cloud-cuckoo-town." Arrivals from Athens, "with all their trumpery," are not wanting. But as by this city in mid-air the gods above are deprived of their accustomed offerings, at the suggestion of Prometheus, who in private informs Pisthetairus of their famished state, the latter considers it a good opportunity for recovering the former dominion of the Birds, particularly as the Triballian gods, who dwell "extra anni solisque vias," are on the point of attacking Jove, in order to compel him to "open the ports." An embassy arrives, consisting of Hercules, Neptune, and a certain Triballian god. After some disputes, it is agreed that the Birds are to be reinstated in their ancient rights, and that Pisthetairus is to have Basileia as his wife. The Comedy concludes with the Epithalamium. See Schlegel, Dram. Lit. p. 166.

Frere remarks upon this Comedy, that "its success must have been a subject of more than usual anxiety both to the poet himself, and to the Choregus, and all the higher orders of the community. We may conceive it to have been intended as a sedative to the minds of the commonalty, excited, as they were at the time, almost to madness by the suspicion of a conspiracy against the religion and laws of the country; a suspicion originating in a profane outrage secretly perpetrated, to a great extent, in mere insolence and wantonness, by some young men of family. In the opinion, however, of the Athenian people, the offence was viewed in a very serious light, as the result of an extensive secret combination, preparatory to other attempts still more criminal and dangerous. In this state of things, and while the popular fury and jealousy upon religious subjects was at its height, the poet ventured to produce this play; in which it will be seen, that the burlesque of the national Mythology is carried higher and continued longer than in any of his other existing plays. The first prize was assigned to a play, the title of which, "The Comastæ," or "Drunken Rioters," seems to imply that its chief interest must have been derived from direct allusions to the outrage above mentioned, and to the individuals suspected to have been engaged in it."

THE BIRDS.

EUELPIDES, PISTHETAIRUS.¹

EUEL. (to his jackdaw). Do you bid *me go*² straight, where the tree appears?

PISTH. Split you!³ but this croaks back again.

EUEL. Why, you knave, are we wandering up and down? We shall perish with running up and down the road to no purpose.

PISTH. To think of my having rambled, unhappy man, more than a thousand stadia out of the way, in obedience to a raven!⁴

EUEL. To think of my having worn off my toe-nails, ill-fated man, in obedience to a jackdaw!

PISTH. But I don't even know any longer where in the world we are.

EUEL. Could you find out your country any where from hence?⁵

PISTH. By Jove,⁶ not even Execestides could find it out from hence.

¹ "The Scene is a wild desolate country, with a bare open prospect on one side, and some upright rocks covered with shrubs and brushwood in the centre of the stage. Peisthetairus and Euelpides appear as a couple of worn-out pedestrian travellers, the one with a raven, and the other with a jackdaw on his hand:—they appear to be seeking for a direction from the motions and signals made to them by the birds." Frere.

² See Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 62, 3, obs. 2.

⁶ As γῆ in Attic Greek never follows an oath without the inter-

EUEL. Ah me!

PISTH. Do you, my friend, go this way.¹

EUEL. Verily he of the Bird-market² has treated us shamefully, the poulterer Philocrates,³ being mad, who said that these would point out to us Tereus the Epops, who became a bird, from being—a bird;⁴ and sold this jackdaw, the son of Tharelides,⁵ for an obol, and this other for three. But these two, it appears, know nothing else but biting.⁶ [Addresses his jackdaw]. And now, why are you gaping? Will you lead us on some where down the rocks?⁷ for there is no road here.

PISTH. Nor is there, by Jove, a path any where here.

EUEL. Does the raven say any thing about the way?

PISTH. By Jove! she does not croak now the same as before.

EUEL. What, pray, does she say about the way?

vention of one or more words, (see note on Eccles. 748,) I would read with Porson in Adv. p. 36, οὐδὲ μὰ Δι' ἐντεῦθεν γ' ἂν Ἐξεκестίδης.

Or with Reisig, οὐδ' ἂν μὰ Δι' ἐντεῦθεν γ' ἂν Ἐξεκестίδης.

"Not even Execestides could do it,

That finds himself a native every where." Frere.

"Non sane, sed ne Execestides quidem hinc inveniat." Enger.

PISTH. What else but say she will gnaw off my fingers with biting!

EUEL. Is it not strange then, pray, that we, who wish to go to the crows,¹ and are ready prepared, should yet not be able to find the way? [To the spectators.] For, my friends who are present at our tale, we are ill of a disease the opposite to Sacas;² for he, though he is no citizen, forces his way in, while we, honoured in tribe and birth, citizens with citizens, have flown away from our country with both feet,³ without any one scaring us away; not hating that city itself, so as not to consider it to be naturally great and wealthy, and common to all to spend their property in litigation in.⁴ For the Cicadae, indeed, sing one month or two upon the branches, while the Athenians are always singing during their whole life upon lawsuits.⁵ For this reason we are journeying on this path, and wandering with basket, and pot, and myrtle-branches, in search of a place free from trouble, where we may settle and live. Now our journey is to Tereus⁶ the Epops, wishing to learn from him, if any where, where he has flown, he has seen such a city.

¹ "There is a pun on the double meaning of the phrase. Here it alludes also to the intention of the two old men to visit the city of the birds." Felton.

² "Ἀκέστωρ, τραγωδίας ποιήτης." Schol. His claims to citizenship seem like to those of Excecestides. He is called Sacas, from the name of a Thracian tribe, to denote that he was a foreigner. ³ παρὰ προσδοκίαν, for with both wings.

⁴ "Wir leiden just das Umgekehrte, wie Sakas dort; Der drängt sich, da er nicht Burgers Kind ist, ein; doch wir, Geehrt in Zunft und Gilde, Bürger schlecht und recht Wie die andern Burger, und von niemand fortgescheucht, Sind aus der Heimath weggeflogen mit Sack und Pack, Sie eben selbst nicht hassend, die ehrenwerthe Stadt, Als ob sie an sich nicht schon und gross und glücklich sei, Und allen gemeinsam, drin zu versporteln Hab' und Gut."

Droysen.

⁵ "For grasshoppers sit only for a month Chirping upon the twigs; but our Athenians Sit chirping and discussing all the year, Perch'd upon points of evidence and law." Frere.

There is an equivocal in the last line, inasmuch as it also signifies, sing away their whole property.

⁶ "The Tereus; that ancient Tereus, well known to the Athenian people, who was changed into the Epops." Felton.

PISTH. Hollo you!

EUEL. What's the matter?

PISTH. My raven has been this long while pointing upwards.

EUEL. And see, this jackdaw gapes upward! as if showing me something. It must be that there are birds there. But we shall soon know, if we make a noise.

PISTH. Come—do you know what you are to do? strike the rock with your leg.¹

EUEL. And you with your head, that the sound may be double.²

PISTH. Do you then take and knock with a tone.

EUEL. Certainly, if you think fit. [Knocking.] Boy! boy!

PISTH. Hollo you! what are you saying? Do you call the Epops "Boy?" Ought you not have cried "Epops" instead of "Boy?"³

EUEL. Epops! will you make me to knock again and again? Epops!

TROCHILUS. (from within). Who are these? Who is he that calls my master? [Trochilus comes out dressed as a bird, with a long beak.]

EUEL. (Both parties start at the sight of each other.) Apollo, averter of ill! What a mouth!⁴ [The jackdaw and raven fly away.]

TROCH. Ah me, miserable! these are bird-catchers.

EUEL. Is there any thing so dreadful⁵ in our appearance, and not any thing handsomer to say of us?

TROCH. You two shall be put to death.

EUEL. Nay, we are not men.

¹ "To kick against the rock was proverbial." Frere. For the construction. See note on Pax, 1061.

² "Knock you your head

Against the rock, and make it a double knock." Frere. "That the sound may be doubled. See Porson, Advers. p. 105." Dobree.

³ "What do you mean with your Hollo?

You should cry Hoop for a Hoopoe." Frere.

⁴ "Was für ein Schnabel das!" Droysen. On the genitive of exclamation, see Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 47, 3, obs. 1.

⁵ Droysen makes this a soliloquy: "Was ist's denn Grosses? ist's nicht besser, Ich red' ihn an?" Bothe, without interrogation: "Aliquid tam terribile ne nominare quidem decet." But such a translation is utterly impossible, and violates the natural order of the words. "Siccine tremendum nec melius dictu est?" Brunck.

"No, no; don't be disturbed; think better of us." Frere

TROCH. What then?

EUEL. I am a fearling,¹ a Libyan bird.

TROCH. You talk nonsense.

EUEL. (with corresponding gesture). Well now, ask what lies at my feet.²

TROCH. What bird is this here? will you not say?

PISTH. I am a cackling³ from the river Phasis.⁴

EUEL. But you, what beast in the world are you, in God's name?

TROCH. I am a slave-bird.

EUEL. Have you been vanquished by any cock?⁵

TROCH. No; but when my master became an Epops, then he besought me to become a bird, so that he may have an attendant and servant.

EUEL. Why, does a bird also want a servant?

TROCH. Yes, he, because, I fancy, he was once a man in former time, now and then longs to eat Phaleric anchovies.⁶ I take the dish and run to fetch the anchovies. Does⁷ he feel a desire for pea-soup; is there need of a ladle and pot; I run to fetch a ladle.

EUEL. This here is the "running" bird. Do you know then, Trochilus, what you are to do? Call your master for us.

TROCH. Nay, just now, by Jove, he is sleeping, after a meal of myrtle-berries and sundry ants.

EUEL. Nevertheless, awake him.

TROCH. I know for certain that he will be angry; but for your sakes I will rouse him. [Exit Trochilus.]

PISTH. (looking after him). May you perish miserably, because you have so tormented me with fright.⁸

⁷ For this singular construction, see note on Thesm. 405.

⁸ "O' confound ye, I say you've frighten'd me to death." Frere.

EUEL. Ah me, unfortunate! even my jackdaw has gone under the influence of fright.

PISTH. O you most cowardly beast, through fear have you let the jackdaw go?

EUEL. Tell me, have you not let your raven go in your fall?

PISTH. Not I, by Jupiter!

EUEL. Why, where is it?

PISTH. It has flown away.

EUEL. Then you didn't let it go! My good sir, how brave you are!

EPOPS. (from within). Open the wood,¹ that I may at length go forth. [Enter Epops with a tremendous beak and crest.]

EUEL. O Hercules! what in the world is this beast? What a plumage! What a fashion of triple crests!

EPOPS. Who are they that seek me?

EUEL. The twelve gods²—seem to have ruined you.

EPOPS. Are you mocking me, seeing my plumage? Don't do so, for I was a man, O strangers!

EUEL. We are not laughing at you.

EPOPS. At what then?

EUEL. Your beak appears to us ridiculous.³

EPOPS. In such a manner, however, does Sophocles⁴ in his tragedies outrage me, Tereus.

“Dass dich der Henker, wie du mit Angst mich todt gemacht!”

Droysen.

“The fear, in this and in the reply of Euelpides, is caused by the tremendous opening of the beak of Trochilus.” Felton. For ὡς = ὅτι οὐτως, cf. Plato, Phædon, p. 48, E.; Eur. Iph. T. 1118; Tro. 895.

“May the heavenly powers—! [Aside.] Confound ye, I say.”

Frere

“Die zwölf Olympier—ruinirten dich etwas, wie es scheint!”

Droysen.

“Consentes dei—te mulcasse videntur.” Brunch. “May the twelve gods have you in keeping” was the usual formula in the invocation of blessings on a person's first entrance; but here the ludicrous appearance of Epops makes Euelpides give a sudden turn to the sentence, and substitute, παρὰ προσδοκίαν, “seem to have been afoul of you.” For εἰς αὐτόν, cf. Nubes, 341. Ruhnken, Tim. Lex. p. 71.

³ “Only that beak of yours seem'd rather odd.” Frere.

⁴ In his tragedy of Tereus, Sophocles had at the close of the play

EUEL. Why, are you Tereus? whether are you a bird or a peacock?¹

EPOPS. I am a bird.

EUEL. Why, where then are your feathers?

EPOPS. They have fallen off.

EUEL. From some disease?

EPOPS. No; but during the winter all the birds moult; and then again we put² forth others. But tell me, who are ye?

EUEL. We?—Mortals.

EPOPS. From what country by race!

EUEL. *From that country, whence come the beautiful triremes.*³

EPOPS. Are you Heliasts?

EUEL. Nay, but of the opposite bent,—Antiheliasts.⁴

EPOPS. Why, is this seed⁵ sown there?

EUEL. You might perhaps get a little out of the fields if you searched.

EPOPS. But desirous of what matter, pray, have you come⁶ hither?

EUEL. Wishing to advise with you.

EPOPS. What about?

EUEL. Because, in the first place,⁷ you were once a man, brought him on the stage metamorphosed into a Hoopoe, whose form is here parodied." Droysen. See note on Vesp. 316. Pax, 697.

Epos speaks in his character of bird: the word also means race.

⁶ Vide Elms. ad Acharn. vs. 733.

⁷ "Because you were a man—the same as us;
And found yourself in debt—the same as us;
And did not like to pay—the same as us;
And after that, you changed into a bird;
And ever since have flown and wandered far
Over the lands and seas, and have acquired
All knowledge that a bird or man can learn." Frere.

as we; and once owed money, as we; and once took pleasure in not paying it, as we. In the second place, again, having taken in exchange the nature of birds, you have flown over both land and sea round about, and know all things, as many as man, as many as bird can know. On this account, therefore, we have¹ come hither to you as suppliants, if you would point out to us any city of good wool, soft as a blanket to lie down in.

EPOPS. Then, do you seek a greater city than Athens?²

EUEL. In no wise a greater, but one more suited³ to us.

EPOPS. You are evidently seeking to have an aristocratic government.

EUEL. I? By no means: I even abominate the son of Scellias.⁴

EPOPS. What sort of a city then would you like best to inhabit?

EUEL. Where the most important affairs were of the following sort: where some one of my friends came to my door early in the morning and spoke as follows: "By the Olympian Jove, take care that you are with me early, both you and your children,⁵ after they have washed, for I am about to give a marriage-feast,⁶ and by no means act otherwise; else, do not come near me then when I am faring ill."⁷

EPOPS. By Jove, you are fond of toilsome⁸ affairs. [Turning to Pisthetairus.] What then⁹ do you say?

PISTH. I too am fond of such things.

EPOPS. Of what?

EPORS. O you poor fellow for the hardships which you long for!² Yet there is a wealthy city, such as you two mention,³ on the coast of the Red Sea.⁴

EUEL. Ah me! by no means by the sea-side, where the Salaminian galley⁵ will come in sight early in the morning bringing a summoner. But are you able to point out to us some Grecian city?

EPORS. Why do you not go and colonize the Elean⁶ Lepreum?

EUEL. Because, by the gods, inasmuch as,⁷ without seeing it, I abominate Lepreum on account of Melanthius.⁸

EPORS. Well, there are others, the Opuntian⁹ Locrians, where it is fit to dwell.

No leprosy for me. Melanthius

Has given me a disgust for leprosy." Frere.

⁹ "The Opuntian Locrians must have been a very debauched race. Opuntius had only one eye." Drayson.

EUEL. Nay, I would not become Opuntius for a talent of gold.¹ But of what sort, pray, is this life amongst the birds? for you know it accurately.

EPOPS. Not an unpleasant one to pass; where, in the first place, we must live without a purse.

EUEL. You have removed much of life's base metal.

EPOPS. And we feed in gardens upon the white sesame, and myrtle berries, and poppies, and mint.²

EUEL. Then you live the life of bridegrooms.³

PISTH. (awakening out of a profound reverie). Hah! hah! Verily I see a mighty plan among the race of birds, and power, which might exist, if you would obey me.⁴

EPOPS. In what shall we obey you?

PISTH. In what shall you obey me? In the first place, do not fly about every where with open mouth; for this act is undignified. For example, if any one there among us should inquire about the flutterers,⁵ "What sort of a bird is this?" Teleas will say as follows: "A man-bird,⁶ unstable, flutter-

ΕΡΟΣ. By Bacchus, you rightly find fault with this. What then can we do?

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Found one city.¹

ΕΡΟΣ. But what sort of a city could we birds found?

ΠΙΣΤΗ. What, really? O you who have uttered a most stupid expression! look down.

ΕΡΟΣ. Well now,² I am looking.

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Now look upwards!

ΕΡΟΣ. I am looking.

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Turn your neck round.

ΕΡΟΣ. By Jove, I shall come finely off,³ if I shall get my neck twisted.

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Did you see any thing?

ΕΡΟΣ. Aye, the clouds and the heavens.

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Is not this⁴ then, I ween, the pole of the birds?

ΕΡΟΣ. Pole? In what way?

ΠΙΣΤΗ. Just⁵ as if one were to say "place."⁶ And because this turns round, and passes through all things, for "This πόλος was at that time a pet word of the philosophers and pathetic poets." Droysen. In the present passage it affords our author a string of puns, πόλος, πόλις, πολέισθαι. The comic writers lost no opportunity of ridiculing the mania for astronomy.

⁶ ὥσπερ εἴποι = idem ac, without any influence on the case of τόπος. Cf. vs. 282, infra.

this reason it is now called "pole." If you found this and once fortify it, it shall be called "Polis" from this "pole."¹ So that you shall rule over men like locusts, but the gods, on the other hand, you shall destroy with a Melian famine.²

EPOPS. How?

PISTH. Your atmosphere, I ween, is placed midway between earth and heaven.³ Then, like as we, if we wish to go to Pytho, ask of the Bœotians a passage, so, when men sacrifice to the gods, unless the gods bring in tribute to you, you shall not grant a passage to the odour of the thighs through your foreign city and the atmosphere.

EPOPS. Hah! hah! by earth, by snares, by meshes,⁴ by nets, I never heard a more clever⁵ device! so that I would found the city in conjunction with you, if the other birds were to agree.

PISTH. Who then will state the matter to them?

EPOPS. You; for I, through living a long time amongst them, have taught them the faculty of speech, who were heretofore barbarians.⁶

PISTH. How then would you summon them together?

EPOPS. Easily: for when I have gone immediately into the thicket here, and then wakened my nightingale,⁷ we will summon them. And if they hear our cry, they will run at full speed.

PISTH. O dearest of birds, then do not tarry, but, I entreat you, come, enter into the thicket as quickly as possible, and waken up your nightingale. [Exit Epops into the thicket.]

EPOPS. (singing from behind the scene). Come,¹ my mate, cease from slumber, and pour forth strains of sacred hymns, which thou chantest with thy divine mouth, trilling with the liquid notes of thy tawny throat mine and thy much-wept Itys.² Clear goes the sound through the thick-leaved yew-tree to the seat of Jove, where the golden-haired Phoebus, as he hears, playing an accompaniment to thy elegies on his lyre inlaid with ivory, institutes a choir of the gods; and at the same time an harmonious divine chant of the blessed gods proceeds through their immortal mouths. [A solo on the flute, supposed to be the nightingale's call, is now heard.]

EUEL. Will you not be silent?

PISTH. Why so?¹

EUEL. The Epops is again² preparing to sing.

EPOPS. (singing from behind the scenes). Epopopopopopopopopoi! io! io! come, come, come, come, hither, each of my fellow-birds,³ as many as feed upon the well-sown lands of the husbandmen, countless tribes of barley-eaters, and swift-flying flocks of rooks, sending forth a gentle voice, and as many as in the furrows incessantly twitter around the clods so lightly with blithesome voice!⁴ tio, tio, tio, tio, tio, tio, tio, tio! and as many of you as have⁵ your pasture in gardens on the boughs of the ivy, and you throughout the mountains, and you that eat wild olive berries, and you that eat the fruit of the arbutus, fly quickly to my voice! trioto, trioto, totobrix! and you that in the marshy glens snap up the sharp-stinging gnats,⁶ and as many as occupy the dewy places of the earth, and the lovely meads of Marathon, and the motley-feathered bird, the attagen,⁷ the attagen! and you whose tribes flit over the marine billow of the sea along with the halcyons, come hither, to learn the news! for here we are convening all the tribes⁸ of long-necked birds. PISTH. Do you see any bird ?

EUEL. By Apollo, not I ; and yet I gape with open mouth, looking up to heaven.

PISTH. To no purpose then, as it appears, did the Epops go into the thicket¹ and hatch, in imitation of the lapwing. [Enter the Phœnicopterus.]

PIÆ. Torotix, torotix !

PISTH. My good sir, nay, see here's a bird coming now !²

EUEL. By Jove, a bird assuredly. What sort in the world is it ? Surely it is not a peacock ?

PISTH. He himself will tell us. [Addressing the Epops, who now enters again.] What sort of a bird is this here ?

EPOPS. It is not one of these common birds which you are constantly seeing, but a water-fowl.³

PISTH. Bless me ! beautiful and flaming !

EPOPS. Like enough, for its name is flamingo.⁴

EUEL. Hollo you ! You I call !⁵ [Enter a second bird.]

PISTH. Why do you call ?

EUEL. See here's another bird !

PISTH. By Jove, another assuredly, and that too from an unlucky quarter.⁶ What sort in the world is this song-prophetic, odd, mountain-ranging bird ?⁷

PISTH. Mede? O king Hercules! Then how, if it be a Mede, has it flown hither without a camel? ¹ [Enter a third bird.]

EUEL. See here, again, is some other bird, possessed of a crest! ²

PISTH. What in the world is this prodigy? [Turning to the Epops.] Then you are ³ not the only Epops, but this also is another?

EPOPS. Nay, this is the son of Philocles, the son of Epops; and I am his grandsire: ⁴ just as if you were to say "Hipponicus the son of Callias, and Callias the son of Hipponicus." ⁵ PISTH. Then this bird is Callias! How he is shedding his feathers!

EUEL. Yes, for inasmuch as he is of noble birth, he gets plucked by the informers, and the ladies pluck out his feathers besides. ⁶ [Enter a fourth bird.]

PISTH. O Neptune! See here, again, is some other bright-coloured ⁷ bird? What in the world is this called?

EPOPS. This here is the Glutton.

PISTH. Why, is there any other Glutton than Cleonymus?

EUEL. How then, if it were Cleonymus, would it not have thrown away its crest?

Nicht zu Dromedar der Meder, auf der Henne nicht der Hahn?"

τειληφώς, having occupied a hill; and here, having got a crest." Felton.

³ See note on Vesp. 451.

⁷ There is also an allusion to another meaning of βάπτω; for which, see Plato, Sympos. For οὗτός τις, cf. 279. Vesp. 182, 205. Pax, 849.

PISTH. But, however, what in the world means the crest of the birds? Have they come for the Double Course?¹

EUEL. Nay rather, my good sir, they dwell upon crests,² like the Carians, for the sake of safety.

PISTH. O Neptune! Do you not see how great a plague of birds is collected together?

EUEL. King Apollo! what a cloud! Ho! ho! it is not possible any longer to see the entrance⁴ by reason of their fluttering!

PISTH.⁵ See, here's a partridge! and yonder, by Jove, an attagen! and here a duck! and yonder a kingfisher!

EUEL. Why, who is the one behind her?

PISTH. Who it is? a kingfisher.⁶

EUEL. Why, is a kingfisher a bird?

PISTH. Aye, for is not Sporgilus?⁷ And see! here's an owl too!

EUEL. What say you? Who ever brought an owl⁸ to Athens?

"A house of stones collected on the spot,
By rude hands built, with rocky knolls in front,
Back'd also by a ledge of rock, whose crest
Of birch trees waves above the chimney-top:
A rough abode."

Again, vol. iii. 267, "The ruins of Fort-Fuentes form the 'crest' of a rocky eminence that rises from the plain at the head of the Lake of Como," &c. "λόφον here = collis, and not crista. It is a jest ex ἀμφιβολίας. Therefore ἡ ἐπὶ τὸν διάυλον ἦλθον; = an collem ceperunt, in order to have a better view of the race? Non: sed ut Cares in montibus degunt." Bentley.

³ "A comic substitution for πλῆθος." Bothe.

⁴ Comp. Nub. 326.

PISTH. A jay, a turtle-dove, a crested-lark, a horned-owl, a buzzard, a pigeon, a heron, a falcon, a cushat, a cuckoo, a red-foot, a red-cap, a purple-cap, a kestrel, a diver, an ousel, an osprey, a wood-pecker.

EUEL. Oh! oh! the birds! Oh! oh! the black birds!¹ How they² twitter, and run about screaming continually! Are they threatening us? Ah me! certainly, indeed,³ they are gaping open-mouthed, and looking towards you and me.

PISTH. I think so too.

CHO. Popopopopopoi! where then is he that called me?⁴ What place does he inhabit?

EPOPS. See here I am this long while! and do not fall off from my friends.

CHO. Tititititititi! with what friendly address to me then?

EPOPS. Liberal, safe, just, pleasant, profitable; for two subtle reasoners have come hither to me.

CHO. Where? in what way? how say you?⁵

EPOPS. I state that two old men have come hither from men; and they have come with the root of a mighty affair.

CHO. O you who have committed the greatest error since the time I was reared! how say you?

EPOPS. Nay, do not be afraid of the address?

CHO. What have you done to me?

EPOPS. I have received two men who are lovers⁶ of this society.

CHO. And have you done this deed?

EPOPS. Aye, and am well pleased, too, that I have done it.

CHO. And are they now any where amongst us?

EPOPS. Aye, if I am amongst you.

CHO. Hah! hah! we are betrayed,¹ and have suffered impious treatment! for he who was our friend, and pastured in the plains with us where we fed in common, has violated the ancient laws, has violated the oath of the birds; and has summoned me for a trick, and has exposed me to an impious race, which, from the time that it existed, has been² hostile to me. But as respects this one it will be an³ after consideration; these two old men I propose shall suffer punishment and be rent in pieces by us.

PISTH. How we are undone then!⁴

EUEL. You, however, are alone to blame for these ills: for why did you lead me from thence?⁵

PISTH. That you might follow me.

EUEL. Nay, rather, that I might weep exceedingly.

PISTH. In this, indeed, you trifle exceedingly;⁶ for how can you weep, if once you have your⁷ eyes knocked out?

CHO. Ho! ho! lead on, attack, direct a hostile deadly charge, and spread round your wings in every direction, and enclose them round, for both of these must howl and give food to our beaks. For neither is there shady mountain, nor ethereal cloud, nor hoary sea, which shall receive these two, having escaped me. But let us not now delay to pluck and bite these two. Where is the Taxiarch? Let him lead on the right wing.

EUEL. That's just it! Whither shall I fly, unhappy man?⁸

EUEL. That I may be torn in pieces by these?

PISTH. Why, how do you imagine you will escape these?

EUEL. I don't know how I shall.

PISTH. Well then, I tell you that we must remain and fight, and lay hold of the pots.¹

EUEL. But what good will a pot do us?

PISTH. The owl, of course, will not attack us.²

EUEL. But what against these here crooked-clawed birds?

PISTH. Seize the little spit, and then plant it firmly in front of yourself.³

EUEL. But what for our eyes?

PISTH. Take from hence a vinegar-cruet,⁴ or a bowl, and hold it before you.

EUEL. O you most clever, you have invented it happily, and like a general. Now you shoot beyond Nicias with your engines.⁵

CHO. Why shall we spare these any more than wolves?² Or what others still more hateful than these could we punish?

EPORS. If they are enemies in nature, they are friends in spirit;³ and have come hither to teach⁴ you something useful.

CHO. How could these ever teach us any thing useful, or point it out, who were foes to my ancestors?

EPORS. Yet, certainly, the wise learn many things⁵ from their enemies; for caution preserves all things. From a friend you could not learn this, but your foe immediately obliges you to learn it.⁶ For⁷ example, the states have learned from enemies, and not from friends, to build lofty walls, and to possess ships of war. And this lesson preserves children, house, and possessions.

CHO. It is useful, as it appears to me, to hear their arguments first; for one might learn some wisdom⁸ even from one's foes.

ing to utter a big and corpulent¹ word, which shall make a breach in the minds² of these; to such a degree do I grieve over you, who being formerly kings,—

CHO. We kings? Kings of what?

PISTH. of all things, as many as exist,³ of me first, of this man here, and of Jove himself, had an existence more primeval and prior to Cronus, and the Titans, and earth.

CHO. And earth?

PISTH. Aye, by Apollo.

CHO. This, by Jove, I had not heard.

PISTH. Very likely, for you are unlearned and not⁴ curious after knowledge, nor even are you familiar with Æsop, who in his fables asserted that the lark came into being the first of all, prior to the earth; and then that her father died of illness; but that there was no earth; and that he lay out five days! and that she, being at a loss, buried her father in her own head, by reason of her perplexity.⁵

EUEL. The father, then, of the lark now lies dead at Cephalæ.⁶

³ It must be noticed that this is a continuation of οἵτινες ὄντες, &c., in vs. 467. All the translators I have seen make vs. 469 commence a new sentence; which is quite erroneous. Pisthetairus takes no notice of the interruption, but finishes the sentence he had begun; at least, the only notice he takes of it is to insert ὑμεῖς.

⁴ “οὐδὲ (and μήδε) when connecting propositions = nor even, if a negative clause precedes; but if (which seldom happens) an affirmative clause precedes, = and not. In the latter case we usually find καὶ οὐ (or καὶ μή). When οὐδὲ (or μήδε) = nor even, connect single notions, these properly constitute two propositions comprised under one verb.” Krüger. EPORS. Is not, then, the kingdom rightly theirs, pray, if they had an existence prior to the earth, and prior to the gods, inasmuch as they are the oldest?

EUEL. Aye, by Apollo! therefore, it behoves you very much henceforth to cherish your beak;¹ Jove will not quickly restore the sceptre to the wood-pecker.

PISTH. Of this, therefore, there are many proofs, that, not the gods, but the birds, were rulers and kings over men in ancient times. For example, I will first point out the cock to you, how he was sovereign and ruler over the Persians, before all, before Darius and Megabyzus. So that he is still called the Persian² bird, from that his dominion.

EUEL. On this account, then, even now, he only of the birds struts about with the turban³ erect upon his head, like the great king.

PISTH. And so powerful was he, and great, and strong at that time, that still even now, on account of that power of his at that time, when he merely crows at dawn,⁴ all jump up to their work—braziers, potters, tanners, shoemakers, bathmen, corn-factors, lyre-turners, and shield-makers: and they⁵ trudge off having put on their shoes in the dark.

EUEL. Ask this of me,⁶ for I lost my cloak of Phrygian wool, unhappy man, through him. For once upon a time having been invited to a little child's tenth-day feast,⁷ I was PISTH. The kite, then, at that time was ruler and king over the Greeks.

EPOPS. Over the Greeks?

PISTH. And he was the first,² too, who taught them when he was king to prostrate themselves before the kites.³

EUEL. Aye, by Bacchus! at any rate I rolled over on beholding a kite; and then, being on my back, I gulped down an obolus⁴ as I was gaping; and then I dragged home my pouch empty.

PISTH. Of Egypt, again, and the whole of Phœnicia, a cuckoo was king; and when the cuckoo cried "cuckoo," then all the Phœnicians used to reap their wheat and their barley in the fields.

EUEL. There then we have⁵ the proverb in its true meaning: "Cuckoo! to the field, you circumcised."⁶

PISTH. And they held so powerful a sway, that if any one was king in the cities of the Grecians, an Agamemnon or a Menelaus, a bird was wont to sit upon¹ their sceptres, sharing whatever² bribe he received.

EUEL. Now I was not aware of this; and in truth wonder used to take me, when some Priam came forth in the tragic representations with a bird: but it appears it was standing and watching what bribe Lysicrates³ took.

PISTH. And what is the most striking of all, Jove, the present monarch, stands⁴ with an eagle upon his head, because he is a king: his daughter, again, with an owl;⁵ and Apollo, as a servant, with a hawk.⁶

EUEL. By Ceres, you say this well. On what⁷ account, then, have they these birds?

PISTH. In order that, when any one sacrifices, and then, as the custom is, gives the entrails into their hands, they may receive the entrails before Jove. And no man on those days used to swear by a god,⁸ but all by birds. And still even now Lampon swears by the goose when he practises any⁹ deceit. CHO. O man, you have brought words by far, indeed, by far, indeed, most grievous! How I deplore the baseness⁴ of my fathers, who, when their forefathers had transmitted these honours to them, annulled them to my injury! But you have come to me at the intervention of some deity, and by some happy chance as my preserver. For I shall dwell⁵ in safety if I intrust to you my nestlings and myself. But do you, being present, inform us what we ought to do; since it is not worth our while to live, if we shall not by all means recover our kingdom.⁶

But if they should go to them, that you put a seal upon their breeches, in order that they may not any longer meddle with them. And I advise you to send another bird as herald⁵ to men, henceforth to sacrifice to the birds, since the birds have the rule. And then, after this again, to the gods : and assign to the gods,⁶ individually, in a suitable manner, some one of the birds, which accords with that god. king,¹ to whom he ought to slay a male ant before Jove himself.

EUEL. I like² your slaughtered ant! Now let the mighty Jove thunder.

EPOPS. Why, how will men think us gods, and not jack-daws, who fly and have wings?

PISTH. You talk nonsense; even Mercury, by Jove, god³ as he is, flies and wears wings, and very many other gods. For example, Victory flies with golden pinions; and, by Jove, Cupid⁴ too. And Homer asserted that Iris was like to a timorous dove.⁵

EPOPS. But will not Jove thunder and send his winged thunderbolt against us?

PISTH. If therefore, through ignorance, they think you to be nothing, but think these to be gods, these in Olympus, then it behoves a cloud of sparrows and of rooks, raised aloft, to swallow up their seeds from their fields; and then let their Ceres measure out wheat to them when they are hungry.

EUEL. She will not be willing, by Jove, but you will see her offering excuses.

PISTH. Let your crows, again, for a proof,⁶ peck out the eyes of their poor team, with which they plough up their lands, and of their sheep: then let Apollo,⁷ as he is a physician, cure them: but his manner is to serve for hire.

EPOPS. Tell me, pray, one of the good things.

PISTH. In the first place, the locusts shall not eat up their vines, but one¹ company of owls and kestrels shall destroy them. Then the emmets and gall-insects² shall not always eat up their figs, but one flock of thrushes shall gather them all up clean.

EPOPS. But whence shall we give them wealth? for they are very fond of this.

PISTH. These shall give to them the precious metals when³ consulting by auguries, and shall discover to the diviner the profitable merchandises; so that⁴ none of the ship-masters shall perish.

EPOPS. How shall he not perish?

PISTH. Some one of the birds shall always foretell to him that consults⁵ them about the voyage; "Now sail not, there will be a tempest. Now sail, gain will ensue."

EUEL. I'll procure a merchant-vessel and become a ship-master, and will not stay amongst you.

EPOPS. But how will they give health to them, which dwells with the gods?

PISTH. If they be prosperous, is not this great¹ good health? Be well assured that absolutely no one is in good² health when he is unprosperous.

EPOPS. But how will they ever arrive at old age? for this dwells in Olympus; or must they die when little children?

PISTH. No, by Jove, but the birds shall add three hundred years more to them.

EPOPS. From whom?

PISTH. From whom? from themselves. Do you not know that the cawing-crow lives five³ generations of men?

EUEL. Oh my! how much better are these than Jove to reign over us!

PISTH. Are they not by much? And in the first place, it is not requisite that we build them stone temples, or furnish those with golden gates, but they will dwell under thickets and little holm-oaks. An olive-tree, again, will be the temple⁴ of the august birds; and we shall not go to Delphi or to Ammon, and sacrifice there, but we will stand amid the arbutus and the wild olives with barley and wheat, and pray to them, holding up our two hands, to grant us some share of blessings. ΕΡΟΣ. And in truth, by Jove, it is no longer time for us to slumber or to loiter like Nicias, but we must do something as quick as possible. In the first place come into my nest, and my dry twigs, and the sticks which are here, and tell us your name.

CHO. Hollo you! you I call! you I call!

EPOPS. Why do you call?

CHO. Lead these in with you and give them a good breakfast; but bring out hither and leave with us the sweet-strained nightingale, harmonizing with the Muses, that we may play with her.

PISTH. O do at any rate accede to them in this, by Jove! bring forth the little bird from the flowering rush!⁵ bring her out here, by the gods,⁶ that we also may see the nightingale.

EPOPS. Well, if it seems good to you, I must do so. My Procne,⁷ come forth, and show yourself to the strangers.⁸

origin of gods and rivers, of Erebus and Chaos, you may henceforth bid Prodicus¹ from me² go weep, when you know them accurately

At first Chaos was, and Night, and dark Erebus, and wide Tartarus; nor was there earth, or air, or heaven; but first of all black-winged Night lays a wind-egg³ in the boundless bosom of Erebus, from which in revolving time sprang the much-desired Eros, glittering⁴ as to his back⁵ with golden wings, like to the swift whirlwinds. And he having cohabited with winged nocturnal Chaos in wide Tartarus, hatched our race, and first led them forth to light. And previously the race of immortals was not, till Eros commingled all things. But when the one was commingled with the other, heaven came into being, and ocean, and earth, and the unperishable race of all the blessed gods. Thus are we by far the most ancient of all gods. Now that we are children of Eros is clear by many proofs; for we fly, and are present with lovers.⁶ And lovers⁷ have through our influence prevailed upon many beautiful boys near the completion of their

First from the gaping shell refulgent sprung,
Immortal Love, his bow celestial strung;
O'er the wide waste his gaudy wings unfold,
Beam his soft smiles, and wave his curls of gold;
With silver darts he pierced the kindling frame,
And lit with torch divine the ever-living flame."

youth,¹ who had forsworn such things; the one by giving a quail, the other by giving a widgeon, another a goose, another a Persian² bird; and all the greatest blessings to mortals are from us birds. In the first place, we indicate the seasons of spring, winter, and autumn: to sow, when the screaming crane migrates to Libya; and then it tells the ship-master to hang up his rudder and sleep; and then it tells Orestes to weave a cloak, lest he should strip people, when shivering with cold.³ The kite, again, having appeared after this, indicates another season, when it is time to clip the sheep's vernal fleece. Then the swallow indicates when now it is fitting to sell the cloak, and purchase some light summer dress.⁴ And we are to you Ammon, Delphi, Dodona, Phœbus Apollo; for you consult the birds first, and then turn yourselves to every thing,⁵ to commerce, and to gaining a livelihood, and to marriage; and you consider all things a bird, as many as decide about divination. With you a word is "a bird;"⁶ and you call a sneeze "a bird," a sudden meeting "a bird," a sound "a bird," a servant "a bird," an ass "a bird." Are we not manifestly a prophetic Apollo to you? For as many things as are disgraceful here, being restrained by law, all these are honourable with us the birds. For if here it is disgraceful by law¹ to beat one's father, this is honourable there with us, if one runs to his father and beats him, and says, "Raise your spur, if you will fight." But if any of you chanced to be a branded runaway, with us he shall be called the variegated attagen. And if any one chanced to be a Phrygian, no less than Spintharus,² here he shall be a finch,³ of the race of Philemon. And if any one is a slave, and a Carian, like Excecestides, let him get grandfathers⁴ among us, and his clansmen shall appear. tribes of wild beasts, and a breathless¹ calm stilled the waves, totototototototitix, and all Olympus resounded, and astonishment seized the kings,² and the Olympian Graces and Muses shouted aloud the strain, tio, tio, tio, tiotix.

There³ is nothing better, or more pleasing, than to get wings. For example, if any of you spectators were winged, and then was weary of⁴ the tragic choruses, because he was hungry, he might fly away⁵ and go home and breakfast, and then, when filled, might fly back again to us. And if any Patroclides⁶ amongst you wants to go to stool, he need not exude in his breeches, but might fly away, and having fizzled, and having rested, might fly back again. And if there is any of you, who chances to be adulterous, and then sees the husband of the woman in the senators' seats,⁷ he might flutter his wings and fly away again from you, and then, having debauched her, might return⁸ from thence and take his seat again. Is it not worth any price to become winged? since Diitrephes⁹ with only wicker wings was chosen Phylarch, and then Hipparch, and then, from being nobody, is exceedingly prosperous, and is now a tawny horse-cock.¹⁰ [*Re-enter Pisthetairus*¹¹ and Euelpides.]

PISTH. At your quill-feathers. Do you know to what you are most like in your feathers? To a goose cheaply² painted by contract.

EUEL. And you to a blackbird³ with its sconce plucked in bowl-fashion.

PISTH. We have drawn these similes according to Æschylus⁴—"This we suffer not at the hands of others, but from our own feathers."

EPOPS. Come now, what ought we to do?

PISTH. In the first place to give some great and illustrious name to the city; then, after this, to sacrifice to the gods.

EUEL. I think so too.

EPOPS. Come, let me see, what shall the⁵ name of our city be?

PISTH. This pest here will give us trouble, unless we shall give him something and get clear of him. [To the priest.] You there,³ you at any rate have a buff jerkin and a coat; strip and give it to the wise poet! Take the jerkin! You appear to me to be altogether shivering with cold.

POET. (putting on the jerkin). This gift the dear Muse accepts not unwillingly; but learn in your mind a song of Pindar.

PISTH. The fellow will not take himself off from us.

POET. "For Straton wanders among the Scythian Nomades, who possesses not a woven garment; but inglorious went the jerkin without the coat."⁴ Understand what I mean!

PISTH. I understand that you wish to get the little coat. [To the priest.] Strip! for I must assist the poet. Take this here and depart!

POET. I depart, and I will go now and compose⁵ some verses

² All this is in ridicule of certain mendicatory passages in Pindar's odes; more especially that to Hiero on the foundation of a new city. See Donaldson's Pindar, p. 356, 357. Cf. Plato, Phædrus, p. 236, D. "ἐμὴν ῥεῖν, μή τι τῆς"; used in derision of the Dithyrambic poets, and Pindar especially, who used to heap together these Dorisms. Pindar, as the Scholiast remarks, frequently uses ἐμὴν, in petitions. Here the poet ridiculously subjoins ῥεῖν to ἐμὴν, as if the gift would benefit Pisthetairus as well." Blaydes.

³ Pisthetairus, though entertaining a supreme contempt for poets and their trumpery, yet bethinks him that the character of a Mæcenas is creditable to a great man. Accordingly he patronizes the Poet Laureate, but puts in requisition certain articles of apparel belonging to the priest; for, like a true reformer, his first act of confiscation is directed against the property of the church.

⁴ From Pindar. See Donaldson's Pindar, p. 357.

And as soon as I get to the town, I'll set to work, in this style upon your city: "O thou gold-enthroned, celebrate the trembling, the chilly. I have come to plains snow-beaten and having many passages. Huzza!"¹
And finish something, in this kind of way." Frere.

PISTH. Aye, by Jove, but now you've escaped these chills by getting this little coat. [Exit poet.] By Jove, I never expected² this misfortune, that this fellow would have heard of our city so quickly. [To the priest.] Go round again with the lustral water!

PRIEST. Let there be a solemn silence! [Enter a prophet with a book of oracles.]

PROPH. Do not sacrifice the goat.

PISTH. Who are you?

PROPH. Who? A prophet.

PISTH. Plague take you then!

PROPH. My good sir, hold not in contempt what is divine; for there is an oracle of Bacis³ which expressly alludes to your Cloud-cuckoo-town.

PISTH. Why, how then did you not utter these oracles before I founded this city?

PROPH. The god hindered me.

PISTH. Well, there's nothing like hearing the verses.⁴

PROPH. (reads). "But when wolves and hoary crows dwell in the same place between⁵ Corinth and Sicyon"—

"Und keh'r' Ich in meine Stadt zurück, so dicht' Ich so." Droysen.
 "Atque hinc digressus carmina hæc in urbem vestram componam."

PISTH. What then, pray, have I to do with Corinthians?¹

PROPH. Bacis by this hinted at the air.² [Reads.] "First sacrifice to Pandora³ a white-fleeced ram; and whoever comes first as an interpreter of my verses, to him give a clean garment and new sandals"——

PISTH. Are the "sandals" also mentioned in it?

PROPH. Take the book. [Reads.] "Give also a goblet and fill his hand with entrails."

PISTH. Is "give entrails" also mentioned in it?

PROPH. Take the book. [Reads.] "And if, O divine youth, you do this as I command, you shall become an eagle in the clouds;⁴ but if you do not give them, you shall not be either⁵ turtle-dove, eagle, or wood-pecker."

PISTH. Is this also mentioned there?

PROPH. Take the book.

PISTH. Your oracle, then, is in no wise similar to this which I copied out for my own use⁶ from Apollo's—"But when an impostor comes uninvited and troubles people who are sacrificing and desires to eat entrails, then it behoveth to beat him between the ribs"——

PROPH. I believe you're talking nonsense.

PISTH. (pretending to feel for his papers). Take the book.—"and spare not at all, neither eagle in the clouds, nor if⁷ he be Lampon, nor if he be the great Diopithes."

PROPH. Is this also mentioned there?

PISTH. (producing a horse-whip). Take the book. Will you not get out, with a plague to you? [Thrashes him.]

PROPH. Ah me, unhappy man! [Runs off.]

PISTH. Will you not therefore run away elsewhere and utter oracles? [Enter Meton, laden with mathematical instruments.]

PISTH. See!¹ here again's another pest! What, in turn, have you come to do? What's the nature of your design? What's the purpose, what the buskin, of your journey?

MET. I wish to survey the air for you, and to divide it into plots.

PISTH. By the gods, who of men art thou?

MET. Who I am? Meton,² whom Greece knows, and Colonus.

PISTH. Tell me, what are these things here?

MET. Measuring rods for the air. For the air, to wit, is in form³ wholly after the manner of an extinguisher, as far as may be; accordingly I, having applied this bent measuring rod from above, and having inserted a compass⁴—Do you understand?

PISTH. I understand it not.

MET. —will measure it with a straight measuring rod, having applied⁵ it, that your circle may become four-square; and in the middle of it there may be a market-place, and that there may be straight roads leading to it, to the very centre; and, like those of the sun, it being circular,⁶ straight rays⁷ may shine from it in every direction.

PISTH. Do you know that I love you? Now obey me and sneak off out of the way!

MET. But what is there to fear?

PISTH. As in Lacedæmon² strangers are driven out, and very frequent blows are set agoing throughout the city.

MET. Are you distracted by factions?

PISTH. No, by Jove, certainly not.

MET. How then?

PISTH. It is unanimously determined upon to thrash all the impostors.

MET. Then I would retreat.³

PISTH. Aye, by Jove, you had better, since I don't know if you can⁴ be too soon! for [producing the horsewhip] see! here they are pressing on close at hand!⁵ [Thrashes him.]

PISTH. Who is this Sardanapalus?

COM. I have come hither as a commissioner to your Cloud-cuckoo-town, having been elected by the bean.

PISTH. A commissioner? Who sent you hither?

COM. A sorry diploma¹ of Teleas.

PISTH. Are you willing, then, to take your salary and have no trouble, but depart?

COM. Aye, by the gods: at any rate I wanted to have stayed at home and sat in the assembly; for certain matters have been concerted by me for Pharnaces.²

PISTH. Take it and depart; see! here's your salary!
[Produces the horsewhip.]

COM. What's this?

PISTH. An assembly about Pharnaces. [Thrashes him.]

COM. I call you³ to witness that I am struck, who am a commissioner.

PISTH. Will you not be off?⁴ Will you not carry off your ballot-boxes? [Exit Commissioner.] Is it not shameful? They are already sending their commissioners to our city, before even sacrifice has been made to the gods. [Enter a hawk of decrees, reading select passages from his decrees.]

HAWK. I am a hawker of decrees, and have come hither to you to sell some new laws.

PISTH. What is it?¹

HAWK. "Let the Cloud-cuckoo-townials use the same measures, and weights, and decrees, as the Olophyxians"²——

PISTH. (shaking the whip). But you shall quickly use those which the Ototyxians³ use.

HAWK. Ho you! what ails you?

PISTH. Will you not carry off your laws? I'll show you bitter laws to-day.⁴ [Thrashes him off the stage.]

PRIEST. Let us depart from hence as quickly as possible to sacrifice the goat to the gods within. [Exeunt priest and Pisthetairus.]

CHO. Henceforth¹ shall all mortals sacrifice to me, the all-seeing and ruler of all, with votive prayers. For I view the whole² earth and protect the thriving fruits, slaying the race of animals of all sorts, which,³ lurking in the earth, and sitting upon trees, eat up⁴ with all-devouring jaws every fruit which grows from the bud; and I slay those which destroy sweet-smelling gardens with most hateful ruin; and all reptiles and noxious animals, as many as exist, are utterly destroyed with slaughter by my wings.

On this day, in truth, especially it is proclaimed, "If any of you kill Diagoras the Melian, he is to receive a talent; and if any one kill one of the dead tyrants, he is to receive a talent." Therefore we also now wish to make this proclamation here: "If any of you kill Philocrates the Sparrower,⁵ he shall receive a talent; but if any one bring him alive, four: because he strings the spinks together and sells them at the rate of seven for the obol; next, because he blows up the thrushes

This proclamation we wish to make : and if any of you is keeping birds shut up in his hall, we bid him let them go ; but if you do not obey, you in your turn, seized by the birds, and fast bound amongst us, shall decoy.

Happy is the race of winged birds, who in winter wear no cloaks ; neither on the other hand do the hot, far-shining beams of heat scorch us ; but I dwell in the bosom of the leaves of the flowery meadows, when the divine grasshopper,³ maddened with the noontide heat of the sun,⁴ utters its shrill melody. And I winter in hollow caves, disporting with the mountain nymphs ; and we feed upon the vernal, virgin, white-growing myrtle-berries, and the garden herbs of the Graces.⁵

We wish to say something to the judges⁶ about the victory, how many good things we will bestow upon them all, if they adjudge us victors, so that they receive gifts far superior to those of Paris. In the next place, in addition to this, you shall dwell, as it were, in temples; for we will roof your houses with pediments.¹ And if, when elected to a petty office, you then wish to filch any thing, we will give into your hands a swift little hawk. And if you dine any where we will send you crows. But if you do not adjudge us victors, forge for yourselves circular² coverings to wear, as the statues do; for whoever of you has not a covering, whenever you have on a white cloak, then in this case shall you especially give us satisfaction, being dunged upon by all the birds. [Re-enter Pisthetairus.]

PISTH. Our sacrifices, O birds, are favourable; but I wonder that no messenger has arrived from the walls, from whom we might³ hear what is going on there. But see! here's some one running, breathing Alpheus!⁴ [First messenger runs in.]

FIRST MESS. Where, where is he? where, where, where is he? where, where, where is he? where, where is Pisthetairus our Archon?

PISTH. Here am I!

FIRST MESS. The wall is finished building.

PISTH. You say well.

FIRST MESS. It is a most beautiful and most magnificent work; so that, by reason of the width, Proxenides the Bragsman⁵ and Theogenes might drive two chariots on the top of it past each other in opposite⁶ directions, with horses yoked to them, in size as large as the wooden one.⁷

PISTH. O Neptune! what a length! Who built it of such prodigious dimensions?

FIRST MESS. Birds, no one else; no Egyptian² bricklayer, no store-mason, no carpenter³ was present, but they with their own hands;⁴ so that I wonder. From Libya there had come about thirty thousand cranes, who had swallowed down stones for the foundation. These the cornrails chiselled with their bills. And other ten thousand storks were making bricks; and the lapwings and the other river-fowl bore water from below into the air.

PISTH. But who⁵ carried mortar for them?

FIRST MESS. Herons in hods.

PISTH. And how⁶ did they throw the mortar in?

FIRST MESS. This, good sir, was contrived even most cleverly. The geese dipping into it with their feet, as if with shovels, threw it into the hods.⁷

PISTH. What, then, could⁸ not feet do?

FIRST MESS. And, by Jove, the ducks, with their aprons on, carried bricks; and aloft flew the swallows with the trowel behind them, like little boys,¹ and the mortar² in their mouths.

PISTH. Why, then, should any one any longer engage hirelings? Come, let me see; what then? Who completed the wood-work of the wall?

FIRST MESS. Pelicans were very clever carpenters,³ who with their bills hewed out the gates; and the noise of them hewing was as in a dock-yard. And now all those parts have been furnished with gates, and have been bolted,⁴ and are guarded round about; are visited; are perambulated with the bell; in every direction guards are stationed, and beacons on the towers. But I will run out⁵ and wash myself; and do you now manage the rest yourself. [Exit first messenger.]

CHO. (to Pisthetairus). Ho you! what are you doing? Do you wonder that the wall has been built so soon?

PISTH. Aye, by the gods, do I, for it is worthy of wonder. In truth, they appear to me like to falsehoods. But see! here's a watchman running hither towards⁶ us as a messenger from those there, looking daggers! [Enter second messenger.]

SECOND MESS. Oh, oh! oh, oh! oh, oh!

PISTH. What is the matter?

SECOND MESS. We have suffered most dreadful things! for just now one of the gods from Jove flew into our air through the gates, having escaped the notice of the jackdaws, our guards who watch by day.

PISTH. Oh he that has perpetrated a dreadful and wicked deed!¹ Who of the gods is it?

SECOND MESS. We do not know; but that he had wings, this we do know.

PISTH. Ought you not then, pray, to have immediately sent patrol² after him?

SECOND MESS. Nay, we have sent thirty thousand light-horse hawks, and every one marches out that has crooked talons, kestrel, falcon, vulture, night-hawk,³ eagle; and the air is agitated with rushing and whirring wings,⁴ while the god is being sought; and he is not far off, but is some where here by this time. [Exit second messenger.]

PISTH. Therefore we must take slings and bows. Advance⁵ hither, every camp-servant! shoot! smite! Let some one give me a sling!

CHO.⁶ War is begun, war unspeakable, between me and the gods. But guard, each of you, the over-clouded air, which Erebus begot, lest any of the gods pass this way without your knowledge.⁷ Look round about, each of you, with circumspection; for now the sound of the flapping wings⁸ of the deity high in air is heard close at hand.

PISTH. Ho you! whither, whither, whither are you flying? Remain still! Be quiet! Stand there! Stop your flight! [Enter Iris.] Who are you? From what country? You ought¹ to say from whence in the world you are.

IRIS. I am from the Olympic gods.

PISTH. But what is your name, ship² or cap?

IRIS. Swift³ Iris.

PISTH. Paralus⁴ or Salamina?

IRIS. But what is this?

PISTH. Will not some falcon⁵ fly up and seize upon her?

IRIS. Seize upon me? What in the world is this pest?

PISTH. You shall smart for it richly.

IRIS. This affair is absurd.⁶

PISTH. Through what gates did you enter⁷ into our walls, O most abominable?

IRIS. I know not, by Jove, through what gates.

PISTH. Did you hear her,⁸ how she feigns ignorance? Did you apply to the jackdaw-commanders? Will you not speak? Have you a passport from the storks?

IRIS. What's the mischief?

PISTH. Did you not receive one?

IRIS. Are you in your right senses?¹

PISTH. And did no bird-commander being present affix his seal to you?

IRIS. No one, by Jove, affixed it to me, you wretch!

PISTH. And then, pray, under these circumstances do you fly through our foreign city and the atmosphere in silence?

IRIS. Why, by what other way should the gods fly?

PISTH. I know not, by Jove; certainly not by this. And even now justice is not done you.² Do you know this, that you would have been seized and put to death the most justly of all Irises, if you met with your deserts?

IRIS. But I am immortal.

PISTH. Yet, notwithstanding, you would have died. For, in truth, we shall be³ most strangely circumstanced, methinks, if we rule the rest, while you gods shall⁴ lead a life of intemperance, and shall not yet discern that you in turn must obey your superiors. But tell me, whither are you plying your wings?

IRIS. I? I am flying to men from my father, to bid them sacrifice to the Olympic gods, and to offer sheep upon the sacrificial altars,⁵ and to fill the streets with the steam of burnt sacrifices.⁶

PISTH. What do you say? To what⁷ gods?

IRIS. To what?⁸ to us, the gods in heaven.

But Dindorf has allowed several other instances of this inaccuracy to keep their places in his text. See vs. 608, supra. Nub. 664. Eccles. 761. Pax, 847.

IRIS. Why, who else is god?

PISTH. Birds are gods to men now, to whom they must sacrifice,¹ but, by Jove, not to Jove!

IRIS. O fool!² fool! Do not rouse the dreadful wrath of the gods, so that justice may not with the mattock³ of Jove overthrow your whole race with utter destruction,⁴ and a smoky flame reduce to ashes your body and the circuit of your house with Lycymnian⁵ bolts.

PISTH. Hear, you there! Cease from your bombast! Be quiet!⁶ Come, let me see! Do you fancy you are scaring some Lydian or Phrygian⁷ by saying this? Do you know, that if Jove⁸ shall annoy me further, I will reduce to ashes his palace and the mansion of Amphion⁹ with fire-bearing eagles, and will send Porphyryions¹⁰ to heaven against him, clad in leopard-skins, more than¹¹ six hundred in number? And verily once upon a time a single Porphyryion¹² gave him trouble! And if you shall annoy me in any way, I will turn up the legs of the messenger first and ravish Iris herself, so that you wonder how I, old man as I am, have such vigour, like three ships' beaks.

¹ See Krüger, Gr. Gr. § 56, 18, obs. 3. This construction has arisen in consequence of the verbal being equivalent in sense to δεῖ with an infinitive: θυτέον αὐτοῖς = δεῖ αὐτοὺς θυεῖν. Hence the dative of the agent is turned into the accusative. "Æschylus, I believe, says,

HER. All the people crown and honour you with this golden crown for your wisdom.

PISTH. I accept it. But why do the people thus honour me?

HER. O you who have founded a most illustrious city in the air! you do not know how great honour you receive amongst men, and how many lovers of this country you have. For before that you founded this city, all men at that time had a Spartan mania, wore long hair, fasted, were dirty, lived like Socrates, carried scytales;¹ but now, on the other hand, having turned about, they are bird-mad, and through pleasure, do every thing that birds do, imitating them exactly. In the first place, all of them in the morning used immediately to fly off together from their beds to pasture,² like us; and then they used to light upon the leaves³ together; and then they used there to feed upon their decrees. And so manifestly were they bird-mad, that even the names of birds were imposed⁴ upon many. A⁵ lame huckster was called "Partridge;" and Menippus'⁶ name was "Swallow;" and Opuntius',⁷ "Raven without an eye;" Philocles',⁸ "Lark;" Theogenes',

"Fox-goose;" Lycurgus,¹ "Ibis;" Chærephon's,² "Bat;" Syracosius,³ "Jay;" and Midias was there called "Quail," for he was like⁴ to a quail rapped upon the head by a quail-striker. And through their love of birds, they were all in the habit of singing songs, where some swallow was introduced, or duck, or some goose, or pigeon, or wings, or some small portion of a pinion was in it. Such is the state of things there. But I tell you one thing: more than ten thousand will come hither from thence in want of pinions and crooked-clawed ways; so that you have need of pinions from some quarter or other for the settlers.

PISTH. Then,⁵ by Jove, it is no longer our business to stand; but go you as quickly as possible, and fill the baskets and all the hampers with wings; and let Manes⁶ bring the wings out of doors to me, and I will receive those that approach.⁷ [Exit Herald.]

CHO. Any man may soon call our city a populous one.

PISTH. Let⁸ good fortune only attend it!

CHO. Love for my city prevails.

PISTH. (to Manes). I bid you bring them quicker.

CHO. For what advantage is there not in this city, for a man to settle in it? Wisdom, Love, ambrosial Graces, and the cheerful face of gentle-minded Tranquillity.⁹

CHO. Let some one bring quickly a basket of wings. And do you, again, stir him up, beating him in this way! for he is exceedingly sluggish, like an ass.

PISTH. Aye, for Manes is lazy.¹

CHO. Do you first arrange these wings in order; the musical ones together, and the prophetic ones, and the marine² ones; and then take care that you discreetly furnish them with wings, with an eye to each man's character.

PISTH. (to Manes). By the kestrels, I certainly will not any longer keep myself from you, perceiving you to be so lazy and sluggish. [Enter Parricide.]

PAR. "Would I might become a high-soaring eagle, so that I might³ fly over the billow of the barren azure sea."

PISTH. The messenger seems to be no lying messenger, for see! here comes one singing of eagles!

PAR. Heigho! There is nothing sweeter than to fly. Of a truth I am fond of the laws among the birds; for I am bird-mad, and fly, and wish to dwell with you, and long for your laws.

PISTH. What laws? for the birds' laws are many.

PAR. All; but especially because it is considered becoming among the birds to strangle and peck one's father.

PISTH. And, by Jove,⁴ we consider it very manly, too, if any beats its father, being a chick.

In a chicken, if he clapperclaws the old cock." Frogs.

PAR. Indeed I migrated hither on this account, and desire to strangle my father and possess all.

PISTH. But we birds have an ancient law in the tablets of the storks,¹ "When the father stork shall have reared and made² all the young storks able to fly, the young birds must in turn support their father."

PAR. Then, by Jove, I should³ come finely off by coming here, if I must support my father too.

PISTH. Not at all; for since, my good sir, you came well-disposed, I will furnish you with wings as an orphan bird.⁴ I will not give you bad advice, young man, but such as I myself learnt, when I was a child: "Strike⁵ not your father," but take⁶ this wing here, and this spur in the other hand, and imagine that this is a cock's crest which you have,⁷ and keep guard, serve in the army, support yourself by your pay, let your father live:—but since you are pugnacious, fly away to the towns on the borders⁸ of Thrace, and fight there.

PAR. By Bacchus, you appear to me to say well, and I will obey you.

PISTH. Then, by Jove, you will have sense. [Exit Paricide, and enter Cinesias singing some of his own compositions.]

PISTH. Cease singing, and³ tell me what you mean.

CIN. I wish to be furnished by you with wings, and fly up high in air and get from the clouds some new, air-tossed, and snow-beaten preludes.

PISTH. Why, could one get preludes from the clouds?

CIN. Aye indeed, our profession depends upon them;⁴ for our splendid dithyrambs⁵ are misty, and duskyish, and dark-gleaming, and high-flown. But you shall soon know by hearing them.

PISTH. Not I, certainly!

CIN. Aye, by Hercules, you shall; for I will wander through the whole air for you. "Ye forms⁶ of winged, ether-skimming, long-necked birds"—

PISTH. Why, don't you delight in being agitated by wings?

CIN. In this way have you treated the teacher of the Cyclic chorus, who am always much fought for by the tribes?¹

PISTH. Are you² willing, then, also to stay with us and teach for Leotrophides a chorus of flying birds, a Cecropid tribe?

CIN. It is evident you are laughing at me.³ Yet certainly will I not cease, be well assured of this, before I be furnished with wings and run through the air. [Exit Cinesias, and enter Informer singing.]

Bruckn makes it, “a chorus of flying birds of the Cecropid tribe.” I have taken Kerp. φ. as an apposition to χορὸν, making Leotrophides the Choregus. It might, indeed, be translated, “a chorus of flying birds, the Cecropid tribe of Leotrophides,” per Schema Colophonium, for he was of that tribe. PISTH. He appears to me to be singing the catch upon his garment, and seems to stand in need of no few swallows.²

INF. Who is he that furnishes with wings those that come hither?

PISTH. See here he is! but you should say what³ you want.

INF. I want wings, wings.⁴ Do not ask a second time.

PISTH. Do you intend to fly straight to Pellene?⁵

INF. No, by Jove, but I am an island-summoner and informer——

PISTH. O blessed thou in thy vocation!⁶

INF. ——and a pettifogger. Therefore I want to get wings and hurry round the cities round about to summon them.

PISTH. In what way will you summon more cleverly by the aid of wings?

INF. Not so, by Jove; but, in order that the pirates may not trouble me, I will return back again from thence with the cranes, having swallowed down many law-cases in the place of ballast.

PISTH. Why, do you follow this occupation? Tell me, do you inform against the foreigners, young as you are?

INF. Why, what must I do? for I know not how⁷ to dig.

PISTH. But, by Jove, there are other honest occupations, by which it more justly⁸ behoves a man of such an age to get his living, than to get up law-suits.

PISTH. Indeed I am now furnishing you with wings by my words.

INF. Why, how could you furnish a man with wings by words?

PISTH. All are set on the wing by words.

INF. All?

PISTH. Have you not heard, when fathers constantly talk to the youths in the barbers' shops¹ in this wise, "Diitrephes has set my son on the wing dreadfully by his words, so as to drive horses." And some other one says that his son has been set on the wing for tragedy, and become flighty in his mind.

INF. Then are they furnished with wings by words?

PISTH. Even so: for under the influence of words, both the mind is excited and the man is elated. Thus I wish to set you also on the wing by good words, and turn you to a legitimate occupation.

INF. But I am not willing.

PISTH. What, then, will you do?

INF. I will not shame² my race. The profession³ of an informer is that of my grandfather. Come, furnish me with swift and light wings, of hawk or kestrel, that when I have summoned the foreigners and then brought a charge against them here, I may then fly back⁴ again yonder.

INF. Ah me, miserable! you have got a whip.

PISTH. Nay, a pair of wings, with which I will make you to-day spin like a top. [Beats him.]

INF. Ah me, miserable!

PISTH. Will you not fly away from hence? Will you not vanish, the devil take you?² You shall soon have a bitter view of your justice-twisting rascality! [Flogs him off the stage.] Let us collect the wings and depart.

CHO. Many novel things, indeed, and wondrous have we flown to, and strange things have we seen! For there is a tree³ which grows out of the way, remote from courage,⁴ a Cleonymus, of no use, but besides,⁵ cowardly and big. This during spring always buds and—lays informations, but in winter, again, sheds—its shield. Again, there is a region, nigh to darkness itself, afar off in the solitude of lamps, where men take breakfast with and consort with the heroes, except in the evening. Then it were no longer safe to meet with them. For if any mortal were to meet with the hero Orestes by night, he would be stripped,⁶ being struck by him in all the PISTH. Why, are there any other barbarian gods beyond you?

PROM. Aye, for are there not barbarians, whence Execestides⁶ has his paternal Apollo?

PISTH. But what is the name of these barbarian gods?

PROM. What their name is? Triballi.⁷

PISTH. I understand: then that's where "You be hanged" came from.⁸

PROM. Most certainly. But one thing I tell you plainly. Ambassadors will come hither from Jove and from the Triballi beyond⁹ about a truce; but do you not make peace with them, unless Jove deliver up the sceptre to the birds again, and give you Basileia¹⁰ to have as your wife.

PISTH. The law does not permit him. This Neptune here, who now excites you, will be the first to⁶ lay claim to your father's property, saying that he is a brother born in wedlock. And I will now also recite to you the law of Solon: "Let not⁷ a bastard have the right of inheritance, if there be children born in wedlock; but if there should not be children born in wedlock, let the nearest akin by birth claim the property."

HERC. Then have I no claim to my father's property?

PISTH. Certainly not, by Jove! But tell me, did your father ever⁸ introduce you among your clansmen?⁹

HERC. He certainly did not introduce me. And indeed I have been wondering at it this long while.

PISTH. Why, pray, do you gape upwards, looking daggers? But if you side with us,¹⁰ I will appoint you sovereign; I will supply you with bird's milk.

HERC. Again also¹¹ you appear to me to speak justly concerning the damsel, and I deliver her up to you.

¹¹ Aristophanes, I am persuaded, wrote kai πάλας.

PISTH. (turning to Neptune). What, then, do you say?

NEPT. I vote against it.

PISTH. The whole matter rests with Triballus. [Addressing Triballus.] What do you say?

TRIB. I gie oop t' graidly lass an' gurt Basilanau tut' bird.¹

HERC. He says he gives her up.

NEPT. No, by Jove, he does not say he gives her up, unless he goes like the swallows.²

PISTH. Therefore he says he gives her up to the swallows.

NEPT. Do you two now make peace and come to an agreement, and I, since you two are decided, will hold my tongue.

HERC. (turning to Pisthetairus). We have decided to concede all the matters you mention. But come yourself with us to heaven, that you may receive Basileia, and every thing there.

PISTH. Then these have been killed in good time for the marriage-feast.

HERC. Would you, pray, that I remain here and roast these meats in the mean time, and you go?

NEPT. You roast the meats? You exhibit great gluttony. Will you not go with us?

HERC. I should³ be well disposed of, indeed! [Exit into the interior of the kitchen.]

PISTH. Come, let some one give me here a marriage-cloak.⁴ [Exeunt Pisthetairus, Neptune, and Triballus.]

MESS. O ye that fare well in every respect, O more than words may tell, O thrice happy winged race of birds, receive your sovereign in his wealthy mansion. For he is approaching,² such as no bright-shining star in the gold-gleaming dome of heaven has shone forth to view; nor has³ the far-shining brilliancy of the rays of the sun blazed forth such, as is the ineffable beauty of the woman he comes with, brandishing the thunderbolt, the winged weapon of Jove. And an indescribable odour penetrates to the height⁴ of heaven's vault—a beautiful sight! And gales of incense blow away⁵ the wreaths of smoke. But see! here he is himself! Come, it behoves us to commence a sacred, auspicious song of the goddess Muse. [Enter Pisthetairus and Basileia gorgeously apparelled.] riage most happy for this state! Great, great good fortune possesses the race of birds through this man. Come, receive him and his Basileia with wedding songs¹ and bridal odes.

Once upon a time the Fates, together with the gods, matched the great ruler of the lofty thrones to Olympian Juno with such a wedding song. "O Hymen, O Hymenæus!" And the blooming Love, with golden wings, guided the drawn-back reins, the groomsman of the nuptials of Jove and the happy Juno. "O Hymen, O Hymenæus."

PISTH. I am delighted with your hymns, I am delighted with your songs, I admire your words! Come now, celebrate both the thunder under the earth,² and the fiery lightning, and the dreadful bright thunderbolt of Jove himself.

CHO. O thou mighty golden blaze of lightning! O thou immortal fiery weapon of Jove! O ye thunders under the earth, loud-sounding, and rain-bringing at the same time, with which this man now shakes the earth!³ Through you being possessed of all, he also has Basileia the assessor of Jove.⁴ "O Hymen, O Hymenæus!"

PISTH. Follow now the marriage-train,⁵ O all ye winged tribes of associates! come to the region of Jove and to the nuptial couch. Stretch forth thy hand, O thou blessed one, and having taken hold of my wings, dance with me; and I will raise and lift thee up. [Exeunt dancing.]

'A fascinating little edition.'—Notes and Queries.

'A cheap, very comely, and altogether desirable edition.'—Westminster Gazette.

But a few years ago such volumes would have been deemed worthy to be considered éditions de luxe. To-day, the low price at which they are offered to the public alone prevents them being so regarded.'—Studio.

'Handy in shape and size, wonderfully cheap, beautifully printed from the Cambridge text, and illustrated quaintly yet admirably by Mr. Byam Shaw, we have nothing but praise for it. No one who wants a good and convenient Shakespeare—without excursions, discourses, or even too many notes—can do better, in our opinion, than subscribe to this issue: which is saying a good deal in these days of cheap reprints.'—Vanity Fair.

'What we like about these elegant booklets is the attention that has been paid to the paper, as well as to the print and decoration; such stout laid paper will last for ages. On this account alone, the 'Chiswick' should easily be first among pocket Shakespeares.'—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Best Practical Working Dictionary of the English Language.

WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

2348 PAGES. 5000 ILLUSTRATIONS.

NEW EDITION, REVISED THROUGHOUT WITH A NEW SUPPLEMENT OF 25,000 ADDITIONAL WORDS AND PHRASES.

The Appendices comprise a Pronouncing Gazetteer of the World, Vocabularies of Scripture, Greek, Latin, and English Proper Names, a Dictionary of the Noted Names of Fiction, a Brief History of the English Language, a Dictionary of Foreign Quotations, Words, Phrases, Proverbs, &c., a Biographical Dictionary with 10,000 names, &c., &c.

Dr. MURRAY, Editor of the 'Oxford English Dictionary,' says :—'In this its latest form, and with its large Supplement and numerous appendices, it is a wonderful volume, which well maintains its ground against all rivals on its own lines. The 'definitions,' or more properly, 'explanations of meaning' in 'Webster' have always struck me as particularly terse and well-put; and it is hard to see how anything better could be done within the limits.'

Professor JOSEPH WRIGHT, M.A., Ph.D., D.C.L., LL.D., Editor of the 'English Dialect Dictionary,' says :—'The new edition of "Webster's International Dictionary" is undoubtedly the most useful and reliable work of its kind in any country. No one who has not examined the work carefully would believe that such a vast amount of lexicographical information could possibly be found within so small a compass.'

Rev. JOSEPH WOOD, D.D., Head Master of Harrow, says :—'I have always thought very highly of its merits. Indeed, I consider it to be far the most accurate English Dictionary in existence, and much more reliable than the "Century." For daily and hourly reference, "Webster" seems to me unrivalled.'
